Glances at the World.

Reform in New York, if current reports are true, has taken a singular and surprising turn. The country at large took great interest in the recent election, believing that if Mr. Low, and the ticket nominated with him, were elected, New York would be purged of Tammany corruption, and the city given into the hands of men who would honestly administer the laws. The ticket was known as "a reform ticket," and Mr. Low was accepted, as he has been for many years, as the soul of honor. But if reports are true, there existed a secret understanding that if the reform ticket was elected instead of Tammany methods, whatever they are, there would be a "liberal construction" of the laws. This, if successful, would relieve saloon keepers and others of the payment of large sums to secure exemption from arrest. It was further understood, so rumor has it, that the reform candidates favored the opening of the saloons on Sunday from one o'clock P. M. to late in the evening. This latter rumor seems to be well founded, and is advocated by a few leading ministers of the city: but neither Mr. Low nor his city attorney can allow anything of the kind until the law is changed. And the sentiment of the State is overwhelmingly opposed to such an innovation. Open saloons on Sunday, as everybody knows, is the source of evil, and we are obliged to confess that it is a strange sort of reform that encourages anything of the kind. We do not believe that the rumor concerning the "liberal construction" of the laws, so as to allow evil doing, has any foundation in fact. But, if so, the city will not be worsted, for nothing can be worse than Tammany. We do not expect to see New York redeemed from all corruption, but we do expect improvement that will justify our faith in Mr. Low and his associates. We shall watch with great interest, for, as goes New York, so will go all our leading cities.

The case of Admiral Schley continues to agitate the public mind. It has been the chief topic of conversation. The whole country has been stirred afresh, and to-day is in a ferment. The finding of the majority of the Court of Inquiry which condemned the Admiral has been approved by the Secretary of the Navy, and will go down in the official history of the government as the verdict of the Court. The minority report made by Admiral Dewey, it seems, made no impression on the Secretary. His verdict was cast aside as worthless, and worse than worthless, for it called forth a rebuke by the Secretary for expressing an opinion on a point which, it is declared, was not before the Court. Fuel has been added to the fire by the Secretary of War, who administered a severe reprimand to General Miles, the head of the army, for daring to express concurrence with Admiral Dewey's report rather than that of the two judges who condemned Admiral Schley. On the other hand, some consolation has been afforded the friends of the injured Admiral by the dismissal of E. S. Maclay from the service of the navy yard at New York. This man Maclay, by charging Admiral Schley with cowardice, brought the whole trouble to a head, and should have been dismissed from the service as soon as his charges were made public. The Administration may have pleased Admiral Schley's enemies by rebuking Admiral Dewey and General Miles, but has by no means pacified Admiral Schley's friends by dismissing Maclay from the petty office which he held. The Administration is trying hard to quiet the excitement, and "close the incident." Whether it will succeed or not remains to be seen. If Congress takes up the matter, the end is not in sight.

It was given out last week that the Pope of Rome had made overtures to our government with a view to installing a United States representative at the Vatican. This is the same old story in a new form. Heretofore, if any effort of the sort has been made, it was to establish diplomatic relations by each having a representative at the court of the other. We do not know that anything of the kind was ever actually proposed. We have no doubt, though, that the matter has been suggested, and the project abandoned, because repugnant to the spirit of our government and to public sentiment. But new conditions have arisen, and Romanists would now seek in an indirect way to do that which it could not do directly. It is said that the vast property interests of the Roman Catholic Church in the Philippines and Cuba and Porto Rico demand special consideration; hence a representative of the United States should be constantly on hand at the Vatican. Of course. And that would call for a representative of the Pope to be sent to Washington. That done, the recognition of the Pope as a temporal ruler would be complete. And that is what is desired above all things. This last rumor is also said to be false. But whether true or false, let it be known that such a ruse will not win. The Pope of Rome is not a temporal prince, and has no stronger claims to recognition as a ruler than the authorities of any other church on earth. The people, however, must keep awake, else some day the Roman Catholics will carry their point.

It is declared that the most momentous question before the people of our country is "the future of arid America." The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "Its dimensions may be judged from the fact that one-third the area of the United States, exclusive of Alaska and the islands, is still public domain, and that fully nine-tenths of this is in the arid region. These arid lands, if there could be properly applied to them the water now going to waste in that region, are conservatively estimated to be capable of supporting a population greater than the whole nation now contains." Properly irrigated, these lands can be made immensely valuable. How to dispose of them and secure water privileges, so as to make the farmers land owners instead of tenants, and at the same time secure water rights against capitalistic control, is the problem. Congress is now considering the matter, and though difficult, it is hoped that wise conclusions will be reached. If these lands can be made cheap and profitable, we may look for a large population and great prosperity where now there is nothing but desert waste.

LETTER FROM REV. G. D. PARKER.

Through the kindness of Bishop Keener, we have the pleasure of publishing a letter from Rev. G. D. Parker, who is one of our missionaries in Brazil. It is of great interest, and we are sure our readers will enjoy it, and thank us for printing it.

Rio de Janeiro Brazil Nov. 27, 1901.

Bishop J. C. Keener, New Orleans, La —

MY DEAR BISHOP: Christmas greetings to you and yours from the "Land of the Southern Cross!" I can imagine how busy the city is preparing for the holidays. Here one would never know that this joyous season is so near, as neither in the shops nor in the homes of the people are there any indications of festivities. Our missionaries are arranging a surprise for the Sunday-school children, and on Christmas we will have what is called ont here a "festa," with toys and "doces" (sweets) for the children. Two classes are taught in English, the rest in Portuguese; the Scriptore reading, prayers, hymns, review, etc., are all in the native language. There are four classes for adults, and it is delightful to see these men and women, many of them well advanced in years and unable to read, sitting at the feet of their teachers as students of the Word. At eleven o'clock the native pastor, an earnest, active consecrated man, preaches to the native congregation; at noon I occupy the same pulpit and preach to the English-speaking people, the others having been dismissed. There is quite a colony of English, Scotch and American people here engaged in business or professional pursuits; our English-speaking membership in the Methodist Church, commonly called the American Church, numbers over one hundred, and as the minister of the Anglican Church is ill, ours is the only service in English in this great city of seven hundred and fifty thousand souls.

The evening service, Epworth League, and other meetings are all conducted in Portuguese. One notices a majority of men in the congregations. Last Sunday evening fully two-thirds of those in attendance and were men, many of them young, some very old, and others with their entire family. A spirit of reverence pervades the sanctuary; each one as he comes in bows his head in silent prayer before entering into the service. How eagerly and attentively they listen to the old, old story and how their faces beam with joy as the Word falls in hungry, sorrowing hearts! I attend all of the services in the native language to become accustomed to its sound and also to become acquainted with the people, their manners and customs; this gives me a good opportunity to notice the effect of the gospel upon them as it is preached.

The missionaries extended a most cordial welcome, and have been exceedingly kind to me, finding time in their busy lives to help me in every possible way to feel at home and become settled. I have found a most pleasant home with Bro. J. L. Kennedy and his delightful family. He is presiding elder of this district, which includes a territory one-third the size of Louisiana; he is also editor of the church paper and Sunday-school literature. The school supported by the Woman's Board, and under the direction of Miss L. Glenn, is just closing one of the most successful sessions in its history; it has outgrown the building now used, and it is to be hoped that during the Summer vacation, which begins this week, adequate and comfortable accommodations can be found. Miss Maide Smith and a corps of native teachers assist Miss Glenn. Miss Helen Johnston, who came in July from Louisiana, is studying the language as well as assisting in the English branches in this school. Miss Willie Bowman is doing splendid work in distributing Bibles, tracts, etc., reading the Scriptures from house to house, visiting the sick, poor, etc. The women live very secluded lives, and, owing to the peculiar customs, it is impossible for the male missionary to do work among them.

In my short stay of less than three weeks I have seen some sickening and heart-rending sights among these poverty-stricken, priest ridden people. Last week I visited one of the famous shrines called "Our Lady of Copacatana," which is situated on a bold promontory of solid rock overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. One of the rooms in the ancient church is literally filled with plaster or wax casts of limbs, etc., left there by persons who claim to have been healed of various diseases. The truth that is many persons coming to this sea-side suburb of Rio and taking the surf baths are benefited by the waters; they attribute it all to "Our Lady," and the church reaps the reward.

Rio is a city of beggars; I have never seen as many in any one place as I have since coming here. They are sent out by the church, many of them, and are given a percentage, a small one, no doubt, on their collections. The other day two of these collectors of alms, one begging for the Virgin, the other for the Holy Spirit, invaded each others territory; a free fight ensued, during which the staffs representing the objects for which they begged, were used on each other's heads. In some places the Virgin is represented as a negress, and the patron saint of the negroes is the black Benedictine. I must not weary you further with my descriptions. I started out to wish you and your family much joy at Christmas-tide, and find that I've written a long letter. . . . The weather is delightful, and has been ever since I reached here; the intense heat usually is felt in December and January. I trust that you will continue to pray for me, that God may use me to help extend a pure gospel in this beautiful land. With much love, I beg leave to remain,

Yours in Christ,

GEO. D PARKER.

REFLECTIONS ON CONFERENCE.

A man who has attended Methodist Conferences continually for thirty-five years will not have any trouble in detecting many changes—some of them evidently for the better, and are avidences of progress; other things the writer hopes will prove of the same character, but some impress him as only portending evil, if they continue.

It may be that some of us are "moss-backs" and "old fogies," not able to keep pace with or to appreciate progress, but, if so, it is not because no effort has been made to anthuse and march at the head of the procession in what has transpired. It has been a fruitless effort to reconcile the ideas of this scribe with the idea of having all the introductory services each morning monopolized by foreigners, alien in their church relations, unacquainted with our usages and interests, and one of them a woman, and in a Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Their being devoted and successful missionaries does not by any means relieve the difficulty. Probably, to have had them before the Conference, and especially in the missionary anniversary, would have been very well; but why they should have been put forward, as was the case, seems to me to savor of mere sentimental gush, and productive of no real benefit—in fact, it seems to me their entire work and claims were positively weakened by it. It may be the writer's fogyism, but he does hope hereafter the Conference may be considered competent to work its own affairs, and that the Bishop and some of the old soldiers in our own rank may be allowed to conduct all our devotional exercises.

It was said in a public speech by a prominent youthful brother, who has weathered few storms and fed in fat places, 'Every man makes his own appointment." Perhaps, as a rule, and in the best sense, this is true; yet it should not be said without due qualification. If it was meant to say, Every man, as compared with others in a Methodist Conference, and in all other compacts operated by human beings, has all the consideration due him, and occupies a place for which he is fitted, it is false. There are men exalted above merit, and men far more worthy pushed to the wall and forced into despair. Some old writer has said, "In this world servants ride and princes walk." This is true, though it may be, and without doubt is so, in a less degree, in a Methodist Conference, as well as in other places. The man who has friends at court may feel quite sure of his place, irrespective of comparative merit over his brethren. The man who is gifted with self-possession, and has a disposition to contend for what he considers his rights, will often secure recognition and the better places, while a more modest man of far greater ability, and as good working qualities, will find himself with an appointment somebody else made for him. It will be one certainly in which he had no voice in making, and one in which the comparative merits between himself and the brother just mentioned were not considered when a choice between them is made. It is a fact that many brethren have been discouraged by seeing themselves overlooked and inferior men favored, and have unconsciously sunk into inferiority as a result, and have thus had themselves fitted for inferior places by the very authorities that should have recognised their worth and have placed them where they belonged. May it not be understood by this that it is intended to disparage our system, for, as compared with others, it is by far the best, both to test men and properly place them, and it has in it power of developing and cultivating all that is in men as none other has. Neither is it intended to criticise the men in authority, for, as a class, they are as wise, true and noble as any the world has ever produced, and make, perhaps, as few mistakes; yet it is folly to say that either the system is perfect, or the men that operate it are. This would be equivalent to papal infallibility.

It was said by the Bishop that every preacher should accept his appointment, and go to it gladly and joyfully; and others made similar statements. I do not quote the Bishop verbatim, but substantially. I have often heard similar statements made by men who had very little of the hard experience of members of other brethren. Such statements always impress me with unpleasant feelings, because they are false, and can never be experienced by a human being when he has sore trials to face, and great hardships for his wife and children. To say every man should accept his appointment in the spirit of loyalty, and be governed by a wise prudence, is correct; yet, when this is not the case, there is very little charity in the manner the suffering man is often treated by more fortunate brethren. The very best may have been done for him possible; yet, if he has hardship and complaint, show him sympathy and kindness.

Some things cropped out that indicated that the secret machinations of the politicians of the day have in some measure found their way into the Conference. Men and measures canvassed in secret, and combinations formed to effect designed ends. This ought not to be. It is not the spirit of Christ. Let everything that concerns the men or the church come freely to the light, that all may see. There is apparent danger of episcopal tyranny in the conduct of enterprises and the action of Conferences. A Bishop should never allow himself to be made a party to the private plans and purposes of any set of men, or be led to give his influence to any enterprise merely concerning the Conference where there may be difference of sentiment. It is not seemly for him to deny the request of a brother for information as to the source of documents offered in the Conference proceedings, or to attempt to enforce his views in the control of individuals or the Conference in its deliberations. It is not intended to imply that these things were intentionally done, but the sacredness of the episcopal office should be so closely guarded as to keep it clear from appearances of arbitrary power or intention. VOX.

THE NEED OF TRAINING-SCHOOLS.

If there is one missing link in our educational system that is more needed than another, it seems to me it is that of thorough, well-regulated training schools for boys and for girls. There are many such schools in the North and East, and a few in some States in the South; but I am sure that every college president, or teacher in a college, in our State will agree with me in saying there is a great scarcity of these schools in Mississippi, especially of a religious nature. Seeing the need in our work for the girls, we find it necessary to spend much of our time and efforts in preparatory work.

In addition to this work among the girls, we have been urged by many of our citizens and patrons to open in Meridian a training-school for boys, where our young men and boys may be thoroughly trained for entrance to higher institutions, as well as for commercial pursuits and business walks of life. To this end the Stone College property has been purchased, and is being repaired and put in good condition for occupancy by next September. This property was formerly owned by the Baptists, in which they ran a college for young ladies. It was closed about three years ago, and has been vacant since that time. It is located about a mile from town, and three quarters of a mile from the end of the electric car line. It has a large dormitory, recitation-rooms, large chapel, dining-room, kitchen, servants' houses, barns, etc., and has ten acres of ground, the buildings being located on a hill in the center of the campus. It is a beautiful site, healthy location, has an abundance of fine water, and is an ideal place for a school for boys. It is greatly encouraged by the citizens and business men of Meridian and East Mississippi as supplying a long-felt want of a good, thorough training-school, where God is put first in all things, and where they will always be under a good, safe, and religious influence.

Besides this, it will be a great help to East Mississippi Female College, in that it will enable boys and girls of the same family to attend a boarding school in the same town in a religious atmosphere, where they can see each other occasionally, and yet not have the cares thrown together as in co-educational institutions, the schools being at least a mile and a half apart. This school can be a feeder to Millsaps College, Vanderbilt University, or other higher institutions of learning.

We are praying that the Lord will send us a man full of the Holy Ghost, who has a little money, executive ability, and plenty of practical business and financial sense, who feels led of the Lord to take charge of such a school.

If any man feels thus led of the Lord, let him write to us for further information. We have been met on every hand with enthusiastic support of business men of this section, and already we have had the promise of quite a number of students for the opening next September.

What Our Editors Say.

MODERN ATHLETICS.

We have known something of college life in the East and the West—on both sides of the Mississippi—and our memory (and experience) goes back to days when as yet the great Civil War had not gloomed upon us, and long before the present civilization had so wonderfully and thoroughly refined it; as now, yet in all our experience in the past, we know of no brutality compared with some exhibitions in the present. We have known boys caught in the old fashioned "booby trap," or taken on the time-honored and orthodox "snipe hunt," or "salted down" if they were a little too "fresh," but beyond such harmless pranks as these, which could neither hurt nor humiliate, we never knew the toughest college boy to venture. No doubt there was much of depravity (even as much as now) in the average student, but it did not manifest itself in inflicting pain or shame on others. And the lower elements were always under control of the older and better or wiser men through a wholesome regard for their physical prowess or moral force. Of course, it will be thought and possibly said, that we are behind the times and out of sympathy with the age; and if sympathy with the age means the indorsing of the enormities to which we have alluded, we confess it and rejoice to be so esteemed. We are prejudiced against it in whole and in part, and would be ashamed if we were not. And our prejudice is so extreme that we are prepared to say we (personally) would not patronize any school where such things are tolerated nor could we conscientiously recommend it to others, as we believe the danger to young life is too great to be compensated by any seeming advantage.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

The reports of the Conferences are not all in, but there is no doubt that we have, this year, gathered a good harvest. The increase of members will be large—larger, we believe, than for any year of a decade past. And this increase is testified as substantial by the general improvement in financial affairs of the church, and especially the advance in the missionary collections. It shows that the heart of the church has been reached, and, what everyone should expect, that an increased effort for the salvation of souls at home is reflected in greater missionary activity. There is another feature about this prosperity very noticeable and very gratifying. The pastors have held their own revivals. The assistance they have had was from other pastors. This method of work is absolutely necessary if the church is to retain confidence in her own appointed and lawful shepherds. It is a promise of larger victories in the future that the banners of our Zion are being restored to the hands of her proper leaders.—Arkansas Methodist.

THE PREACHING NEEDED.

A chief error of our day is the undue estimate placed on what is called broad and profound preaching. At its best, such discourse is not calculated to produce the results which should be sought by God's ambassadors to men. At its worst (an effort to be profound which is only obscure and pointless), it is enough to bring tears to the angels beholding such waste of opportunity. Practical preaching—that which teaches men how to live—is far better and far more effectual. "Show my people their sins," is a command of the Most High who, however, never commanded broad platitudes of any prophet. But the highest pulpit work is reached when preaching Jesus to men and in leading men to the salvation which is with the peace that passes understanding. Showing Christ to men, and bringing men to Christ—these are the Alpha and Omega of the gospel. Paul sums up his message as witnessing to "Jesus and the resurrection." And his fellow apostles confined themselves to similar proclamations of the truth. . . . Let us study Christ and men above all other subjects. Let us learn of him and them by communion with our Lord and association with our fellows. Then let our messages reveal him whom to know is life eternal, and let them be so uttered that men will understand and acquaint themselves with him and be at peace.—Southern Christian Advocate.

A SILLY DOCTRINE.

The silliest and most pernicious doctrine that was ever proclaimed in the ears of sensible men is that because the whisky seller is essentially a lawbreaker, and will not obey the statutes enacted by society for its own protection, therefore the proper thing to do is to compromise with him, to kneel before him, to let him have his way in part, begging him, meantime, to be at least moderately decent. Why not make similar terms with thieves and murderers? The thing to do with all who trample law under foot is to throttle them, to scourge them, to make life so hard and bitter for them that they will cease to do evil and learn to do well.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

THE COMING DAILY.

Brother Ivey, of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, expects to see the time when daily newspapers will not dare to publish advertisements of whisky, etc. Happy will be the land when the day arrives. He says: "We expect to see the day when a newspaper will no more dare to advertise whisky than to use it as a premium or editorially commend its use. Would that that day were here. No newspaper which stands for the higher good of the people can afford to endorse in the act of advertising the terrible traffic."

SOME REAL INCIDENTS WHICH DID NOT HAPPEN.

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

The protracted meeting at "Brushy Fork" Baptist Church closed after a large number had responded to the appeal of Pastor Smith for church membership. Brother Smith was a zealous shepherd, and true to the landmarks of his church, but unfortunately for some of his tenets and practices, he was small in stature, physically weak, and weighed only about one hundred and twenty pounds avoirdupois.

Amongst the candidates who had presented themselves for church membership was Miss Matilda Jones, an estimable character, but unfortunately for Brother Smith, she was large and chubby, and tipped the scales at two hundred and seventy-six pounds.

As the day had been appointed for the baptizing (the next Sunday), and as no other Baptist preacher was nearer than forty miles, Brother Smith was considerably concerned over the baptism of this particular candidate. In his heart he secretly wished for a moment that she had gone to the Methodists. But as immersion was the only true baptism, and as the Lord had commanded everybody to be immersed, he knew that there was a way of some kind over the obstacles.

The next day after the meeting closed the following conversation might have been heard between Pastor Smith and Miss Jones at the home of the latter:

"Sister Jones, I called in order to speak with you concerning the baptism. The time, as you know, has been appointed for to-morrow afternoon, and—them—uh—as—uhm—as I was about to say—uhem—"

"What is the matter, Brother Smith?"

"You are so very stout—that is to say, I am so much smaller than you are—and I am physically weak—it will be necessary for you to help me in the administration of your baptism."

"What would you have me do, Brother Smith?"

"It is impossible for me to dip you into and lift you out of the water, as is customary with Baptist preachers in baptizing. What I will you to do is, after we are in the water waist deep, and after I repeat the formula ('I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost'), I will place my hand on your shoulder, and you must squat, or dip yourself—your head and shoulders."

"But, Brother Smith, will it be valid if I am baptized without the preacher himself plunging me into and lifting me out of the water?"

"Most assuredly, Sister Jones. Our theologians are all agreed that 'pressing down' is as valid as dipping by—"

"I am fearfully afraid of water, Brother Smith, and I fear if I myself have to do the—oh, me, will the water strangle me? will a snake bite me?"

"Not at all; you must take up your cross and be brave. Remember that after I repeat the formula, you are to squat yourself down suddenly, but be certain you get your head and shoulders entirely under. The Lord bless you. Good-bye until to-morrow afternoon, and be certain to be on time."

The hour arrived for the baptizing, and a large concourse of people had assembled on either bank of "Brushy Creek" to witness the proceedings. A good deal of anxiety had been secretly felt for Brother Smith by many of his members anent the baptism of Miss Matilda. The truth was, that alone accounted for the presence of a large number who otherwise would have stayed away.

Brother Smith, notwithstanding his size, handled with dexterity and credit to himself the most of the candidates, and all had been baptized except Miss Matilda. There was a perfect hush amongst the multitude, and everybody was on tiptoe of marked attention.

Brother Smith had led the candidates into and out of the water one at a time, on account of the coolness of the weather (it was a day in the latter part of September), not wishing to expose them unnecessarily. Seizing Miss Jones by her right hand, they descended into the water. (Brother Smith having made thirty-six trips backwards and forwards with the eighteen candidates, the water by this time was considerably stirred with leaves, trash, mud, etc.) They had proceeded but a short distance—about knee-deep—when Miss Matilda slipped and fell. Brother Smith—poor fellow—was so weak and exhausted from his former exercise he could not prevent the mishap. He helped her up as best he could, mentally wishing that he had then repeated the formula; but as her head and shoulders did not go under, the baptism would not have been valid. Miss Matilda gave expression to several ejaculations, but a few encouraging words whispered by Brother Smith reassured her, and in a few moments more they reached water of the necessary depth. Placing his left hand upon her right shoulder, he deliberately began, "I baptize you ('Oh, Brother Smith, how did—') in the name of the Father ('e-e-e-ah-oh'), and of the Son ('I'll certainly be strangled'), and of the Holy Ghost. Squat, Sister Jones." But Sister Jones failed to squat. There was a titter from several directions on either bank, and several bad boys actually laughed aloud. The face of Brother Smith and of the deacons present showed much displeasure that any should be so irreverent, but just then was not the time to administer castigations. A hurried whispered conversation followed between Brother Smith and Miss Jones, and again the preacher's hand was raised. "I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." He again pressed her shoulder, and this time she squatted suddenly, and raised herself up quickly, little the worse from the transaction. Several, however, afterwards said she failed to dip herself entirely, the top of her head not having gone under. Brother Smith also doubtless, as observed, but he did not have the heart to have her try again. Together they waded out of the water, and the bad boys and few irreverent Methodists who were present departed in a spirit of hilarity.

THE DRIFT OF SENTIMENT.

BY REV. G. W. BANKS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: This seems to be a good time to "ring" a little ink, all of Tennessee and Kentucky being wrapped in snow as it is, so that pastoral work is next to impossible. Impossible, not because we can not go, or are unwilling to go, but because the pastors are entirely too cold to enter. When will our people let us into the family rooms? Another reason why it is a good time to throw ink, is that this is General Conference year, and many things demand consideration. It looks like a great church meeting in its law-making body every four years, would, after a while, settle everything; but the Legislatures of the State never quit making laws, nor can the church. The process is twofold. Some things have to be done, and others have to be undone. The one is about as difficult as the other. A church makes a great mistake when she passes a heavy, inactive law—one that will not work. She had better have no law than an impracticable one. The tendency now is to remand the whole matter of licensing, passing character, advancing, etc., the local preacher, to the Quarterly Conference, where, in our opinion, the matter ought have rested all the while. It is not always wise for us to throw aside what our fathers found to be best.

Evidently the presiding-elder question will agitate the coming session. The enlargement of the districts looked to the diminishing of the number of men in this office. The resolutions that now are being offered in the Conferences, asking for a limit to be placed on the term of years that he shall serve, looks toward the disparagement of the place as such, and what is more significant still, is the reduction in the number of delegates elected from this department in the recent election of delegates. We have always thought that the presiding elder was indispensable to our work; that while, as active pastors, we can do without him fifty-one weeks in the year, but, as preachers and layman, we were obliged to have him the other one week—the week of appointment-making. One of two things, in our judgment, will have to be done. We will have to have the strength of the Conference in the presiding eldership, or we will have to get along without it. When you subject the appointment of strong men, who are themselves a success, to the advice of men who are not a success, or who are not the equal of the men whom they represent, the matter will breed contention and friction.

Some of the Conferences have expressed the opinion that quite a number should be elected to the episcopacy; some say three, others four. Whatever is necessary for a permanent advance should be done, and nothing else. After all, we should remember that we can not legislate the Holy Spirit into the church. "This kind comes only by prayer," and, it may be, fasting, too.

The late session of the Memphis Conference was more disturbed than usual. For some time men have been transferred to us without any being taken out. This has resulted in crowding the Conference almost to suffocation. The transfer system, if practiced at all, should be well watched, so that the circulation may be even and regular. Two districts paid in full for missions last year. This is the first time that such a thing has happened in this Conference. This was partly due to the fact that these districts were served by aggressive men as presiding elders, and partly on account of the fact that they were well manned by the pastors. The time is now here when none but an aggressive man can succeed in our work. The Epworth League is to be kept alive, the Sunday-school is to be reorganized, the finances of the church are to be kept up, and many other things are coming up daily for adjustment.

Thou who art misunderstood, be resigned! God sees. Thou who art forgotten, have hope! God remembers.—Selected.

AN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

BY REV. T. L. COKER.

A Methodist Annual Conference is an unknown quantity, especially in its relation to the preachers who wait patiently for their appointments. No man knows what a day may bring forth; neither does any man know what an Annual Conference may bring forth. One or two men in each presiding elder's district may have to move by limitation, necessitating the move of as many more, and in order to adjust the men to the works, many more changes are made necessary. At our last Mississippi Annual Conference there were seventy-six changes, and it was not a good year for changes, either.

How different would be the feelings of the preachers who are changed without any intimation from those in authority if they could believe God was in it all! But would it not require a faith bordering on an extravagant credulity to believe God makes all our appointments? How can we believe God absolutely runs the cabinet and makes the appointments, in the face of all we hear after the Conference is over, when men begin to tell how everything was done and why it was done? How can we believe God works through one presiding elder to undo the work of another presiding elder, everything being equal? While no man can intelligently believe God makes all the appointments, we can all believe he overrules them all; and if we love him, will make them, though "disappointments" work for our good. If every preacher would go to his work under the inspiration of this truth, he would succeed in spite of the real or imaginary injustice shown him by the appointing power, for if he loves God, and the Bible is true, all things, which includes his appointment, will work together for his good.

At present I am not able to see the wisdom of my appointment. Why I should not have held the pastorate in connection with the presidency of the college, which, by hard work and the support the pastorate gave, was just getting on its feet again, no one is able to see. The Board of Stewards and the presiding elder thought it best for the two to remain together another year, but "the powers that be" thought otherwise, and so I am left only with the college. This, of course, leaves me free to canvass and hold meetings whenever and wherever there is an open door.

If the brethren will give me revival work to do, and thus enlarge my field of labor, it will add much to my college work, and introduce me into a long and much coveted line of ministerial labor. Perhaps this is why my appointment to the college only was made. Be that as it may, God helping, I am determined to make a first-class college for the daughters of our preachers and people, and at the same time aid my brethren in bringing lost souls to Christ.

In conclusion, allow me to give the address of the Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension: L. S. Jones, president, Port Gibson, Miss.; J. T. Abney, secretary, Rocky Springs; T. A. Holloman, treasurer, Phœnix.

Those wishing blanks, address J. T. Abney, and those wishing to remit money, address T. A. Holloman.

ROGER WILLIAMS DID NOT IMMERSE, AND WAS NOT IMMERSED.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Our good friend and brother, "A Circuit Rider," in a postscript headed, "Some Historical Data" (ADVOCATE, Dec. 19), to his series of very interesting and usually accurate letters on the mode of baptism, etc., lets his pen do violence to history in the following paragraph: "The American Baptists originated thus in 1639. Ezekiel Holliman, a layman, immersed Roger Williams, and Roger Williams returned the compliment by immersing Ezekiel Holliman."

The facts of history are these: Roger Williams was an eccentric clergyman of the Established Church of England, became dissatisfied with his baptism received in infancy, and rejected infant baptism in toto, and became an Anabaptist, and not an immersionist. As a clergyman, he re-baptized by affusion, and not by immersion, Ezekiel Holliman, and then Ezekiel Holliman re-baptized Williams in like manner, and the two re-baptized by affusion ten others, and the twelve organized a Believers' Baptist Church, or an Anabaptist Church. About ten years later (1639) this church (or "religious society") became influenced by Immersionists from England, and began to immerse. Roger Williams withdrew from fellowship with them, and in a few years died a member of no church whatever.

Dr. Armitage, in his pleasantly written and profusely illustrated "History of the Baptists," intimates the possibility of Williams and Holliman not having been baptized by immersion; and Dr. Whitsitt, in his book, "A Question in Baptist History," proves beyond all contradiction that immersion was not made use of by Williams and Holliman in re-baptizing each other. "A Circuit Rider" evidently had not read Dr. Whitsitt's book, which forever upsets the theory of an apostolic succession by immersion, and demonstrates that the people now called Baptists began to immerse in England in 1641, and not sooner; and still later in America.

"A Circuit Rider" and others would do well to read Dr. Whitsitt's book (which may be had of Barbee & Smith, Book Agents, Nashville, in connection with Dr. J. H. Eggins' pamphlets, "Origin of the Baptists" and "Origin of Infant Baptism," and also Dr. Fairfield's "Letters on Baptism." Dr. W. P. Harrison's book, "The High Churchman Disarmed," will be found very helpful.

Missionary Entertainment.

On Friday evening, Nov. 29, the ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society of Cold Water, Miss., gave a "Missionary Tea" at the home of our president, Mrs. P. T. Callicott. Each member of the society had the privilege of inviting a friend, so about thirty-five guests assembled at an early hour to enjoy social intercourse as well as a delightful supper.

The beautiful home of our president was an ideal place for such an entertainment, and the wide-open doors, bright lights and lovely flowers made each guest feel welcome. About eight o'clock the ladies were invited into the dining-room, where a delicious supper awaited them. Everybody seemed in good health and spirits, and, possessed with fine appetites, so the supper was thoroughly enjoyed. At each plate was a souvenir tied with white ribbon, and upon which was written a beautiful verse, appropriate to the occasion. The verses were all different, and, if memorized, would inspire us to a better life and greater zeal in the cause of missions.

While each member of the society contributed to the entertainment, most of its success is due to our zealous and faithful president, who took the greatest part of the responsibility upon herself, and who did all in her power to make the evening enjoyable. Praise is also due Misses Veazey and Jones, who in such a graceful and charming manner waited on the table and saw that everybody was abundantly supplied with good things.

The object of the "Missionary Tea" was to have a nice sociable time together, and to try to get others interested in the cause of missions.

North Mississippi Conference.

Our hearts were made very sad when we read that on Tuesday, Dec. 17, 1901, our dear friend and sister, Mrs. Sallie T. Walker, of Holly Springs, Miss., had passed away to her home above. No particulars have been heard. We knew that her health was precarious, but were totally unprepared for so sudden a going away. She was a cultivated, Christian lady. Called to office in the W. H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference, first as vice-president, then as president, her associates in office found her ever faithful and efficient.

We tender the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers in their deep affliction.

MRS. J. B. STONE.

It is vain thought to flee from the work that God appoints us, for the sake of finding a greater blessing to our own souls, as if we could choose for ourselves where we shall find the fullness of the Divine Providence, instead of seeking it where alone it is to be found, in loving obedience.—Geo. Eliot.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss.

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.

Trained Teachers.

One of the crying needs of our Sunday-schools is trained teachers. In the beginning of the Sunday-school movement the teachers were paid for their services, and in these latter days there is a return in some quarters, in large city schools, to salaried teachers. But the vast majority of schools still have to depend, and of necessity must always depend, upon volunteers. This army of teachers, a million strong, are deserving of the highest praise. Through Summer's heat and Winter's cold they are ever faithful in their labors of love. They are giving the best they have in time and talents. But most of them have limited means, and, therefore, have never been able to qualify themselves for efficient service. But they are willing and anxious to improve, and how to enable them to do so has been the problem for Sunday-school workers to solve. They have tried the convention, the institute, the normal class, and the teachers' meeting. All of these have proven effective agencies, and yet there has been something lacking.

The convention aroused interest and enthusiasm, and imparted a great deal of information; the institute also has proven a great blessing. The convention is for discussion, and the institute for hard study and illustration of methods. So effective are they that Mr. Moody organized and carried on at vast expense the Northfield gatherings and the institute that bears his name at Chicago, to train Christian workers, and the Sunday-schools have come in for their full share of benefit. The institute is one of the most effective means we have for training teachers. But the convention and the institute have been unable to reach the masses of workers in our Sunday-schools. They are busy people, and most of them have been unable to attend either one of them because of a lack of both time and money. Normal classes have also done good work in improving the service. The teachers' meeting is effective where one can be maintained. But the normal class requires a thoroughly competent and trained teacher and eligible material upon which to work, both of which requirements are lacking in thousands of schools. But few schools keep up a regular teachers' meeting.

What, then, is to be done to reach the mass of officers and teachers? Evidently some method must be provided by which they can be reached in the privacy of their own homes. Our own Southern Methodist Church has taken the initiative, and provided such a course, under the direction of Prof. Hamill. It is one of the best forward steps that has been taken in a long time in the Sunday-school cause. We hope every teacher will join the class.

We would like seriously to ask the question, How many stewards, trustees, and officers of the church take an active interest in their respective Sunday-schools? We know that superintendents are members of the Quarterly Conference, and that many teachers are also stewards, and Sunday-school officers are the best workers the church has; yet the fact remains that a large majority of the officers of the church are in utter ignorance of the condition of their Sunday-schools. They hear the reports (when they attend) that are made to the Quarterly Conference, but beyond that they know nothing about it, and take no interest in its success. This is a state of affairs that ought not to exist. The officers of a church compose the pastor's cabinet, and, with him and the superintendent, they ought to exercise intelligent supervision and take an interest in its welfare. Did they do this, there would be no question about the Sunday-school doing good work, and there would be a better Sunday-school spirit in the congregation, and it would also be easier to get the young people to attend. Every officer who can do so ought to attend the Sunday-school. It would do him good, and there he could do others good. An officer of the church is presumed to have the welfare and advancement of Christ's kingdom on his heart. If he does not, he has no business being in an official position. And inasmuch as the Sunday-school has been proven to be the most effective agency for bringing the children to Christ, it ought to have the hearty co-operation, the intelligent supervision, the presence and the earnest prayers of every officer of the church.

Bro. George J. Leftwich, chairman of the Sunday-school Board of the North Mississippi Conference, is one of the best-informed and most active Sunday-school workers in Mississippi. Through him the Board made an excellent report to the recent Conference, and made some recommendations which should receive the careful attention of every Sunday-school worker.

FROM GUNNISON.

Gunnison is a "Delta" town of good business strength, and our church is well planted here. A new house of worship is contemplated. A very excellent preacher's home was built and furnished some time since, and the congregation of culture and resources is competent to do as intelligent aspirations would indicate concerning any church enterprise.

We have been most kindly received, and made at once comfortable, even with temperature well neigh to zero without. We trust for divine blessings and direction in the plans and work of the year.

A. H. WILLIAMS.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

The extremely cold weather of Sunday (the fifteenth ultimo) made the attendance at the Methodist Church quite small, but those who braved the cold were amply repaid. Rev. Eugene Johnson, the pastor, preached a spiritual sermon on "Abiding in Christ," which was helpful to thoughtful listeners. The sermon by Rev. R. I. Allen on, "Ye shall know, if you follow on to know the Lord," was original in conception, felicitous in illustration, and helpful in enforcement. Mr. Allen's power of unique illustration is really wonderful. The people of Vaiden are fortunate in having him for their pastor. We heartily commend him to them, both as a man and a preacher.—Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative.

A HAPPY PREACHER'S WIFE.

With the comfortable consciousness that we are settled for another twelve months in Canton—the pretty town where we have spent two happy years—a retrospective mood seizes me, and forthwith a desire to write to the ADVOCATE. I am impelled to this inclination to rush into print by the laudable motive of paying a deserved tribute to the members of our Canton Church. Their unremitting kindness to us during our entire pastorate surely merits our public appreciation. When we were first appointed to this charge some one said to me, "Do you expect to be pleasantly received at Canton?" to which query I made the prompt response, "I certainly do, for I have never been received in any other way!" And my confidence was fully sustained by our welcome to the Canton Church.

How well I remember New Year's Day, 1900; its beginning—leaving the hospitable home of Dr. C. G. Andrews (who, seven days later, himself left it for his heavenly mansion); its ending—our first happy night in the vine-clad cottage parsonage at Canton. The elect women and faithful steward who received us so cordially, and whose names now are written on my very heart; the glowing fires, the well-filled pantry, and the second thoughtful steward who dropped the welcome obolque in the new pastor's hand (en passant, how appreciated is such a deed after an itinerant's long and expensive move to his new field of labor!); the dear women who dropped in during the day with cordial greeting; the third steward who came twice in the ice and snow at night, each time bringing something for our comfort! Since that memorable day the kindness never once has slackened. Many times the parsonage has been "stormed," and I am sure that no pastor's family ever enjoyed a more royal Christmas than we did at the last holiday season.

The spiritual part of our work has been reported on other occasions by the pastor, and while I write this little tribute to our parishioners, I want to add that all of us rejoice together in the return of Dr. T. B. Holloman to our district for the fourth year, for in his case I can truly say he is the "beloved presiding elder."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

VERNON, LA.

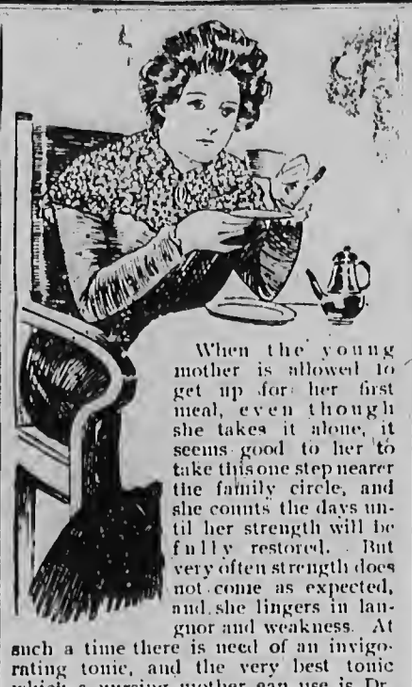
DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: I wish to express gratitude through your paper to the people of Vernon and of the Vernon circuit for giving our children a happy Christmas, and for the manifest interest in our welfare; and I pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon them.

H. M. BANKS.

Dec. 26, 1901.

All along our earthly life we are shut in with God, as it were, in little spaces. We must live a day at a time. The mornings are little hilltops from which we can look down into the narrow valley of one little day. What lies over the next hill we can not tell. Perhaps when we come to it, it may reveal to us a lovely garden through which our path shall go on. Or it may show us a vale of shadows, or a path amid briars. No matter; we have but the one little valley of the day now in sight. Evening is our horizon. Here in this one little day's inclosure we can rest as in a refuge. To-morrow's storms and cares can not touch us.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptation—these are the silver threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life that God approves.—Canon Farrar.



When the young mother is allowed to get up for her first meal, even though she takes it alone, it seems good to her to take this one step nearer the family circle, and she counts the days until her strength will be fully restored. But very often strength does not come as expected, and she lingers in languor and weakness. At such a time there is need of an invigorating tonic, and the very best tonic which a nursing mother can use is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It contains no alcohol nor narcotics. It gives real strength.

"Favorite Prescription" is a reliable woman's medicine. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription too highly as a tonic for tired, worn-out women especially those who are afflicted with female weakness," writes Mrs. Ira W. Holmes, of Cedar Rapids Iowa. "It has helped me very much and a skilful physician said to me in answer to my question as to its efficacy, 'I know of cases where it has really worked wonders.'"

THE NEW YEAR.

We have passed into another year. The most of us, even our young men and women, have let the old year slip out without indulging any sentiment. The age in which we live is too practical for that. Very few of us, however, we dare say, have failed to let serious thoughts take possession of our minds. We know not what a day may bring forth. How much less, then, can we tell what will come to pass during a year. How important that we hear and heed the Master, who said, "Be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

How stands the case with us? This is a good time to make an examination and "to prove ourselves." Men of the world have taken stock, have counted up receipts and expenses; they have compared their present possessions with what they had in hand twelve months ago, and know exactly how they stand. Books are posted, and everybody is ready for another year's business. Times are propitious, and men are full of enterprise and hope.

Why may not a Christian know how he stands with God? Is God so far off or so unapproachable that one may not have communion with him? or, is it impossible to receive any satisfactory evidence of acceptance with him? These are idle questions, for God is our Father, and "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him," and he has promised to hear us, and bless us, and to give us evidence of our sonship and adoption.

There is a way by which we may determine this matter with satisfaction. It is our privilege and our duty to settle the question for ourselves. This we may do by comparing our faith and practice with what the Scriptures teach in regard to religion. We need not take any mistake. The nature of the religion is clearly defined. First of all, a Christian must have the Spirit of Christ. Destitute of this, he is none of his. That spirit manifested in love, which "suffereth long and is kind; envieth not; vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. It never faileth."

Nor need we make any mistake as to the practice of religion. The Golden Rule is plain, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them." The details are clearly set forth by St. Paul in the twelfth chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. St. James is emphatic, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the world." The performance of these duties, coupled with a manifestation of love, indicate experience in grace, and this, we take it, is what the apostle desired the Corinthians to know when he said, "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith."

Let us all, as Christians, this day enter into our closets, and with an open Bible, as with a lighted candle, search our hearts. If we find ourselves right before God, let us resolve, by his grace, to stay right, and do better for the Lord this year than we have ever done. If we are not right, let us get right by renewing our coverant, and starting afresh. The Lord will be merciful to our trangressions, and our sins and iniquities will he remember no more. The doors of opportunity are open on all sides. We can not turn our eyes without seeing something to do. Our ears are always hearing the cry of distress. Whensoever we will we may do our fellow-men a kindness. And we have in hand all the facilities for carrying out our good resolutions to obey God and bless the world. May 1902 be the best year of our lives!

BISHOP CANDLER AND TOBACCO.

Brother Palmore allows a few correspondents of the St. Louis Advocate to deal severely—and as we see it, offensively—with Bishop Candler for certain utterances at one of the Missouri Conferences on the subject of tobacco. Brother Palmore himself set the example, and his correspondents fell into line. One would infer that some Missouri brethren think it wholly out of place for a Bishop to express his opinion publicly, and that for a "young Bishop" to do so is a mortal sin. We have no interest whatever in the controversy now agitating the minds of the minority in Missouri, and we stand squarely with Brother Palmore in personal enmity to tobacco, but we like to see fair play. The Bishop is not to blame for being young, nor is it any sin to be young. It is not even a sin to be a "young Bishop," and Brother Palmore should have held his knights in check when the Bishop disclaimed any purpose to defend the use of tobacco. Yet the editor not only allows his correspondents to interpret the Bishop's language, but to hold him up to his readers as wholly inconsistent in his teachings and practice, and thus render him an object of ridicule.

A resolution was before the Conference—so says "A Layman"—"advising young ministers not to begin or indulge the use of tobacco, believing it would curtail their influence for good as pastors." The Bishop said, "I hope it will not pass," and added, according to Rev. Nelson B. Henry, "I wouldn't give the snap of my finger for a man who can't smoke a cigar when he wants to, and let it alone when he wants to." That seems to be the sum and substance of the Bishop's offending. The logical mind of Brother Henry, president of Marvin Institute, construes that into a defense of the use of tobacco. Brother Henry also accuses the Bishop of warping and twisting the meaning of the word "taste," and as good as says he knew that he was giving the word a wrong construction.

Rev. John C. Shackelford is prder still. He says the Bishop, y innuendo," "ridiculed the lies of the tobacco habit" ling us the Holy Spirit had not ical" to do with a man's physi That e, or natural appetite. blush e Brother Shackelford the Bis shame. He attributes "potency" statement to the n "abnormal appetite"—an appetite so strong as to blind his powerful intellect "to the ridiculousness of such an argument or innuendo." Brother Shackelford, once a user of tobacco, confesses to resorting to subterfuges in defense of the habit, and is decidedly of the opinion that Bishop Candler is like guilty. What would he say of one never guilty of using tobacco who employs the same argument? On the part of such an one he could not say "it is a subterfuge" to ease a guilty conscience.

How Brother Shackelford and others, who esteem the Bishop so highly, believing him to be a good man, and "in touch with the Holy Spirit," can thus accuse him of tergiversation, or willful misuse of words, we do not understand. Nor do we understand why a Bishop, who loves the church and is working constantly for the good of the cause, may not express his opinions without subjecting himself to criticism, and direct assault of his motives. In the case before us it is very clear that the Bishop's critics and accusers are enthusiasts, if not slightly fanatical.

We stand among those who believe that Bishops—our Bishops, being Methodist preachers—have a right to express themselves on all questions affecting the general interests of the church, and in open Conference if they so desire. At the same time it is the privilege of any preacher on the floor to cross swords with him if he feels so disposed. But it is not the preacher's right, either on the floor of the Conference or through the church press, to question his motives, or charge him with willful perversion of words. We are sometimes too reckless in our criticisms, all because we live in a free country.

INTERCOLLEGIATE GAMES.

The two Conferences in Mississippi are yet almost solid against intercollegiate games. They do not believe that schools built and controlled by the church should encourage such, or allow their students to waste the time and money necessary to the practice and the contests. It is hard to convince the preachers or laymen that there is any good in them. They believe, with good reason, that foot-ball, as played to-day, is dangerous, and that both foot-ball and base-ball, under existing conditions, is demoralizing.

The Mississippi Conference debated the subject thoroughly, and the report says, with animation, with the result of twelve votes only in favor of the games. The Conference congratulated Millsaps College for respecting the action taken by the body twelve months ago, and condemned Vanderbilt University for its persistency in allowing and encouraging such sports. The North Mississippi Conference likewise, twelve months since, struggled over the question, and voted decisively against the games. This year there was no contest, no separate resolution, but a reaffirmation, in connection with the report on education, of the stand previously taken. We hope the matter is finally settled.

One thing, at least, is settled—that is, intercollegiate games are not essential to the success of our church school. Millsaps College was never so prosperous as it is to-day. And we seriously doubt whether the absence of intercollegiate foot-ball has kept away a single student. If so, others have taken his place, for the roll of students is larger than ever. And we do not hesitate to say that with such a man as Dr. Murrah at its head, highly endowed intellectually, of fine executive ability, and withal a polished Christian gentleman, the college is bound to succeed. If Millsaps had the champion ball team of the South, it would not add a single score to the institution. Men make our schools, and we have a man at Millsaps. May he long stay there!

The Conferences do well to guard our boys against the demoralizing influences of intercollegiate games. Other schools are doing sufficient damage. It requires but a glance to satisfy an observer on this point. We pass, in going to and from our office, two private schools for boys. Each school has one or more teams. From the opening early in October to this date, the passion for foot-ball has ruled in both schools. They practice every day, and engage in games with other schools almost, if not quite, every week. Boys, apparently not more than twelve or fourteen years of age, in private practice wear their colors, and put on the airs of bullies. They are bullies in miniature. The height of their ambition is to make the best foot-ball players. They are training themselves for future champions. Many of them will degenerate into professionals, which means they will swell the already crowded ranks of non-producers who live at the expense of others. There can be no wrong in counteracting such evil tendencies. Let us be true to our mission!

DEATH OF REV. R. J. JONES.

We were shocked on Tuesday, the twenty-fourth ultimo, after we had gone to press, to receive a dispatch from Brother Ira M. Eagan, announcing the death of Rev. Ransom J. Jones, pastor of our church at Crystal Springs, Miss. It was our pleasure to meet Bro. Jones at the session of his Conference on the twelfth ultimo. He was in robust health. But, alas! pneumonia seized him, and he was carried away in less than two weeks. Up to this writing we have heard none of the particulars of his sickness and death. He was one of our purest and best men, and we have no doubt he rests in peace. He had been connected with the itinerancy more than forty-five years, and occupied a high place in the esteem of his brethren. He filled, acceptably and usefully, the best places in his Conference. At the time of his death he was one of the directors of our Orphans' Home, and a member of the Publishing Committee of this ADVOCATE. He will be greatly missed. We have in hand a memoir from the hand of Bishop Galloway, which we will publish next week.

AN ITINERANT WEDGE—A STRANGE ITINERANCY.

Zion's Herald, in noting the resignation of a prominent Congregational minister of Boston, whose action seems to have been forced by the constant lessening of the size of his congregation, takes occasion to quote from the Boston Journal a paragraph contained in what we understand to be the church's statement in accepting the resignation. In the paragraph occurs these significant words:

"The present demands upon the intellect, heart and strength of a pastor for a life-long tenure in a single pulpit, save under very exceptional conditions, are becoming beyond human strength. It is no longer strange that pastor and people, however great their mutual attachment and love, are forced to consider whether the more limited tenure of the pastoral office may not offer the larger opportunity for the most efficient service of the Master and Lord of all churches."

This is a plea for shorter pastorates. The ground on which it is made is tenable and sound. But how they are to be made such without friction is a question we leave our Congregational brethren to settle for themselves. Of course, we think an appointing power with a time limit would suit exactly, and, as Zion's Herald says, "render changes easy and normal."

But just as we were congratulating ourselves on account of our superior system, there came to mind the fact that many modern Methodists desire longer pastorates than have obtained among us, and are clamoring for the elimination of the time-limit. Then we looked further down the column of the Herald which we were reading, and saw the following "Personal:"

"Rev. L. H. Dorchester, of People's Temple, this city, is unanimously invited to become the next pastor of the church at Newton Centre, and has accepted, subject to the approval of the appointing power."

And we said, that is a strange sort of itinerancy. Why commend our system to others, if we do not respect it ourselves? It is true our Southern Methodism has not come to that yet, but as we are seeking to pattern after our Northern brethren and sisters in other things, we will come to that in due time. In a little while after we have secured deaconesses, we will be ready to decapitate our itineraney.

DOMINATED BY SENTIMENT.

It is hard for some men under the dominance of sentiment to speak rationally. They appear to lose sight of common sense, and to be utterly void of judgment. This is particularly true of a class of Methodists who are struck with the idea of union. To come under the spell is to them an evidence of an advance in grace. Those who do not fall into line, in their estimation, are lacking in true religion. The two branches of the Presbyterians, Northern and Southern, recently held a joint synodical meeting in St. Louis, the object of which was to form plans for co-operation in educational work. Forthwith it is said "the whole outside world of saints and sinners rejoices in this evidence of growth in grace on the part of the Presbyterians, North and South." Of course, it follows that other Christians (Methodists, North and South, for example) who are pursuing their educational work after their own plans are not only wasting money, but are sinning against God—are lacking in religion. And it is gravely asserted that "the whole outside world of saints and sinners are beginning to inquire and wonder why it is that Missouri Methodists, North and South, can not get religion and common sense enough to co-operate in the educational work in this great commonwealth." There must be some mistake about this. We have attended several Conferences recently, but heard not a word on the subject. Nobody down this way is disturbed, or making inquiries about the matter. Nobody is accusing our Missouri brethren of a lack of religion or common sense because they prefer to do their work as they see proper. Our individual opinion is, that our Missouri brethren exercise good, common sense in staying apart and attending to their own business until the general conditions for union become favorable. To go daft for union simply because the Presbyterians have united is itself a sign of the lack of balance. And what we say of Missouri we say with reference to the church at large. And shall men impugn the integrity of the whole church because we see proper to maintain our identity as Southern Methodists? It would be just as righteous as to impugn the integrity of Missouri Methodists, or Methodists in any other locality, for declining co-operation with other bodies.

God does not whisper into the ear of an infidel the secrets of heaven.—Moody.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer was in the city last week, visiting friends and relatives. We were glad to welcome him to the office of the ADVOCATE. He is a strong friend and supporter.

We had the pleasure of a call from Dr. G. W. Bennett, an official member of our church at Gulf Port, Miss. The Doctor modestly presents his business to our readers. See his card in another column.

Rev. C. M. Hawkins, announced as a transfer from the Baltimore to the Louisiana Conference, and appointed to Rayne Memorial, in this city, for some reason will not come, and the authorities must find another man.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, after a visit of a few days to his father, who lives in Texas, is again at home, and has entered upon his work at Parker Memorial for another year with his usual energy. And, as usual, is full of hope.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt has been heartily welcomed to his new charge, Grenada, and has entered upon his work with zeal and hope. The future before him is bright. We hope his fondest expectations may be realized.

Rev. R. H. Wynn, of Louisiana Avenue Church, immediately after Conference took a few days' rest at a quiet watering-place in Mississippi. A short note from him informs us that he has been benefited, and that he will return in time to fill his pulpit next Sunday.

A card reached our table last week announcing the marriage of Miss Mary Steel, daughter of Mrs. Mary T. Gibbs, of Jackson, Miss., to Mr. Willard W. Ward, of Fort Adams, Miss. The marriage was announced for Dec. 26, 1901. May the blessings of Heaven rest on the union.

We sympathize greatly with Bro. L. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, who has had much sickness in his family during the past year, and who, on this account, was unable to attend the session of his Conference. Let us all remember our afflicted brother in our daily prayers.

The new presiding elder of the Durant district, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, is hard at work. We have not among us a more energetic and faithful man. He has an important field, left in good condition by his predecessor. He will have to work hard to wipe out Brother Dye's tracks.

Dr. John T. Crebbin, of this city, has been appointed by Gov. Heard a member of the State Board of Medical Examiners. Dr. Crebbin is an active member of Parker Memorial Church, and president of the New Orleans Union Epworth League. His appointment to so responsible a position is quite a compliment.

Rev. B. P. Jaco is comfortably located at Booneville, and not at all afraid to face the work before him. He has only to build a new parsonage, replace the church which was destroyed by fire a short time since, visit about 300 members, and preach twice every Sunday. If any brother whose hands are full needs help, let him call on Brother Jaco.

Rev. H. C. Edmundson, transferred from the White River to the North Mississippi Conference, has reached his charge, Chester circuit. He is pleased with the outlook, and hopes to do a good year's work. Brother Edmundson was for several years a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and so is no stranger to the majority of the brethren.

Dr. W. G. Sykes, of Aberdeen, Miss., lay delegate-elect to the General Conference from North Mississippi, honored our sanctum last week with a visit. The doctor took an active part in the canvass for prohibition in Monroe county during the Fall, and is highly gratified at the result. He thinks there will now be great improvement in his city.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could the ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

North Mississippi Conference.

Resolutions on temperance and prohibition passed by the North Mississippi Conference, in session at Winona, Dec. 4-9:

Resolved, 1st, That our pastors be requested to preach at least one sermon a year on this subject.

2nd, That we, as a Methodist Conference, composed of pastors and laymen, repledge our sympathy and co-operation along with other religious bodies to continue the fight for prohibition until every county in the State shall go dry.

3rd, That this Conference desires to extend to Bro. Richard Wilkinson a vote of thanks for the noble and effective work which he did in carrying Monroe county for prohibition.

4th, That we desire to express our sincere appreciation of the action of Congress in the passage of the Anti-Canteen Amendment to the Army Reorganization Bill, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks in the canteen and upon all military reservations. We are doubly assured of the wisdom of this action by the strong utterances of those high in military authority, who, notwithstanding herculean efforts on the part of the enemies of the law to bring about a different sentiment in the minds of the people, reaffirm the statement: "The American Army is far better off without intoxicants of any kind"—which declaration renews in us the hope that the national policy will be for the permanent prohibition of the liquor traffic in all places under government control. We shall continue to urge upon Congress the necessity of appropriating a sufficient fund to provide a comfortable "amusement room" and an improved ration. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to our two U. S. Senators and to our Representatives in Congress from this State.

(Signed) A. H. GEORGE, Chairman,
For Committee.

The following was also passed:

Be it resolved by this Conference—

1st, That we hereby petition his excellency, the Governor of Mississippi, to submit to the special session of the Legislature, to convene in January, A. D. 1902, for its consideration and action the matter of a State law repealing Section 1575 of the Annotated Code of 1892 of Mississippi, and to amending the dram shop or retail liquor law, so as to limit the power to issue license to sell vinous, alcoholic, malt, intoxicating or spirituous liquors in any quantity to the authorities of duly organized cities and towns of more than five hundred inhabitants, in which are kept up police forces sufficient to give protection to the law-abiding citizens, and to enforce the law against disorder and crime. And we request the Legislature to enact such statute law at said special session.

2nd, And that this Conference further request the Governor and Legislature to allow the local-option liquor law to remain in force as it is; and that a certified copy of this paper be sent to the Governor and to each branch of the Legislature.

(Signed) FRANK A. CRITZ,
B. C. THIGG.

Unfounded Rumor.

The following correspondence between Rev. L. F. Beatty, Assistant Sunday-school Editor, and Rev. J. A. Orman, D. D., of the Tennessee Conference, by telegraph, is self-explanatory, and sets at rest an unfounded rumor:

But If You Have Kidney, Liver or Bladder Trouble, You Will Find Swamp-Root Just the Remedy You Need.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Doctors Prescribe Swamp-Root.

"I have prescribed that wonderful remedy for kidney and bladder complaints Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, with most beneficial effect and know of many cures by its use. These patients had kidney trouble as diagnosed by other physicians, and treated without benefit. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root effected a cure. I am a liberal man, and accept a specific wherever I find it, in an accepted school or out of it. For desperate cases of kidney or bladder complaint under treatment with unsatisfactory results I turn to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root with most flattering results. I shall continue to prescribe it, and from personal observation state that Swamp-Root has great curative properties."

L. BARTO, M. D.,
Sept 24, 1901. 276 9th st., Borough of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the world famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves, who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

Home Circle.

Too Late.

The old farmer died suddenly, so when Judge Gilroy, his only son, received the telegram, he could do nothing but go up to the farm for the funeral. It was difficult to do even that, for the Judge was the leading lawyer in X——, and every hour was worth many dollars to him.

As he sat with bent head in the grimy little train which lumbered through the farms, he could not keep the details of his cases out of his mind.

He had been a good, respectful son. He had never given his father a heartache; and the old man died full of years and virtues, "a shock of corn fully ripe." The phrase pleased him.

"I wish to tell you," said the doctor, gravely, "that your father's thoughts were all of you. He was ill but an hour, but his cry was for 'John! John!' unceasingly."

"If I could have been with him!" said the Judge.

"He was greatly disappointed that you missed your half-yearly visit last Spring. Your visits were the events of his life," said the doctor.

"Last Spring? Oh, yes; I took my family then to California."

"I urged him to run down and see you on your return, but he would not go."

"No, he never felt at home in the city."

The Judge remembered that he had not asked his father to come down. Ted was ashamed of his grandfather's wide collars; and Jessie, who was a fine musician, scowled when she was asked to sing the "Portuguese Hymn" every night. The Judge humored his children, and had ceased to ask his father into his house.

The farm-house was in order and scrupulously clean; but its bareness gave a chill to the Judge, whose own home was luxurious. The deaf old woman, who had been his father's servant sat grim and tearless by the side of the coffin.

"Martha was faithful," whispered the doctor, "but she's deaf. His life was very solitary. The neighbors are young. He belonged to another generation."

He reverently uncovered the coffin, and then with Martha went out and closed the door. The Judge was alone with his dead.

Strange enough, his thought was still of the cold bareness of the room. Those hacked wooden chairs were there when he was a boy. It would have been so easy for him to have made the house comfortable—to have hung some pictures on the wall! How his father had delighted in his engravings, and pored over them!

Looking now into the kind old face, with the white hair lying motionless on it, he found something in it which he had never taken time to notice before—a sagacity, a nature fine and sensitive. He was the friend, the comrade whom he had needed so often! He had left him with deaf old Martha for his sole companion!

There hung upon the wall the photograph of a young man with an eager, strong face, looking proudly at a chubby boy on his knee. The Judge saw the strength in the face.

"My father should have played a high part in life," he thought. "There is more promise in his face than in mine."

In the desk were a bundle of old account-books with records of years of hard drudgery on the farm; of work in Winter and Summer, and often late at night, to pay John's school bills, and to send him to Harvard. One patch of ground after another was sold while he waited for practice, to give him clothes and luxuries which other young men in town had, until but a meager portion of the farm was left.

John Gilroy suddenly closed the book. "And this is the end!" he said. "The boy for whom he lived and worked, won fortune and position—and how did he repay him?"

The man knelt on the bare floor, and shed bitter tears on the quiet old face. "O father! father!" he cried. But there was no smile on the quiet face. He was too late!—Youth's Companion.

The Oldest Dolly in the World.

"She's so old!" Comfort said a little crossly. "An' so 'lapidated all over!"

"Well, why not? She's been lap'ed so much," remarked the big boy, who made jokes and laughed at them himself. The big boy was Comfort's brother.

"I don't believe there ever was such an old doll as Diana-of-the-'Phesians is," lamented the little mother voice ruefully. She was holding the poor dolly up for the aunties to see, and the aunties both laughed. The curly-haired auntie held out her hand for the doll. "Poor Diana-of-the-'Phesians Smith!" she said gently. "She does look old and as if she had met perils by land and by sea?—

"Yes'm, she has—both of them," said Comfort, briskly. "She's been earthquaked and drowned, and once she caught a sunstroke. An' I guess she's most a hundred years old!"

"The doll I saw last summer was twenty-two hundred years old," the smooth haired auntie quietly remarked.

"Twenty-two hundred years old!" Comfort's shrill, astonished little voice chimed in.

"Twenty-two centuries!" cried the big boy in big boy language. The curly-haired auntie looked just a little bit amazed, too. Certainly that was a most remarkable old doll.

"I suppose she belonged to Mr. Methuselah's little girls, but I shouldn't s'pose you'd have seen her," murmured Comfort.

The "smooth auntie" (that was Comfort's name, because she had such smooth, shiny brown hair) smiled. She took dilapidated little Diana-of-the-'Phesians Smith into her arms and rocked her as if she had been a baby.

"Yes, as old as that—possibly a little older. She wasn't very handsome, of course. You couldn't expect such and old, old dolly as that to be handsome. They told me (the people who take care of her) that she is the oldest doll in the world."

"Why, auntie, why!"

"Dearie me!" murmured the curly auntie.

The big boy whistled.

"Has she—is her little girl mamma 'live to see to her?" Comfort queried in rather an awed tone. She always felt awed in front of very old people—and twenty-two hundred years old!

"No," auntie said gravely. "Her little girl mamma died three centuries before Christ, Comfort. She was a little princess and lived in Egypt. When she died they wrapped her little body in soft, strange wrappings that kept it all these twenty-two centuries just the same."

"Little girl mummy," muttered the big boy to himself.

"Yes, a baby mummy. And when they opened her tomb (people of this century) they found the old, old dolly held tight in the little princess' hand. She had held it there twenty-two hundred years!"

"Oh," breathed Comfort very softly. She reached out for Diana-of-the-'Phesians and clasped her in her arms. Her face was very tender and loving. Diana-of-the-'Phesians seemed suddenly very young indeed, and very dear.

The big boy was swinging his feet noisily, and he had turned away so nobody could see his face at all. Something about his eyes bothered him.

"The princess' dolly is made of wood, rudely cut out. It is little and homely, but the little princess loved it."

"O yes, she loved it," Comfort whispered.

"It is in the British Museum now," the smooth haired auntie went on. "They keep it among the sacred relics; and there it lies under the glass, looking up at this queer, unfamiliar world of to-day. If it could feel, how it would wonder where its little dark-faced mother is!"

"An' how lonesome it would feel!" finished Comfort, softly. "Poor little dolly!"—Primary Education.

Keeping One's Temper.

"Keeping one's temper" is an odd phrase. We speak of a person having a great temper, as if it were a weakness, and then point out one who keeps his temper as a wise man. Why keep that which is undesirable?

In this sense, keeping means controlling. There is all the difference between a controlled and uncontrolled temper as there is between a horse that has been trained to bit and bridle, and one which is wild.

Now horses are not all born with the same degree of spirit. Some are easily broken in, while others need the most careful training in order to be manageable at all. The same thing is true with people. Some are naturally mild, others quick and hasty, and still others dogged and obstinate.

Yet we need not be discouraged. Any temper may be trained, and often the worst can be turned into the best. The spirited colt makes the finest horse. It is possible, if you begin early enough, to change a balky animal into a steady, faithful roadster.

A high temper under good control usually goes with a strong character. Such a person is quick, full of life and energy. He can do what is impossible to the slower, milder man.

It all depends on the "keeping." A temper controlled is one's slave, uncontrolled is one's master. Which would you rather be, master or slave?

What you keep is your own, to be used as you wish. A man keeps a cow that he may have her milk; a servant to do his work; a garden that he may eat the vegetables.

"Keeping" your temper whenever you use it to benefit yourself—when it brings you pleasure and happiness. It can make you high-spirited and gay, but when it disturbs other people, it is like an animal that escapes from your pasture, and destroys your neighbor's garden.

When your face grows red, and your lips tremble, and you say words you would gladly take back after they are spoken, then it is that your temper is keeping you, and making you do as it pleases.

When you answer a cross, hateful remark gently, or receive a blow without striking back, or smile when it is far easier to frown, then it is that you are keeping your temper, making of it an obedient, helpful servant.

An exhibition of trained animals is interesting, because it shows what wonderful power man has over brutes. An exhibition of a trained temper is more wonderful, as it shows what a power man has over his lower self—The Pilgrim Visitor.

Mr. JACOB M. ARCHER was born near Richmond, in Powhatan county, Va., Dec. 22, 1833, and departed this life at his home in Memphis, Ala., Oct. 11, 1901. A prince in our Israel has fallen, but heaven has gained a saint. Brother Archer was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1855, at the age of twenty-one, and later in that same year he left his native State to find his fortune in the West. In his journey he halted in the northeastern part of Noxubee county, Miss., and was there persuaded to take charge of an important classical school, for which he was so well fitted. From that time he was identified with the interests and fortunes of Mississippi, and to her welfare he gave, as a citizen of Noxubee county, the industrious fruit of his noble, manly life. His labor was chiefly in the school-room, where, for twenty-five years, he was a prince and a power. When his people were overtaken by the storms of war, he went afield with them as a soldier of Confederate arms, and shared their battles and their bivouacs. At the close of the war he returned to his desolated home, broken in fortune, but resolute in purpose, full of energy, strong in faith, and buoyant in hope. It was his art and his diligence to train his pupils in the noblest qualities of true manhood and womanhood, and to lead them into the paths of Christian life. Many whom he taught in those years sow rise up to honor and bless him. From early manhood he was a member of the M. E. Church, South, into her communion and service he threw his whole heart and might. He rejoiced in her doctrines, her polity, her fellowship, and the progress of her great evangelical enterprises. It was his delight to do anything in his power for the preachers; his heart and hands were with his own pastor and presiding elder. He was a faithful, active steward; a good superintendent, and always the impulsive, genial, whole-hearted Christian. He has fought the good fight, has kept the faith, and has received his crown. Brother Archer has left behind him a devoted wife, a son and a widowed daughter, and several grandchildren, to mourn their temporal loss, but to rejoice in his eternal rest with God. His home life was rich in the affections and cares of husband and father. There was his throne of power and his reign of love, his joy and crown. In 1858 (Jan. 7) he was united in marriage with Miss Maria L. Smith, daughter of Judge W. H. Smith, of Memphis, Ala. She was taken from their earthly home on July 10, 1864. After a widowerhood of nearly three years he was married to Miss Amelia I. Smith, of Crawford, Miss. Brother Archer strove not for wealth or fame, but to be a true and loyal citizen, to cultivate sound principles of a noble manhood, to fill his place with fidelity in the church of Christ as an humble, trusting child of God, and to give to his home the blessings of a pure life and of a Christian example. He was a true friend, a good neighbor, a pattern of virtue, a genial companion, a joyful Christian. He neglect his mark in the world for good, his influence on all who knew him. He died in the faith, and has his great reward.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

Mrs. SARAH ANN WEBB BURTON was born in old St. Landry parish, Mar. 7, 1831, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. J. Toler, in Crowley, La., Dec. 4, 1901. She was twice married; first to Mr. C. C. Duson, who left her a widow with five children, and afterward to Mr. W. W. Burton, to whom she bore three children. She was reared in the Catholic Church, and remained a devout member of it for some years after her maturity. In the year 1856 she was brought into the personal experience of salvation, and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. B. F. Wallis, who was then pastor of the Paquemine Bend circuit. About the year 1862, under the preaching of Rev. Jno. F. Wynn, she was led into a deeper and fuller Christian experience, and to the day of her death she joyously and humbly testified to the perfect love of God filling her heart and casting out all sin. Nor was this testimony merely a verbal profession, but was substantiated by a daily life of humble holiness and communion with God. Sister Burton was a woman of remarkable force of character, as evidenced in the strength given by union, in her widowhood, she maintained her dependent family, and amid unfavorable surroundings, and without good school advantages, she prepared them for honorable and useful lives. This same force was manifested in the later years, when, in the feebleness of age, her personal influence was felt throughout a large circle of relatives and friends as a wholesome restraining and uplifting force. As the president of the Ladies' Aid Society of her church from its organization till the day of her death, she did much toward the establishment of the church in Crowley. Her fervent prayers in the church when able to be present, and at home when feebleness prevented her attendance, were an inspiration and a blessing to the whole church. No pastor ever had a more faithful or sympathetic counselor. Many of the younger people of the church and community felt the touch and inspiration of her wise and motherly advice. When the end came she passed away with a confident testimony upon her lips and uttering a prayer for her children. Her six living children (four daughters and two sons) were beside her at the last, and received her parting blessing. Her life has left behind it a heavenly fragrance which ought to prove an inspiration to all her children and friends to walk in the way that she has led.

W. W. DRAKE.

Rev. WILLIAM MARSHALL LOVELADY, M. D., was born Dec. 12, 1821, in Perry county, Ala., and died Nov. 5, 1901, at Bon Secour, Ala. Dr. Lovelady was the child of religious parents. While quite young he was converted and became a member of the Methodist Church. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary A. Rencher, of Demopolis, Ala. His second marriage took place in Sunflower county, Miss. There he was joined in holy wedlock to Miss Cornelia Flemming, who, with two daughters, live to mourn the loss of a loving husband and of an affectionate father. Dr. Lovelady spent the last sixteen years of his life at Bon Secour, in Baldwin county, Ala., where he was engaged in the practice of medicine. As a physician, he was highly appreciated, and as a friend, he was greatly beloved by those among whom he lived and labored. He was noted for his charity both in heart and purse. As a steward of the church, he was a faithful officer and a loyal friend of the pastor. His last illness was short, although his health had been feeble for some time. Five days after he ceased active work he was dead. He died like one going to sleep—without a groan or a struggle. "A good man has gone to his reward," was the testimony of those who knew him. The sincerest sympathy is tendered the invalid wife and bereaved daughters in this hour of sorrow.

W. M. COX.

Mrs. SUSAN SPELL (nee Wells) was born in Marengo county, Ala., May 21, 1822. She was converted when a child at a camp meeting in Gainesville, Ala., and joined the Methodist Church, ever living a consistent Christian. She moved with her parents to Louisiana in 1841. In 1850 she was married to Mr. Wm. Spell, and became one of the first settlers of the village of Keatchie. She was the mother of a large family, but only three children survive: Mrs. H. T. Keith, of Shreveport; Mrs. T. A. Miles, of Atlanta, and Mr. Wm. E. Spell, of Hillsboro, Texas. She was ever a patient, unselfish mother; a kind, helpful neighbor, and a sympathetic friend. We have known her from our earliest recollection, and will miss her gentle influence. At the home of her sister, Mrs. E. C. Lambeth, she was attacked by grippe, and after a few days of suffering and pain gladly responded to the beckoning hands on the other shore, and crossed over the river on the evening of Nov. 29, 1901, surrounded by her three loving children and a devoted stepson, Mr. R. P. Spell, of Atlanta, Texas.

A FRIEND.

BERTHA MARIE CALCOTE, daughter of L. E. and W. M. Calcote, was born Nov. 29, 1898, and died Oct. 26, 1901, in Lincoln county, Miss., aged two years ten months and twenty-six days. The dear child was sick about ten days of that terrible disease, malarial fever. She was baptized by the writer, July 1, 1901. The father and mother may find their greatest comfort in Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." It is a blessed thought to think of her with Jesus in his kingdom.

Good people are sometimes their own enemies, standing in their own light because of their prejudices. There is nothing next to unbelief that has worked more mischief and stood in the way of the truth more than prejudice. People whose motives have been the very best have been so warped in their judgment as to both hinder their own progress and cause them to fail to understand others possessed by equally good motives.—Southern Courohman.

Baby's Coming

McDonald, Ga., July 18, 1900.

I advise every suffering woman to take Wine of Cardui. While I was going with my other children I was compelled to stay in bed for days at a time, but this time I have taken Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught and have been able to do all my housework without any trouble. I am expecting every day to be confined. My husband thinks Wine of Cardui is the best medicine in the world. He takes a dose of Thedford's Black-Draught every night and gives some to the children. He has not lost a day from work this year. He tells his friends about your wonderful medicines and I tell my lady friends to use your Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. GEORGIA LEE.

WINE OF CARDUI

There are thousands of women who shrink in terror at the thought of the baby's coming. But childbirth is one of the workings of Nature and it was not intended to imply torture and agony to the heroic mothers of the race. The woman who suffers torture during pregnancy and at childbirth has usually, by some indiscretion, injured the organs which make her a woman. Neglect of menstrual irregularities leads to ovarian pains, falling of the womb and leucorrhœa, and the period of pregnancy is necessarily distressing under those conditions. Wine of Cardui will regulate the menstrual function perfectly and eventually make the generative organs strong and healthy. Pregnancy and childbirth have no terrors for the woman who takes this pure Wine. A strong healthy womb will bring its precious burden to maturity with little or no pain. A healthy woman need not fear childbirth. Wine of Cardui completely cures all these troubles familiarly known as "female diseases" and equips the sensitive generative organs for pregnancy and childbirth. It will save any mother much pain and suffering. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I had been troubled with gastric dyspepsia for two years. I could not eat or sleep, was short of breath, and suffered from dizziness. I found no relief until I heard of R.I.P.A.N.S Tabules. After the first 5 cent box I felt the difference. When I had taken six of the 5 cent boxes I was able to eat very well, and to sleep, and the dizziness gradually disappeared. They are worth their weight in gold.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

Glances at the World.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, was the second of a list of lecturers engaged by the Young Men's Christian Association of New Orleans to fill an engagement the present season. The Senator's great reputation as a public speaker, doubtless, secured for him the invitation to address the association, the committee having the matter in charge believing him to be competent to deliver a lecture adapted to the needs of such an association. A serious mistake was made. The man and the occasion did not fit. The Senator is, no doubt, fully qualified to instruct and edify an audience on questions of a moral nature, such as Young Men's Christian Associations are supposed to be interested in, but his thoughts were in another channel. He frankly told his hearers that he was in the habit of speaking for the purpose of "making votes." And he spoke in New Orleans as if he had the same purpose in view. The talk did not partake much of the nature of the lecture; it was rather a political speech, in which the Senator arraigned his party opponents in the severest and most uncomplimentary language. Admitting Mr. Tillman to be a man of strong convictions, and perfectly honest in expressing them, we are obliged to say that before a Young Men's Christian Association his talk was out of place. His very rough handling of measures and men was not relished. On the hustings his effort might have received applause, but not so on the rostrum before a religious order.

The matter of settling disputes between employers and employees, so as to prevent strikes and lockouts, is before the country as never before, and it seems likely that a plan has been devised whereby the ends sought may be attained. It is to be brought about through the efforts of the National Civic Federation, which held a conference on the sixteenth ultimo. The conference was attended by many of the leading men of the country, including clergymen, politicians, manufacturers, capitalists, and leaders of labor organizations. After full discussion it was determined to appoint an Executive Committee of thirty-six, which committee is to be "known as the Industrial Department of the National Civic Federation. The scope and province of this department shall be to do what may seem best to promote industrial peace; to be helpful in establishing rightful relations between employers and workers; by its good offices to endeavor to obviate and prevent strikes and lockouts; to aid in renewing industrial relations where a rupture has occurred." This department will only consider industrial problems that actually arise, and will in no case undertake arbitration, unless requested to do so by both parties to a dispute. The plan is entirely practicable, and ought to prove of immense benefit to the country.

The productiveness of our country is almost beyond calculation. None except those who are in the habit of dealing in large figures can form an adequate idea of the value of the land's products as given in dollars and cents. According to recent statistics, the yield for 1901 is as follows: The fields, $4,604,646,874; the forests, $1,300,000,000; the fisheries, $632,662,000; the mines, including gold, silver, iron, coal, etc., $1,000,000,000. The article of greatest abundance and value is corn, which is put down at $751,220,034. The next is hay, $415,538,870. Then follows eggs and poultry, $400,000,000. Tobacco comes fourth, $362,136,368. Cotton is fifth, the crop being valued at $356,500,000. Wheat is rated at $323,525,477. There are 187,700 miles of railroad, over which these products are marketed and distributed, besides thousands of miles of river navigated by steamboats. Millions of men are employed in the traffic. The vast amount of trade and the cheapness of American goods are causing concern in foreign markets. Never before did our country occupy such a commanding position.

When the great canal treaty was ratified by the United States Senate, a few weeks since, it was thought that all the details of the project were settled, and hopes were entertained that the construction of the canal would soon begin. But such, it seems, is not to be. There is a hitch as to the route; the Panama, which belongs to the French, having been offered, has caused Congress to halt. The Times-Democrat says: "There has been slowly, but steadily, growing in Congress the conviction that it would be wise not to proceed too hastily with the adoption of either the Nicaragua or the Panama Canal route, but to proceed slowly and deliberately with the task of making a choice, hearing what is to be said for and what against either route. Leading Senators are open in their preference of the Panama route, and when the discussion begins, many other Senators will be found to range themselves on that side also. It is admitted that feeling in favor of the Nicaragua route is strong among the people's representatives just at present, especially in the House; but the progress of debate will discover a great change of sentiment, especially in the Senate."

THE DEACONESS MOVEMENT.

BY REV. F. N. PARKER, D. D.

The deaconess movement is now before our church as a real issue. Memorials have been adopted requesting the General Conference to establish this office in our economy. The subject is open for discussion, and I hope that it will be thoroughly discussed.

The object of this movement is to supply the church with a body of consecrated women, thoroughly trained, and giving their entire time to Christian service along lines of activity in which they excel. There is no ulterior object about it. Its cause is not superficial or merely incidental. It rests upon the fact that woman, by nature and temperament, has qualifications to do a work peculiarly her own. This fact has been amply illustrated in woman's work in the foreign field, where her special fitness and divine call has been fully attested. The inevitable social and economic conditions of our home work call for her services here as distinctly, if not as imperatively, as in the foreign field. The growing problems of our civilization are forcing upon the church a more diversified activity in the home field. This is realized acutely in the large centers of population. The work of the church to-day is to bring the gospel and the redeeming powers of the Christian life in direct contact with the people. To do this, we must go to them with a service touching their life in body, soul, and social condition. The adaptation of women to a greatly extended sphere of usefulness in reaching the masses of the people is easily indicated. Her fitness for work in the homes of the people, especially among the poor, is conspicuous. Her accessibility to her own sex enables her to enter sympathetically into family life, and render a service for the physical and spiritual good of her sisters and their families which the ministry can not do. The care and teaching of children, nursing the sick, and rescue work among the fallen, devolve almost entirely upon the agency of our Christian womanhood. Much besides all this is both possible and needful.

It will be readily conceded that there is a field which is, in a special sense, woman's sphere in Christian work, but the fact of special organization may be questioned. The question may be asked, Why not use the regular members of the church, calling upon them for this service as occasion may require? There are several reasons why this will not do. In the first place, such workers are not available. They often can not be found when most needed. They are occupied with other matters, social and domestic. Sporadic efforts will not meet the conditions. It calls for workers who give their whole time to the work. It is impossible to reach a large class except through the agency of workers whom they have learned to know and trust for their work's sake. The merely occasional visitor can not get hold of the affection and confidence of the poor, the fallen, and a large number who are alienated from the church.

There is also the great need that the workers be trained. It is a singular fact that we urge preparation for our ministers and missionaries, both men and women, and yet are content to leave the important work at our doors undone, or commit it to untrained volunteers, whose service is generally irregular and unqualified. The untrained worker is deficient in both the confidence and skill necessary to success, whether it be nursing the sick, comforting the needy, teaching the ignorant, or pointing a sinner to the Savior. There are at least two conditions of success for this work—one is that of unreserved devotion of her whole time to the work, and the other, trained preparation for the work. To secure this result, we believe that the church must recognize the office, and legislate to provide for its regulation and support. The advantages of definite organization are apparent. It gives the position of deaconess an official status. It invites those who can give themselves to this work to offer their services. It calls out an unused force in the church. It supplies a place for them with some assurance of employment. There are few women who can give themselves wholly to God's work without some basis of support.

Organization means much to the individual worker. It means better training and better equipment for service. It also gives the enthusiasm and power which results from combined and associated activity. It means the conscious realization of a special place and work to do for Christ, which is strengthened by the sustained power of a great church approving and guiding its enthusiasm. And it has an attractive power in inducing others to join in the great work of the world's evangelization.

The deaconess movement has proved its efficiency among our brethren at the North, and the Wesleyan city missions have found them indispensable. Surely we may undertake what others have found to be a resource of remarkable adaptability and power.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Some persons have been asking me why I did not have a say on the subject of intercollegiate games, of base-ball and of foot-ball? The main reason is, that I know nothing about such games. I never saw a game of base-ball played, and never a game of foot-ball, till within the past few days. I have had no experience as a college president or professor; hence I know nothing of the management and control of college boys. It seems to me that college presidents, faculties and trustees ought to be competent to manage these matters without any intermeddling on my part. I have found more than I could manage in my own department of church work. Added to all this is the fact that my writing nearly always provokes a controversy, and brings on a "fisticuff" with one, or more, of my brethren.

Boys love games, or they did when I was a boy. I loved them. I was never too tired to take my place and do my part in a game of "shinny" or "town-ball." The fact is, I would do a whole lot of extra work on the farm to gain time for the approaching game. I am really surprised at myself for the interest I took in these games, the hard work I would do to get into them, and the smallness of the prizes I played for. The smallness of my ambition, and the utter worthlessness of my aspirations then, is a puzzle to me now. The fact is, I would risk my limbs and my life to win the game. I do not know how to account for it, and I can not explain it, but the more dangerous and hazardous a game was, the more anxious I was to get into it and to win. The simple truth is, I had a passion for risky, dare-devil exploits. This passion possesses me yet, but it has taken an entirely different turn. Instead of climbing a tree and skinning a cat on a limb fifty feet from the ground, I am inclined to venture to the utmost extremity of theological questions. I am always willing to take the risks just to see what there is in that direction. When my own boys got up I was often worried and provoked with them when I saw how venturesome they were. They were utterly devoid of forethought and care. They ran dangerous risks every day. It took many falls, bumps, knocks, and some broken bones, to learn them any sense, forethought, and care. It was a miracle of Divine Providence that either one of them lived to be twelve years old, but the youngest of six will be twenty one in a few days.

When I come to think of it, boys now are much like the boys were then. The fashionable and popular games have changed. The boys think and act about base-ball and foot-ball pretty much as they did about shinny and town-ball in my day. These games are, perhaps, more dangerous, violent and hazardous than the old games. To a man over sixty it seems a small ambition, an unworthy aspiration, to want to excel in the games of ball they have now. Doubtless, it seemed so to men of sixty fifty years ago. The viewpoint of a boy of eighteen and a man of sixty, and more, is entirely different. The distance between them changes the angle of vision.

I witnessed my first—likely my last—game of foot-ball a few days ago. It was an exciting, rough-and-tumble affair. It was a match game. The boys were sober, good-humored, and well-behaved—at least, as well-behaved as a game of foot-ball would allow. This would be a sorry game for girls and small children, for sickly men and midget men. They strove earnestly for the mastery, and strove lawfully, I suppose, for I do not know the law governing foot-ball. A game of foot-ball is not a good place for nervous men and hysterical women. It is trying on the physical frames of the players and on the nerves of spectators. On the whole, I regarded this particular game a splendid success, for they got through without killing a single man. No bones were broken. The boys met, contested, and parted in the heat of humor. The play was hot, hard work. I shall not join the foot-ball team. The boys enjoyed it immensely. It is a thoroughly rough game. Wrestling is a rough game. It is an old game. Men played that game ages ago. I wish the boys would play shinny and town-ball instead of foot-ball, but they will not. This game is on now, and, like other games, it will have its day and pass away. So it has been, and, likely, so it will be down to the end of time.

It is useless to press the hazard and danger to life and limb of this game. Boys will take risks. They have always done so. If every game of foot-ball were fatal to every member of every team for the next ten years, perhaps foot-ball playing would pass away for a time. For my own part, I believe it would be good for the cause of temperance if every drink of whisky had poison enough in it to kill its man. Some men would risk it even then.

Well, now, I have had my say on foot-ball, and so I leave this subject to those who have these matters in hand.

GILDEROY.

A STUDY OF OUR MINUTES.

BY REV. D. W. BABB.

Caused by a remark of Bishop Morrison just before the reading of our appointments at Winona, which was, "Study to be four-years' men." I took the exhortation as timely on general principles, but after the appointments were read, and I saw that ninety changes had been made, not including eight places to be filled by supplies, out of one hundred and fifty-one appointments, the Bishop's remark struck me as significant, that his experience in making the appointments justly prompted his exhortation to try to be four-years' men.

The tendency to changes in our Conference certainly invites investigation on our part as pastors who may remain four years. Why this unparalleled shaking up these three years? We only had three four-years' men at last Conference, and two of them took a superannuated relation. Until the last three years we usually had from seven to ten preachers who served out their four-years' term, and the church prospered. Think of it! Thirty-seven one-year men were changed, and thirty-four two-year men, last Conference. Why was it? Is it a fact that we are becoming more inefficient, and the people are asking for changes? If so, sad, sad indeed for the future of our church in the North Mississippi Conference. If such is the case, we should go to God and seek a renewal of the baptism of the Holy Ghost for this, the greatest work to which man has been assigned, lest our crown be taken from us. Or are these changes a result of a restless disposition to be gratified at any cost by requesting a change on the part of the preacher, hoping to get what we call better appointments? If this is the case, it is hazardous. Many times the situation is not bettered. Then the trouble, expense and exposure in moving ought to be considered. These are not all the reasons why the Bishop's exhortation should be heeded. Constant changing begets a roving, unsettled ministry. About the time a pastor has his work well in hand, acquainted with the various dispositions of his people, he moves, and the same work is to go over. We ought to get further than the primary department of our pastorate. No man can develop his charge in one year.

Another reason why this state of affairs ought to stop is, in many places the people are complaining and losing interest. They say, "Our preacher is changed," and sometimes, "Our work is changed, and we don't know who our preacher is, or where we are." If the next three years triplicates the last three in changes, we certainly will run out of the four-years' term; and we all had as well be packed up and on wheels at the end of each year. A successful pastor may be perfectly contented and doing well, but his restless neighbor-preacher may necessitate his change, and disturb a work that is getting on prosperously. Our Minutes show but one preacher who is filling out his four-years' term. I am glad Brother Duncan holds on. Hold the banner high, and don't do anything that will dismiss you before the year is out. I know you feel lonely, but I hope your class will have company by and by. I don't want any lengthening of the pastorate in our church, but I am not in favor of the one-year term, as a rule.

Brethren, if all these changes were suggested and made by the good Lord, the Bishop's exhortation was out of place, and we are living in a fast age, sure enough; but I am inclined to think the Bishop was right. Let all of us who are connected with these changes prayerfully investigate and see if we can not be possessed of more staying qualities.

A VOICE FROM THE PEW.

MR. EDITOR: The Nashville Christian Advocate published a letter from Mrs. Mooney, giving an account of the Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held at Dyersburg, Tenn., which contains the following extract:

The Bishop's charge to the candidates for admission was short, sensible, and unique; practical and helpful for the pulpit and for the homes into which they go as guests. He didn't tell them how to preach, but what to preach. Preach the gospel. In order to make your message acceptable, control your voice. The Lord is not far off that he can not hear, and the people sometimes wish that they were far off so that they could not hear. Will power can control vocal gymnastics.

The Bishop is right. Will power can control the voice, and it is a pity that all the preachers do not control their voice. His charge was timely, and it is to be hoped the class will observe what he said. Many a good sermon has lost its power because the speaker had not lost his voice.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Dr. Josephus Anderson, after editing and managing the Florida Christian Advocate for twelve years, or more, has retired from the work, much to the regret of his many friends. He will give the greater part of his time to literary work. He has two books in contemplation.

The new Constitution of the M. E. Church, provided for and authorized by the General Conference, has been ratified by the Annual Conferences. Official announcement to that effect has been made. A total of 10,709 votes were cast; 8,196 for, and 2,513 against. The principal item of objection to the new instrument on the part of the minority is that it provides for the eligibility of women to seats in the General Conference.

The Committee on Revision appointed by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (North) met in Washington, Dec. 4 1901, and after ten days of work issued a statement for the information of the church, to the effect that progress had been made, but that the work done is "altogether tentative," and not for publication. Another meeting will be held in February, at which time the work will be put in shape ready to present to the General Assembly in May.

DEATH OF REV. R. J. JONES.

BY BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

At an early hour on Tuesday morning, Dec. 24, in the parsonage at Crystal Springs, Miss., the Rev. R. J. Jones, an honored and beloved member of the Mississippi Conference, passed to his eternal reward. He went home sick from the Conference session at McComb City, and soon a case of pneumonia developed, which resisted the skill of physicians and the tender ministries of anxious love. With his wife and all the children present except one, he went to sleep to awake in heaven. In his death Mississippi Methodism loses a prominent and most valuable minister, and the entire Commonwealth a noble citizen, whose influence made for righteousness.

Rev. Ransom J. Jones was born in Jasper county, Miss., and bore the name of his honored father, who was for many years a conspicuous member of the Mississippi Conference. From a child, by common consent, he was designed for the ministry. Companions at school so regarded him, and at an early age he heard directly and authoritatively the call of his Lord. Sprightly, happy-hearted, popular, and withal devout and studious, friends predicted for him a career of success and honor. At the session of the Mississippi Conference, held at Woodville in December, 1858, he was admitted on trial. In that class of fine young men were Charles G. Andrews, William B. Lewis, Nathan B. Cornell, Robert B. Downer, Newton B. Young, Andrew J. Wheat, and others. His first appointment was to Garlandsville, in the Biloxi district, with his father as presiding elder. The next year he was on the Holmes circuit, in the Yazoo district, and was then stationed for two years at Starkville and Pierce Chapel. He rendered faithful and efficient service on circuits, stations and districts up to the hour of his triumphant death, and everywhere was greatly beloved. His pastorates of four years each at Vicksburg and Yazoo City were conspicuously happy and very successful.

Bro. Jones was happily married, in early life, to Miss Sarah Mounger, the daughter of Judge Mounger, a distinguished lawyer in East Mississippi, who, with four children, mourn his loss.

Bro. Jones was an influential member of his Conference, though never prominent in its debates. But his judgment was sought after, and his opinions always commanded the greatest respect. For many years he was chairman of an Examining Committee, and it is doubted if any Conference ever had his superior. He served on the Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for years, and filled many positions of great responsibility. No man in the body had warmer friends or wider popularity. I donbt if he had an enemy. Oh, how his brethren will miss his genial presence, and kindly face, and sparkling wit, and loving sympathy, and wise counsel!

His remains were carried to Meridian for burial. A large congregation in Central Church attested the love of that community for him—the place where he had lived longest, and was best known and beloved.

The subtance of an address delivered on the occasion is here given as my heart-tribute to a noble and dearly beloved friend.

FUNERAL ADDRESS.

This is a sad Christmas Day to many of us. While the joy-bells are ringing throughout the world, and hearts everywhere are merry over the season that brings afresh to memory of God's unspeakable gift to men, there is sorrow, because in the midst of life we are in death. The time of happy reunions is, alas! also a time of painful separations. The hour of gladness is an occasion of unspeakable sadness.

How vain sometimes are the fondest earthly anticipations! Our honored brother, whose unexpected going away we so deeply deplore, had intended to spend the Christmas season here with his children. In that happy family circle he was to have been the central and most revered figure. The handsome form is here, but the great spirit is up yonder, and our hearts are bowed with grief.

But what more appropriate time for a prepared soul to go and meet our Lord! To go when the very air is full of singing and jubilant ringing. As the incarnated One came down to the music of angels, the redeemed soul, having completed his work, goes up to his reward, accompanied by the mingled notes of earth and sky.

I come to-day to bury a noble man; a genial, splendid gentleman; a trusted friend, a knightly husband, a devoted father, an upright citizen, and a gospel minister of apostolic spirit and almost blameless life. He deservedly ranked among the chief men of the church in Mississippi, and his name will have generous space in the history of the times in which he lived and wrought for his Lord.

I can not, of course, on this sad occasion give any detailed account of the noble and useful life brought to so unexpected a close, or enter into any complete analysis of the characteristics that gave him honored position, and which will preserve his precious memory. His was really a superb character—and his a fruitful, beautiful life. He had some splendid traits of character that commanded admiration, and are worthy of all emulation.

But some facts will be stated, not so much in loving eulogy of the sainted dead, as to impress valuable lessons upon the living.

Our brother was the fortunate son of a model Christian home—a home presided over by a father who was the real prophet, priest and king of his household. He was reared at the altars of the church. Diligently taught to fear God and keep his commandments, he grew up a child of the sanctuary, and in early life felt that God had designed him for the work of the ministry. His father was an able preacher—one of the most influential leaders in early Mississippi Methodism. Our brother, therefore, had a rich inheritance, not only of good blood, but of godly example, Christian instruction, answered prayer, and apostolic spirit. The atmosphere of that home was pure and wholesome, and fragrant with the breath of the Holy Spirit. At an early age he entered the ministry, and from that December day in 1858, when he was admitted into the Mississippi Conference, to the hour of his peaceful death on yesterday morning, he had but one work, and was a devout student of one book. The record of his earnest ministry — as circuit preacher, city pastor, and presiding elder—is known to his brethren, and is forever written in the chronicles of the skies.

He was a Christian of almost excessive modesty. His normal spiritual attitude was that of one sitting at the Master's feet, content to look up and learn wisdom from the lips of the Infallible. He never talked about himself. There was an utter absence of that vanity that sometimes takes the form of religion. His was an humble, reverent spirit. He never talked glibly and flippantly about spiritual things. He never claimed that familiarity with the Lord which is little less than profanity. His very tones, in prayer and preaching, indicated his sense of awe in the immediate presence of God. An humble, modest, gentle Christian was Ransom J. Jones.

He was an edifying, instructive preacher. Though without the exceptional gifts and attractive graces of the popular orator, he excelled in lucid statement and logical argument. Thoroughly acquainted with our theological standards, and an earnest student of the Book, he provided "food convenient" for his congregations. He was an expository preacher, and never brought unbeaten oil into the sanctuary. And his ministry was re-enforced by a consistent, beautiful Christian life. Much is made, and very properly, of the popular phrase, "The man behind the gun;" so it is the man behind the sermon—the man behind the pastor—that gives power and efficiency to his message and ministry. Here was a thoroughly good man—an unsullied character—to give divine energy to his work. Such an one is God's unanswerable argument with the world.

He was free from self-seeking. All his ambitions were for the cause he espoused, the church he loved, the flag he followed. Self was subordinated to service. Though not without proper self-appreciation — conscious of his strength as well as his limitations —he sought first the kingdom of God and its upbuilding. With a loving, loyal, obedient spirit he accepted the task assigned him, and sought to do his work in the spirit of his Master.

He was a man of remarkable prudence. Singularly free from rashness in speech or conduct, and always generous and brotherly in spirit, I doubt if he ever had many occasions to apologize for a hasty word, or even to correct a wrong impression. His tongue rarely betrayed him, and his good temper seemed never to forsake him. When in the presence of those who were discussing personal character, he either interjected a kindly, modifying word, or else preserved a silence that was golden. His judgments of others were most brotherly. Without suspicion, he had that charity that thinketh no evil. He was never busy trying to account for the conduct of his fellow-men, and imagining that they were controlled by unworthy motives. Dominated by high principles and divine purposes himself, he had an open eye to discover good in others. We are told in Holy Scripture that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Judged by that divine standard—the standard of his heart-thoughts — Ransom Jones was no ordinary man.

He never harbored resentments. I have no doubt he died as he had lived—without the thinnest veil between him and the heart of any human being. He had no revenges. I never heard him relate an unpleasant incident with which he was in anywise connected. If wrong was ever done him, he never repeated or paraded it. In his own bosom it died, overcome by the goodness of his great soul.

Bro. Jones was an eminently wise counselor. His was a judicial temperament. He could not be a bigot, or a fanatic, or a partisan. Though decided in his convictions and clear-cut in his opinions, his judgments were never warped by prejudice or inflamed by passion. When all the facts were presented, I would accept his opinion on any proposition almost as readily as any man I have ever known.

He ardently loved the church of his choice, which was the church of his fathers. Reared at its altars, accepting without reservation its statement of theology, admiring its wonderful polity, and rejoicing in its miraculous history, he was an intelligent and loyal Methodist. It was no slender tie that bound him to his church. I have often thought him a real master of ecclesiastical law. Oftener than any member of his Conference was he called upon to preside over church courts, where delicate and vital issues were involved.

But he was most conspicuous for the admirable poise of his character—the even balance of his faculties — which gave a charming symmetry and beautiful simplicity to his life. He had no abnormal development; and, therefore, no erratic opinions or eccentric tendencies. His whole life was projected on straight lines. May the virtues of this noble friend and beloved brother be emulated by those of us who remain, that at last we enter into his high reward!

Of course, I will not invade the sacred inner circle of the home, and say aught to deepen the sense of loss. There he was loved to idolatry. May each of his dear ones imitate his example, and be enriched by the benediction of his pure spirit! Into the grave we tenderly lay his handsome form, and looking up, exclaim, "My father, my father! the chariots of Israel, and the horsemen thereof."

SOME REAL INCIDENTS WHICH DID NOT HAPPEN.

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

It had been a cold week in February. There had been freezing weather, and a reduction in the temperature had brought several inches of snow. Only a few, therefore, assembled the following Sunday at "Brushy Fork" Church for worship and instruction. But Pastor Smith preached an unusually impressive sermon, and the result was, two young men presented themselves for church membership. They related their experiences the next day to the pastor, and the following Sabbath the church voted them as eligible subjects for baptism.

As the weather was still cold, the candidates suggested that their baptism be postponed a few weeks; but Brother Smith believed that the Lord would take care of his ordinance, and, if necessary, perform a miracle, rather than his children should suffer serious consequences. So that afternoon there was a small assemblage of people on the banks of "Brushy Creek" to witness the baptizing. Brother Smith made the usual talk of a half hour about "Christ going down into the water," "liquid grave," etc., and the candidates were immersed. As a result of the exposure, one of the young men died with pneumonia, and the other was sick a couple of weeks. Brother Smith himself was "physically indisposed" several days.

No sooner had he recovered from his "indisposition" than one of the deacons of his church came hurriedly for him to go see a sick daughter. Mary was not a member of the church, and was dangerously ill. Brother Smith went at once, talked and prayed with her, after which she expressed a desire to immediately unite with the church. But the father and physician present would not consent to her being immersed. They knew the consequences would prove immediately fatal. There was some hope of her recovery, but they did not wish to destroy that hope by having her dipped in water. (Granting that an immersion would not have further endangered her life, the reader observes the great inconvenience of immersion. It was several miles to "Brushy Creek," the only place where the mode could be performed, unless a large bath-tub could be found.) Miss Mary requested Brother Smith to baptize her by sprinkling, but he refused, and stated that immersion only is baptism. Miss Mary lingered a few days, and died out of the church and without Christian baptism.

The Winter passed away; then came Summer. Another protracted service was held at "Brushy Fork," which resulted in the accession of only one member. He was a tall, cadaverous man, measuring six feet eleven inches in height, and was nearly two feet taller than Brother Smith. His baptism was to take place the following Sunday afternoon, and the people, remembering the baptism of Miss Jones the year before, were anxious to see Pastor Smith handle a man as much taller than himself as Miss Matilda was fatter. They knew that if he led the candidate into the water waist deep (to the candidate), the water would strike him just below his eyes; hence a large crowd gathered to witness the spectacle. But Brother Smith had stolen a march on the assemblage. He did not make a previous visit and ask the candidate this time to "squat," but several days before he had a box half full of rocks sunk into the stream, upon which he purposed standing. He descended with the candidate into the water, mounted the box, and, leading him around on the deep side, he dipped his head and shoulders with little inconvenience before a disappointed multitude.

The "Brushy Fork" community was such a Baptist stronghold that the Methodist Conference had not sent a regular circuit rider into the community until a few months previous. It was then attached to the "Hopewell circuit" as missionary territory. The Methodist circuit rider got permission to preach in a schoolhouse, where he started a protracted meeting. The people came in large numbers, through curiosity at first, and when the announcement was made that several sermons would be preached on the mode of baptism, the excitement knew no bounds.

Brother Smith came out himself to take notes and counteract any impressions derogatory to Immersion. The "ignorant" circuit rider discussed at length the primary meaning of "baptize" in classic Greek literature, quoted many lexicons, showed that the word is used in the Scriptures in connection with ceremonial purification by sprinkling, made innumerable quotations from the fathers proving that immersion was first practiced in a state of entire nakedness, and concluded by showing the indecency, impracticability and inconvenience of immersion, the latter of which the people of "Brushy Fork" had had recent demonstrations. The result was, one hundred and twenty-seven united with the Methodist Church, sixty-eight of whom were Baptists formerly.

When the Methodist circuit rider made his next round into the "Brushy Fork" neighborhood, at the conclusion of his sermon Brother Smith arose and expressed a desire to change church relations. He spoke at length of having been "a Baptist for a quarter of a century, and that no one was more certain of being right," etc. His credentials were subsequently accepted, and to-day he is a Methodist circuit rider within the bounds of the A. B. Conference. Shortly after Pastor Smith and the larger part of his congregation joined the Methodists, the remaining members met together and turned them all out of the Baptist Church for having acted in such "recreant way."

COLUMBUS CHURCH IN GREAT AFFLICTION.

BY REV. T. W. LEWIS.

On Dec. 10 I returned from Conference to begin my second year's work as pastor of the Columbus Church. In a few days I learned that Col. Meek's family was sick, and I went to see them. Several members of the family were complaining, but no one was seriously sick. The grandmother, "Muddie," as everybody called her, had a very severe cold, but no one seemed to feel alarmed over her condition. On Sunday, Dec. 15 just as the sun went down, her spirit went home to God.

Thus passed away Mrs. E. L. Meek, in her eighty-third year. She was the mother of Mrs. S. M. Meek, her first husband being Col. Cannon. Afterwards she married the poet, Judge A. B. Meek, one of the most brilliant men of his time.

Sister Meek was herself a brilliant woman and a lovely Christian character.

On the following Saturday afternoon Col. Samuel M. Meek passed away. For several weeks he had suffered with some dropsical trouble, but no one apprehended any danger until the day of his death. Col. Meek was nearly sixty-seven years old. He was an eminent lawyer, and defended 232 persons charged with the crime of murder. In his palmy days he was the leading lawyer of East Mississippi. He was State senator at the time of his death. His death was a great blow to his wife, with whom he had lived for forty-five years. About fifteen months ago she was severely crippled, but was able to go about on crutches.

On Christmas Day, just after the sun had passed his meridian height as the beauty and glory of the day, the spirit of Mrs. Mary L. Meek passed over the last river. Grief and a severe cold hurried her to the grave. The seven grown children sat aghast and dumbfounded as they saw their mother borne away to her last resting-place.

The oldest daughter, Miss Alice Meek, had worn herself out in waiting on the sick, and she took her bed before her mother's death. Pneumonia set up, and the skill of two eminent physicians was exhausted to no avail, and on Sunday, Dec. 29, Miss Alice Meek quietly went to sleep to await the resurrection of the just. With bowed heads and gentle footsteps a host of friends laid her beside her parents in the beautiful Friendship Cemetery. Four members of the same family have died in two weeks. How strange, how sad!

We had not returned from the burial of Miss Meek when we learned that another member of our church, one of our official members, was dead. M. F. McWilliams, an engineer, was in the railroad wreck near Itta Bena, Dec. 30, and when his engine turned over he was so badly hurt that he died in a few hours. A nobler man never lived. He was gentle, amiable, religious. He loved God, was devoted to his church, and never happier than in his own home.

In twenty days five of our members have gone into that other land. Surely the Lord is leading us by ways that we knew not, and into paths we had not known.

Columbus, Miss., Dec. 31, 1901.

FROM THE WORK.

MR. EDITOR: We are beginning our second year among the kind people of Madison circuit. This work, one of the oldest in the Mississippi Conference, I suppose, got its name from the county in which it is situated. Madison county has given to the Methodist Church, South, a number of prominent persons, namely: Dr. C. G. Andrews, Miss Belle Kearney, Dr. J. W. Lambuth, and Bishop C. B. Galloway. Some distinguished divines, namely, Drs. Carradine and Black, have dispensed the gospel on this circuit.

For some years this work, that formerly was among the best circuits in the Conference, was not so prosperous; but I trust that it has made a permanent change for the better. For the last few years it has been steadily advancing. We have here the people with the ability and intelligence, if they will only do so, to make Madison circuit again take rank among the very best circuits of the Conference. This year they have built, I think, one among the best parsonages in the Conference. To do this, the people generally in the bounds of the work, regardless of denominations, responded readily and liberally. One brother proposed to give twice as much as anyone else. His wife gave $100, and so he gave $200. Another gave $75, another $50; several gave $25 each. One brother, a member of another church, gave $25. Quite a number gave $10, and smaller amounts. Some who gave these smaller amounts gave as liberally in proportion to their ability as those who gave larger amounts. The house is finished and painted, paid for and insured for three years. I think the good ladies will continue this work till they have furnished it real nicely. Just a few days since they sent in a nice set of dishes. On Christmas Day the people of Madison and community seemed determined that we should have a good opportunity of trying these dishes; so baskets filled with nice things ready prepared for the table came from nearly all the homes in and around Madison. May Christ bless all these homes!

The people of Ridgeland, a thriving little town just two and a half miles south of Madison, moved the Wesley Chapel Church from the country into town, and put it in real good shape. All the Conference collections were paid up in full, and an advance of $100 on support of pastor. We are planning and praying to do the very best year's work we can among this people.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss.

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.)

Motto for the New Year.

BY A. M. MAYO.

Never in the history of our Zion has there been a more eager desire for knowledge of all that relates to practical Sunday-school work than during the first year of our new century. Conventions, Conferences and Institutes everywhere held and planned for bringing together scores of eager workers, and the inquiry of all may be summed up in two interrogatories, "What," and "How?" The first relates to our field, with its vast opportunities; the second to the best methods for cultivating that field, so as to secure the largest harvest for the Master, whose we are and whom we serve.

We might fill columns in writing of these great themes, and we trust the many workers in Mississippi and Louisiana will use this Department in the dear old ADVOCATE very largely during the coming year. But in this "New Year's issue" we would lead our readers back of all methods and plans, beyond the consideration of all other needs, to our supreme need of a personal and intimate acquaintance with Jesus Christ, and with the Father through him.

As a "Motto for the New Year," we, therefore, suggest these burning words from that wonderful prayer of the Apostle Paul, recorded in Phil. iii, 10:

"THAT I MAY KNOW HIM!"

Read verses 8 to 12 two or three times, asking the Holy Spirit to reveal to you its fullest meaning; then read again this New Year's motto, which, in a heart-cry of five words, reveals at once the supreme need of the world, and of every human heart, and the unspeakable gift of God, which fully meets that need.

BOOK OF ACTS AGAIN.

Christian workers everywhere are awake and alive to the value of the sinners for the ensuing six months in the Book of Acts. Two weeks ago we had an article on the subject, and we desire to emphasize what was then said, and to propose a written examination on the book, to be held at the different Sunday-school Conventions. The Sunday-school Board of the Mississippi Conference is considering the subject, and will probably soon announce their plans and prizes.

As in Genesis we studied the foundations of the Jewish Church, so in Acts we will study the foundations of the Christian Church. Like Genesis, the Book of Acts is a book of beginnings—the beginning of the dispensation of the Spirit. Let us study the scope, the object, and the teachings of this great book. Let us catch its spirit, its zeal, its energy; let us get the enduement of power there promised. Let us pray for the conversion of the children under our care, and that a revival wave may sweep over our three Conferences.

In the report of the Sunday-school Board of the North Mississippi Conference it was recommended that a public installation of the officers and teachers be held either at the close or at the beginning of the Conference year. It is a good suggestion, and has worked well wherever tried. It magnifies the Sunday-school and the teacher's office in the congregation. The recommendation, also, that teacher's hold office for only one year, we believe to be wise. We would be glad to have these subjects discussed in this column, and if any school in our two sister States has tried it, we would be glad to have them tell us about it.

We recently read an article in an exchange objecting to the grading of Sunday-schools, because the writer thought it tended to destroy the influence of the teacher over the pupils, and break the ties of love that united them. This is in line with the objection we once heard urged against the Home Department—that it encouraged lazines.

In the January Magazine the names of sixteen Study Circles are recorded, and the Lake Charles, La., Sunday-school heads the list, with Bro. Mayo as leader. We congratulate them, and believe they are building better than they know. Tomnolen circuit, Durant district, North Mississippi Conference, stands fifth on the list, with Rev. T. E. Marshall as leader. These two schools are the only ones on the list from our two sister States, but the February issue will probably contain a large number of them. It is a great movement, and promises to become world-wide.

Intercollegiate Games.

BY REV. I. L. PEEBLES.

It is our purpose to controvert the claims of the advocates of intercollegiate games, and see if we can not, by unanswerable arguments, convince some of them, at least, and especially those who are wise men, that they are wrong, however honest they may be in their present convictions.

First. They claim that such games are conducive to the greatest physical good of those who indulge them. Activity is conducive to the greatest good of the body, as a rule, we admit, but we do not admit that intercollegiate games are, or any other violent exercise is. Indeed, common sense and our records are against such a position. Violent exercises, such as that of the intercollegiate games, enlarges and weakens the heart. In some cases they atrophy it. Such exercises may develop great muscularity, but what is that worth to an individual if he does not live long? That such exercises do not tend to long life is evident from the short lives of pugilists, and also of those who do the hardest physical labor. Women live longer than men, according to the grand average of life, and yet see how moderate and inexhausting their exercises.

Second. It is claimed that intercollegiate games are conducive to the greatest mental development. This, we are glad to say, is not the case. If such unnatural exercises were conducive to the highest mental development then why do we not find it thus among pugilists? Who has ever heard of any great mental development among pugilists? Are the most perfect minds pugilists? Is it not true that the highest-developed minds on record were persons of very moderate physical exercise, and some of very little even of that kind? Did not Mr. Wesley prohibit plays of any kind in his school at Kingswood, and allowed only the exercise of moderate walking or work in the garden? Was not his knowledge of medicine sufficient to enable him to see the folly and damage of violent exercises? Certainly it was. Oh, that some of his sons would learn from him those most sensible things!

Third. It is claimed that intercollegiate games develop the morals of the students. How this is true of right morals, we can not see. If the morals of these games are in harmony with a fiery declaration of one of their advocates, when he said in a speech in their defense, "What if a boy is killed occasionally, if so much good results to others?" then we understand. Such morality! The Lord deliver us from it forever! Awful, indeed, for the church of God to sanction such games.

Notice.

To the Ministers of Southern Methodism:

We, E. E. Riggs and S. L. Riggs, feel constrained by the Holy Ghost to sustain the same relation (local preachers) to the church this year as last, and give our time exclusively to revival work throughout the church. We conducted twenty-four meetings in the Louisiana Conference the past year, resulting in over seven hundred conversions. We can give as our endorsers the best men in this Conference. Write to us at once about your work for this new year. We work separately when necessary, but it will pay you to employ us together where your church will justify it. Address RIGGS BROS,
Ocean Springs, Miss.

Uncelfishness seeks no human recognition. To do good to those who do not appreciate it, to serve those who will never even know by whom the service was rendered, are marks of true unselfishness. Whether our service is recognized or not is of small consequence. But it is of consequence for us to make sure that our service is freely rendered without thought of recognition.—Southern Churchman.

If I can put one touch of rosy sunshine into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.—George Macdonald.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WEBB, MISS.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: Will you please give space in your paper for an account of a storm that struck the parsonage in this little village the past few days? On Wednesday last it reached a high gale, and when all was over, as a result, we found in the parsonage turkey, ham, sugar, coffee, rice, canned goods of various kinds, and other nice things for the family in abundance. Since then there has been a continuous gentle breeze, of kind words and kind deeds, that make the heart of a preacher glad, not so much for the nice things which make life pleasant, but because of the love, friendship, and good wishes of which these are tokens. When we thought surely all was over, lo and behold! just at twilight, on Christmas Eve, in came a large box filled to overflowing with nice things, and a purse of seven dollars.

In every way we have received a cordial welcome by these good people. Several of the merchants have opened their stores to us, and bid us welcome to their goods at cost. For all of which we are profoundly grateful.

We hope to do a good work for the Master in this great country—a country that has greater promise for the future than almost any other country in the world.

May the good Lord bless our dear editor and the ADVOCATE!

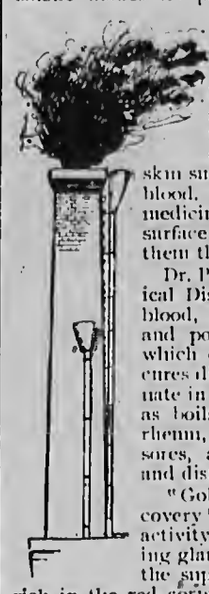
WHERE THERE'S SMOKE

There's fire, the saying runs, and so as a general rule the saying holds true. The fire is unseen, hidden, but the ascending smoke makes its presence undoubted.



Similarly you can argue from eruptions of the skin to corrupt blood. You can't see the blood, but the pimples, boils, etc., which mar the skin surely indicate impure blood. For this reason the medicine which cures these surface blemishes must cure them through the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, removes the waste and poisonous substances which corrupt it, and thus cures diseases which originate in impure blood, such as boils, pimples, salt-rheum, tetter, eczema, sores, and other painful and disfiguring diseases.

"Golden Medical Discovery" also increases the activity of the blood-making glands, thus increasing the supply of pure blood, rich in the red corpuscles of health.

"It gives me much pleasure to testify to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Miss Annie Wells, of Fergussons Wharf, Isle of Wight Co., Va. "I can say honestly and candidly that it is the grandest medicine ever compounded for purifying the blood. I suffered terribly with rheumatism, and pimples on the skin and swelling in my knees and feet so that I could not walk. I spent about twenty dollars paying doctors' bills but received no benefit. A year or two ago I was reading one of your Memorandum Books and I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription,' and am entirely cured."

Accept no substitute for 'Golden Medical Discovery.' There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 9, 1902.

If the energy some industrious idlers waste in experimenting at something that, if successful, would be of no practical benefit to the world, were put to use on a farm or in a shop, or even in running a muck-cart, they would be happier, and better off, and the world would respect them for their industry and thrift. As it is, they are regarded as nothing but useless cranks.

Education alone will not make one a useful member of society. We have known persons of average intelligence, well schooled, even in the higher branches of learning, who were content to live at the expense of others. They contributed absolutely nothing to their own support or the benefit of the community. They were harmless creatures. That is the most that can be said in their favor.

Some men take the gospel to be a personal appeal for personal ends, and accept it only for the enjoyment, present and prospective, that it promises. It is no wonder, therefore, that, while happy in their experience, they are utterly selfish. They seem not to know that God and humanity have any claims on their hands and purses. They never relieve human distress. Appeals in behalf of missions fall powerless at their feet. Why this is so, who can explain?

The fact that a military commander who was able to win victory and fame in war was not able to overcome his passion for strong drink, leads the Interior to say, "Few things can be more pitiful than to see a man win a good name at the cannon's mouth, and lose it at the mouth of a bottle." That is true; yet hundreds of men in and out of the army plead for the re-establishment of the canteen, that their weaker brethren may have ready access to liquor. The example of one drunken officer ought to set a whole regiment against the bottle.

We do not know how long Bro. Bailey, he of the Baptist, at Jackson, Miss., has been pecking at the theological tree, but we are sure that at least on one or two sections of the tree he has not yet "got his bill through the bark." When he gets through studying baptism and the moral state of grown-up sinners, he may find time to study the relation of infants to Christ. As they have no place in the church to which he belongs, he does not seem to know what the atonement has done for them. But Bro. Bailey is not lonesome. He has plenty of company.

THE CHURCH'S SAVING POWER.

When it is asserted that the church can effect the evangelization of the world within the next thirty-five years, the faith of many is staggered. They see that nearly two thousand years ago the work began, and that today but little more than half the earth's population has been reached, and forthwith they are confronted with this proposition: If it has taken the gospel nineteen hundred years to reach half the world, how many years will be required to reach the whole of it? A calculation is made, and it is found that even with present numbers and resources, many years of toil will come and go before the gospel accomplishes its purposes. How, then, can the work be done inside of a generation?

In making our calculation, we must take into consideration, not only the time that has elapsed from the beginning to the present day, the progress that has been made, and the number of Christians at work, and the resources at command, but also the spiritual power by which the church is moved. This power, in all calculations wherein figures are employed, is left out of the question. When recognized, and made prominent in any calculation, it is clear that those who assert the power of the church to convert the world inside of a generation have ground for their faith.

It is not asserted that the world will be converted inside of the first third of the present century, but that the work is possible. That proposition, looked at in the light of the divine promise and the saving power of the church, can be readily accepted.

When we speak of the saving power of the church, we do not refer to the numbers and material resources at command. These are important, but to be relied on only as auxiliary agencies. Numbers and resources are nothing, unless put to active use in the name of the Master and for the sake of the Master. Many churches, with large resources at command, count naught as missionary agencies. They scarcely keep alive the work at home; the salvation of the heathen they seem not to know is part of their business. Nor does the saving power of the church consist in the use of ordinances. True, the church only is empowered to administer the ordinances of the gospel; but ordinances have no saving virtue, for salvation comes, "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "In Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." Men submit to the ordinances as evidence of their faith, not because they expect through them to obtain salvation. No man has a right to intervene between God and a human soul, and claim to absolve the soul from sin and guilt. Christ's church does not presume to confer such authority.

The church's saving power lies in the courage, activity and fidelity of the membership. Without these qualities a church in any community would accomplish nothing in a life-time. The lack of these tells us why some churches with wealth and numbers are practically useless as soul savers, or propagators of the gospel in regions beyond. Sin must be attacked in its strongholds. Every available man must be at work, and unyielding adherence to the cause must be given. There is no discharge in this war, and no excuse allowed for shirking or faint-heartedness. Nor is there any reason why any one professing to be a lover of his Lord should fear or fail to work. "Lo, I am with you," is the animating voice of the Captain of our salvation. The Holy Spirit inspires, empowers, and sustains the church. "Without me," said Jesus "ye can do nothing." St. Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." This power came upon the church on the day of Pentecost, and under its influence, a handful of despised men and unknown women were instrumental in the salvation of three thousand souls inside of six or eight hours. In less than a week about ten thousand were converted to God. These early Christians verified the prophecy, "One shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight." And "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers."

If such results were possible, and actually accomplished under difficulties by a few men in the early days, is there any room to doubt that the church of to-day, with millions of members and inexhaustible resources at command, inspired and sustained by the Holy Spirit, can, within a generation not only give the gospel to the world, but bring the world under its influence?

Nobody can fail to see that the church, during the past quarter of a century, has been active and almost marvelously successful. A glance at the world's map will show its progress. During the past two years the field has enlarged, and the doors of opportunity are wider than ever before. The missionary pulse has been quickened, and the faith of the church has been strengthened. Let us arm ourselves for the work. "Let us go up and possess the land, for we are well able to overcome it."

CHURCH OUTLOOK FOR 1902.

A writer in one of our popular daily papers, in its issue of Jan. 4, presents the "Outlook for 1902 in the Religious World." The article does not give statistics; only a general survey is made, and opinions expressed. If the writer is a Presbyterian or a Methodist, his opinions, we take it, are governed by his wishes, for certainly, so far as Methodism is concerned, his opinions are as baseless as a castle in the air. If the author belongs to another denomination, he is not well informed and has based his conclusions on newspaper reports.

Of the nine religious bodies in the United States having the largest membership, four, it is said, have a promising outlook; "in three it is fair, and in at least two it is ominous." In the group of churches put foremost we find the two Methodist bodies, North and South. The outlook in each is declared to be "promising." But just what he means by "promising" is not clear, unless reference is had exclusively to the spiritual interests of the church, for under the head of "Cost of American Churches," he declares, "like the year just closed, there is in the year just beginning nothing very encouraging. Finances are not good, in spite of the prosperous times." This may be true in regard to the churches in general, but, if we compare the year past with former years, even in finances, it will appear that prospects are bright in Southern Methodism. Last year we made advance in every line of work. Our preachers were better paid than usual. More money for the various benevolences was collected, and the increase in the number of conversions and additions to the church has not been so large in several years. The Lord has graciously blessed our labors. We have peace and harmony throughout our borders.

Notwithstanding the "promising outlook," the writer tells us that:

"Methodists, South, are somewhat perturbed over issues that must come to the front at Dallas, where the quadrennial Conference meets next May. These issues have to do with money accepted by the Publishing House for losses during the Civil War, and voted by Congress. The developments since the grant was made are familiar, and public interest is at tension to see what Methodists will do. Some changes may come in pastoral time-limit, Southern Methodists having been watching the experiments of their Northern brethren, but it is considered too early yet to note results."

The above paragraph is open to criticism, but we let it pass with the remark that "the church is not perturbed" over the Publishing House war claim to any great extent. For aught we know, the outside world may be straining itself to the utmost tension to find out what the church is going to do, but the church itself is quiet, confident in the hope that the General Conference, in dealing with the matter, will deal according to the law and the facts. There has been some talk of late, but nothing like great excitement. An attempt was made to create sentiment on the subject in some sections by scattering an anonymous leaflet, gotten up in the form of a congressional report, which leaflet was without date or address, and mailed to all who received it, as far as we have heard, with one exception, on a mail train. Whether the anonymous document was intended to deceive or not, it did deceive. There were some who thought it a genuine and authentic document from the United States Senate. But it created no excitement. It fell still-born.

The next statement in the document under notice is that "Methodists, North and South, hope soon to arrive at organic union. All rests with the South, and an advance step may be made at Dallas" when the General Conference convenes. If all rests with the South, there will be great quiet for a long time to come on the subject of organic union. If there be those among us whose wish on this question is father to the thought, they will realize the truth of the proverb, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick."

JOINT PUBLISHING HOUSE.

By the action of the General Missionary Committee and of the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society steps are being taken looking toward the establishment of a union Publishing House in Shanghai under the joint management of the M. E. Church and the M. E Church, South. At the last meeting of the Board a committee, composed of Drs. Goucher, Eaton, and Leonard, and Messrs. Skidmore and Dobbins, was appointed to evolve a plan for securing the necessary funds for carrying out the proposed enterprise.

It was first given out, and published in many papers, that the General Missionary Committee of the M. E. Church voted to appropriate $40,000, and to turn over property valued at $10,000, and to put the capital under the control of the agents of the M. E. Church, South, for the purpose of establishing a Publishing House in China. The above paragraph, taken from the Christian Advocate, New York, puts the matter in a different light. There was no appropriation of money in the treasury, or of funds to be raised in the regular way. The enterprise was agreed to, and a committee appointed "to evolve a plan for securing the necessary funds." The enterprise is not to be under the control of the agents of the M. E. Church, South, but is to be "a union Publishing House," under "the joint management" of the two churches.

The reported action of our brethren struck us at the time as being generous, but illegal. The matter, as set forth by Dr. Buckley, is more business like, but the ground whereon the action was taken is not shown. That is the business of the M. E. Church, not ours. As to our own church, we are sure our Agents have no authority, either to enter into a co-partnership with the M. E. Church, or to borrow its capital, or consent to a joint management, or in any other way to make us responsible for money that does not belong to us.

Our Agents are authorized by the General Conference to establish a Publishing House in Shanghai. The sum of $50,000 was voted for that purpose, and the proper steps have been taken to inaugurate the enterprise. We understand that the M. E. Church has no missionary stations in all that part of China. Her interests are wholly in another section, and distant from Shanghai. Why it should be deemed advisable to unite our publishing interests there, we do not understand, save that it will tend to general, organic union as intimated by General Rusling. We can not afford to draw a Trojan horse inside our walls.

IS IT SO BAD AS THIS?

We have noticed for months past—we might say for years—in certain quarters, what seemed to us to be reckless and criminal assaults on men, but we were unaware of the extent of the damage that has been inflicted. If what the Texas Baptist Standard says is true, the evil is wider spread and more deadly than we thought. Alluding to the condition of things in Arkansas, which some brethren think is such as to force them to publish a paper "as a medium through which to communicate with the constructive forces throughout" the State, the Standard says, after expressing pity for the brethren who have undertaken the work: "The man who assumes under present conditions to take a position of any sort of trust or leadership among Southern Baptists, takes his life in his hands. We are living in an age of ecclesiastical character-assassins, and in our denomination they do much abound. They set upon every man who is not willing to yield to their unreasonable demands."

Is the case so bad as this? If it is, it is only a question of time when there will be disruption, and the organization of another body calling itself the church. We trust our brother is mistaken as to the risk one runs in taking prominent position in the church which he represents. Doubtless, there is some ground for his statement. The reckless spirit of criticism that spared neither age nor position, and that went so far as to impugn men's integrity, once obtained largely in our own communion; but a better day has dawned, and there is a better state of feeling existing among us. We trust our confrere will be able soon to say the same of his own great church which is doing so much for the cause of Christ.

BOOK NOTICE.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL STUDIES; OR, EXPOSITORY AND HOMILETICAL NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL LESSONS FOR 1902. By E. E. Hoss, D. D., LL.D. Editor Nashville Christian Advocate. Nashville, Tenn.: Barbee & Smith, Agents. Price, 50 cents, net.

We have in this volume a complete commentary on the Sunday-school lessons for the present year, and we unhesitatingly recommend the book to all our Sunday-school officers and students. We have used Dr. Hoss' notes ever since the first volume was issued, eight or nine years ago. We have never found any book more helpful to us in the study and understanding of the lessons. Higher praise than this we can not give. And the Agents sell it at a price that puts it within the reach of all who really desire a Sunday-school help. We hope it may have an extensive sale among our people. If Mississippi readers find it inconvenient to send to Nashville, they may apply to Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., who will take pleasure in supplying them. The book and postage will be about 58 cents.

We have been overwhelmed for two weeks, and more, with requests to change addresses. To comply requires much time and a great deal of trouble. We are doing our best. There will, doubtless, be mistakes and omissions; but no request will be overlooked or improperly entered on purpose. It is to our interest to do right; but we are human and sometimes fail. Our patrons will please bear with our infirmities.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

PERSONAL.

Rev. M F. Johnson, the newly appointed pastor at Carrollton Avenue, this city, has entered upon his work. The church is well pleased, and the propects good.

Rev. D. W. Babb, writing from Batesville, Miss., says, "We are moving on nicely; never had a more hearty welcome in any work." He is serving Batesville for the third year.

Rev. T. H. Porter, of the North Mississippi Conference, did nobly last year in behalf of this ADVOCATE, and has renewed his efforts this year with success. He is cultivating his field well.

Hon. C. R. Cocke, a member of the Mississippi Legislature, and a member of our church at Water Valley, was in the city a few days since. He gave us the honor of a call, and renewed his subscription to the ADVOCATE.

Rev. O. L. Savage has been heartily welcomed for the third year to Courtland charge, where he has done good work. In this remark we include the good work he has done for the ADVOCATE. We thank him most heartily.

Many friends of Rev. W. H. Sanders, now at Fayette, Miss, will be glad to hear that he is comfortably located in his new charge, and has a delightful place, with splendid people. We thank him for an invitation to visit him during the year.

Dr. W. C. Black, former editor of the ADVOCATE, spent two or three days in the city last week. He has entered upon his third year at First Church, Jackson, Miss., and under his able ministry the charge flourishes. The Doctor is in fine health.

Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Corinth district, writes us from Memphis under stress of great anxiety. He was in the city with his little son, Wilbur, who had just undergone an operation, and though doing well at the time, had not passed all danger. The family were deeply anxious. We trust by this time the little one is in a fair way to recover. May the anxious hearts be relieved!

Rev. M. C. Manley, an old and honored superannuated preacher of the Louisiana Conference, passed to his reward on Dec. 31, 1901, at Rayne, La., in the seventy-second year of his age. The editor knew Bro. Manley forty years ago; has not seen him in all these years, but we are assured that he has been true and faithful to his Lord and the church. He rests in peace. Some one, acquainted, will give us a memoir in due time.

Where Do You Live?

It makes no difference whether you live in the odorous atmosphere of a city, or on a dust covered plain; in the dry altitude of the mountains, or the moist air of the sea coast; in the frigid zone of the north, or the torrid heat of the tropics, you can get your biscuit, crackers and wafers perfectly fresh in the In-er-seal Patent Package. The only method known for preserving the flavor and crispness of delicate baking until it reaches the table.

When you order Soda, Milk, Graham Oatmeal and Butter Thin Biscuit, Vanilla Wafers and Ginger Snaps, don't forget to ask for the kind that come in the In-er-seal Patent Package. Look for the trade-mark design on the end of each package.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could the ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

MONTH AFTER MONTH a cold sticks, and seems to tear holes in your throat. Are you aware that even a stubborn and long-neglected cold is cured with Allen's Lung Balsam? Cough and worry no longer.

Millsaps College News.

Dr. W. B. Murrah preached on Sunday at the West Jackson Church.

The recent Christmas holidays were spent quietly at home by most of the members of the faculty. Profs. Bishop and Young spent a number of days in New Orleans with friends, and, doubtless, unearthed many discoveries in that historic spot. Campus and college halls were almost entirely deserted, save for the occasional visit of an alumnus.

We note with pleasure the visit during the holidays of our founder's daughter, Mrs. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis. The reception in honor of her and her husband, given by Major and Mrs. R. W. Millsaps, was one of the events of the social season.

Miss Frances Ellison, who has charge of the work in elocution at the Woman's College at Oxford, visited her mother, Mrs. J. W. Ellison, during the holidays.

A number of new students have come to us since the holidays. Some of these are: Walter A. Lee, Black Hawk, Miss.; John Swilley, Foster, Miss.; Truly Noler, Houston, Miss.; Hudgins S. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.; Ben Tindall, Water Valley, Miss.

We feel justified in the assertion that our magazine, the Collegian, has never had a better year than the present. The December number has a story by the editor-in-chief, Mr. Duren; an historical sketch by Mr. F. E. Gunter; a criticism of the Southern poet, Berryhill, by Mr. W. A. Williams, and a poem of merit, "a Family Row," by Mr. J. R. Conntiss. The special departments are well kept up, and their editors are evidently putting in solid work upon them. We must especially commend the articles bearing upon and making suggestions concerning phases of our college life.

The final examinations commence on Jan. 29, running until Feb. 8. The second term will begin on Feb. 4.

We have lately had with us Bro. Holloman, our beloved presiding elder, who conducted the chapel exercises. Everyone, from president to preparatory student, is always glad to welcome Bro. Holloman.

We were much gratified at a recent visit made to us by Prof. H. M. Hamil, who is doing such a great work for our Sunday-schools. Owing to a misunderstanding, the talk to the students that he wished to make was not given, but he outlined his work in a talk of some length before a party consisting of President Murrah, several of the faculty and students, and a number of visitors. We trust that he will be able soon to make us a longer visit.

DEAR DR. BYE CO., DALLAS, TEX.:

I feel that it is my duty to write and tell you how much I appreciate your Oil Cure, for it is certainly a permanent cure. Millsaps College.

The second term of our current session will begin Tuesday, Feb. 4. This will be a favorable time for new students to enter. The college is enjoying a season of great prosperity. We have enrolled two hundred and thirty-five students. Our plans for the near future look to development in several important directions. This will call for enlargement in equipment. With prospects so inviting we get restless under the limitations imposed by the lack of means to meet pressing demands. If Twentieth Century subscription could be promptly paid, our advancement would be greatly facilitated. I trust the pastors will look after these subscriptions, and that we may yet get substantial help from this source.

New Orleans Preachers' Meeting.

The meeting was opened by devotional exercises at 11 A. M. in the lecture-room of Carondelet Street Church. The following members were present: Dr. W. H. LaPrade, Dr. F. N. Parker, Revs. R. H. Wynn, W. W. Drake, J. F. Foster, P. H. Fontaine, M. F. Johnson, L. F. Alford and C. D. Atkinson.

Bro. Fontaine, the new pastor of Dryader, was called upon to give a report. He stated he had been well received, and was hopeful. Reported one addition on profession of faith.

The new pastor of Carrollton Ave., M. F. Johnson, reported a hearty reception by the very kind people of Carrollton. Received two into the church. This church raised over $1,600 for all purposes last year.

The pastor of Burgundy, Rev. J. F. Foster, believes everything will be better this year than last.

Rev. R. H. Wynn, of Louisiana Ave., who received his tenth annual appointment to New Orleans Methodism, is very hopeful.

Rev. W. W. Drake, of Felicity, reports the signs at his church as very encouraging. His laymen are active. There is talk of buying a parsonage. Two additions.

The new pastor of Werlein Mission, Rev. L. F. Alford, made his report. Bro. Alford has been sick since his arrival in the city.

Pastor of Parker Memorial Church reported the outlook very encouraging.

Dr. F. N. Parker stated that his congregations are very good.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade, presiding elder, made a report for Rayne Memorial.

Rev. M. Dickie, missionary from Brazil, was in attendance at the meeting and made a talk.

The subject for discussion at next meeting is "How to put the church members to work," to be led by Rev. C. D. Atkinson. SECRETARY.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained, and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

IS IT AN EPIDEMIC?

What Statistics Show an Alarming Increase in an Already Prevailing Disease—Are Any Exempt?

At no time in the history of disease has there been such an alarming increase in the number of cases of any particular malady as in that of kidney and bladder troubles now preying upon the people of this country.

To day we see a relative, a friend or an acquaintance apparently well, and in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their serious illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's disease.

Kidney trouble often becomes advanced into acute stages before the afflicted is aware of its presence; that is why we read of so many sudden deaths of prominent business and professional men, physicians and others. They have neglected to stop the leak in time.

While scientists are puzzling their brains to find out the cause, each individual can, by a little precaution, avoid the chances of contracting dreaded and dangerous kidney trouble, or eradicate it completely from their system if already afflicted. Many precious lives might have been, and many more can yet be saved, by paying attention to the kidneys.

It is the mission of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" to benefit its readers at every opportunity, and therefore we advise all who have any symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble to write to-day to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the celebrated specific which is having such a great demand and remarkable success in the cure of the most distressing kidney and bladder troubles. With the sample bottle of Swamp-Root will also be sent free a pamphlet and treatise of valuable information.

Home Circle.

Pluck's College Course.

A little hut in Bulgaria, made of mud and stone, was Pluck's home, and his father was so poor that he could hardly get food enough for his large family. Their clothes cost little, as they all wore sheepskins, made up with the wool outside.

Pluck was a bright ambitious boy, with a great desire for study, and when he heard of Roberts College, at Constantinople, he determined to go there. He told his father one day, when they were away together tending sheep, that he had decided to go to college. The poor shepherd looked at his son in amazement, and said, "You can't go to college; it's all I can do to feed you children; I can't give you a piaster."

"I don't want a piaster," Pluck replied; "but I do want to go to college."

"Besides," the shepherd continued, "you can't go to college in sheepskins."

But Pluck made up his mind, and he went—in sheepskins and without a piaster.

He trudged sturdily on day after day until he reached Constantinople. He soon found his way to the college and inquired for the president.

Pluck asked for work, but the president kindly told him that there was none, and that he must go away.

"Oh, no," said Pluck; "I can't do that. I didn't come here to go away."

When the president insisted, Pluck's answer was the same—"I didn't come here to go away."

He had no idea of giving up. "The King of France, with forty thousand men, went up a hill and then came down again," but it was no part of Pluck's plan to go marching home again; and three hours later the president saw him in the yard, patiently waiting.

Some of the students advised Pluck to see Professor Long. "He knows all about you Bulgarian fellows," they said.

The professor, like the president, said there was no work for him and he had better go away. But Pluck bravely stuck to his text, "I didn't come here to go away."

The boy's courage and perseverance pleased the professor so much that he urged the president to give Pluck a trial. So it was decided that he should take care of the fires. That meant carrying wood, and a great deal of it, up three or four flights of stairs, taking away the ashes and keeping all the things neat and in order.

After a few days, as Pluck showed no signs of weakening, the president went to him, and said, "My poor boy, you can not stay here this winter. This room is not comfortable, and I have no other to give you." "Oh, I'm perfectly satisfied," Pluck replied. "It's the best room I ever had in my life. I didn't come here to go away."

Evidently there was no getting rid of Pluck, and he was allowed to stay. After he had gained his point, he settled down to business, and asked some of the students to help him with his lessons in the evenings. They formed a party of six, so none of the boys found it a burden to help Pluck one evening in a week.

After some weeks he asked to be examined to enter the preparatory class.

"Do you expect," asked the president, "to compete with those boys who have many weeks the start of you? And," he continued, "you can't go into class in sheep skins—all the boys would cry 'baa.'"

"Yes, sir, I know," Pluck said; "but the boys have promised to help me out. One will give me a coat, another a pair of trousers and so on."

Although Pluck had passed the examination, he had no money, and the rules of the college required each student to pay two hundred dollars a year.

"I wish," said Professor Long, "that this college would hire Pluck to help me in the laboratory and give him a hundred dollars a year."

Pluck became the professor's assistant. But where was the other hundred coming from?

President Washburn sent an account of Pluck's poverty and great desire for an education to Dr. Hamlin, the ex-president of Roberts College, who was in America. The doctor told the story to a friend one day, and she was so interested that she said, "I would like to give the other hundred."

The Duck-Hawk's Strategy.

The wild duck's lot is not a happy one, at least when a hawk has singled it out as its prey. How the duck conducts its campaign is told in the St. Nicholas.

The wild duck possesses a large bump of curiosity, and may at times be brought within shot by taking advantage of this trait; but, ordinarily, it is "your wits against theirs," and this is one great charm of the sport.

It is exciting to watch the duck-hawk in pursuit of his prey. Given an open field with the quarry, it is astonishing to witness the exhibition of speed by these "thoroughbred" racers. The hawk will often overtake and strike a duck in the air, though he seems to prefer to single one out from some flock, and, if possible, force him to dive. As the duck comes to the surface to breathe, the hawk is at hand and down goes the duck once more. This is repeated until the poor duck is almost exhausted; and when the duck pauses a second too long at the surface the hawk pounces and the duck is secured.

There is wonderful sagacity shown by these birds in forcing a diving duck away from the reeds into open water. They seem loath to exert themselves sufficiently to capture their game on the wing, but will "dog him," as it were, from the shallows to deep water, where in sheer desperation the victim dives, fancying that one or two long reaches under water will bring him within the shelter of the reeds. Seldom, however, is he successful in the attempt; fear and exhaustion generally end the matter as the hawk wishes.

A great many ducks crippled by gunners will make for the marshes, where they hide, and sometimes if fortunate and not too severely wounded, they will recover. But even here they are not safe; the prowling fox or mink will strike their trail among the sedge, and often catch them when they venture too near the shore.

Out in the deeper part of the marsh ducks must exercise the greatest caution when feeding; for when the dusk of evening settles down on lake and fen, and the mystery of the twilight reigns, a most dangerous foe—the "still hunting owl"—comes from the darkening woods, and on silent wing the great bird quarters the marsh backward and forward with the thoroughness of a well-trained hound. Still hunting is the high art of sport, and the big owls are experts in their way.

The Eagle on the Coins.

If you have a silver dollar of 1836, 1838 or 1839, or one of the first nickel cents coined in 1856, you will find upon it the true portrait of an American eagle which was for many years a familiar sight in the streets of Philadelphia.

"Peter," one of the finest eagles ever captured alive, was the pet of the Philadelphia Mint, and was generally known as the "Mint Bird."

Not only did he have free access to every part of the Mint, going without hindrance into the treasure-vaults, where even the treasurer of the United States would not go alone, but used his own pleasure in going about the city, flying over the houses, sometimes perching upon the lamp-posts in the streets.

Everybody knew him, and admired him, and even the street boys treated him with respect. The government provided his daily fare, and he was as much a part of the Mint establishment as the superintendent or chief coiner.

He was so kindly treated that he had no fear of anybody or anything, and he might be in the Mint yet, if he had not sat down to rest on one of the great fly-wheels. The wheel started without warning, and Peter was caught in the machinery. One of his wings was broken, and he died a few days later.

The superintendent had his body beautifully mounted, with the wings spread to their fullest extent; and to this day Peter stands in a glass case in the Mint's cabinet, where you may see him whenever you go there. An exact portrait of him as he stands in the case was put upon the coins named.—Harper's Young People.

Self-Study for Women.

In Harper's Bazar, Dr. John Mitchell says that the time to attack nervousness is before it has become a habit and taken firm hold of the system. When it has once acquired possession of a woman's constitution, more severe measures must be taken for its elimination. Advice must then wait till the struggle is over. Reading the riot act to a mob of emotions is of no value whatever. The wise man will choose a more wholesome hour for exhortation. The occasions for the preacher's counsel to nervous women are before the victim has lost self-control, and after that self-control has been restored.

The woman troubled with nervousness must study for herself her own life, her habits, her surroundings, her associations and her temperament, to discover the source of the trouble. This self-study is very important; it will frequently show that some departure from proper ways of doing and living are the starting-points of nervousness. The affliction may at the beginning have been unavoidable, or may have been thought so. Most likely no thought whatever was given to it as it gradually took possession of the system.

Habitual surrender to the emotions and constant yielding to their expression are certain to lead to disaster. Tears for trifling pains, loud complaints about the little annoyances of life, social, physical or otherwise, may give some relief to the weeper or satisfaction to the grumbler, but the purchase of this relief or satisfaction involves too great a cost. It fastens on a woman a habit which diminishes the power of self-endurance in every form. Not every woman, indeed, can suppress all manifestations of suffering. But it is within every woman's power to form the purpose, and to teach her children to do so likewise, that the small necessary evils of life should be endured without outcry or grumbling.

This resistance of minor troubles is the most practical of preparations for control over trouble in larger and more menacing forms. Self-study is for women, as it is indeed for men, necessary for self-control, and self-control is the golden key to the Elysian home of happiness.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

G.F.P. Has Cured Thousands of Women

The most convincing argument we can offer for G. F. P. is its record of cures. Nearly one hundred thousand letters from women telling of their release from the diseases peculiar to their sex is proof enough that G. F. P. does all we claim for it. The case of MRS. MOLLIE WILLIAMS, of Seal, Ala., is similar to thousands of others who have used G. F. P.—all cured. She writes:

"For years I suffered with bladder and kidney troubles and weakness in the back. My husband paid out many dollars for doctors and medicine. But in G. F. P. I found the very medicine I needed to make me well and strong again. It is truly a God-send to weak, suffering women."

When a medicine cures a woman who had suffered as Mrs. Williams had, and where physicians and other remedies had failed, women who are similarly affected should not hesitate to at least give it a trial. Women who for years suffered from painful, profuse and scanty menses, etc., were induced to try G. F. P. and have been cured.

You can get G. F. P. from your druggist or dealer at $1 a bottle. Refuse any substitute that may be offered you.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

On the first day of December, 1901, Mr. HENRY CANNA, of Logtown, Miss., passed to his eternal reward, aged seventy-eight years. He was born in Fort Claiborne, Ala., in September, 1823; moved to Hancock county, Miss., when about nine years of age; came to Logtown in 1854; married Miss Viola Bott in 1858, by whom he had one daughter, Mrs. J. S. Otis, both of whom remain to mourn their departed dead. The early life of the subject of this sketch was spent on a farm, where, no doubt, he learned those sterling virtues which adorned his sedate life. His removal to Logtown, and entrance into a wider field of business activity, did not diminish, but intensified those earlier gained characteristics. In the business world, where he was known, his word was as good as his bond. In these days of note-making and mortgages it was positively refreshing to know one whose word was good enough for his fellows. Great was the confidence of all in his integrity. Said a citizen of this county to me a few days after his death, "Well, he was certainly one honest man." Yes, honest in his business life, honest in his official life, honest with his Lord, which last I come now to consider, for there were some things, heard and seen in his last days, which gives us a holy joy. He was not afraid to die. Indeed, great was his longing for death, in the full possession of his faculties, in full realization that it is and was near, there was not a tremor, but a glad looking forward to the coming of the end. He greatly delighted in singing, and could try, as feeble as he was, to join with us. Once, when suffering, being asked if he would like us to sing, he said, "Yes." He grew very, very still as we sang, "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord," and other songs. I shall never forget his trying to sing, "Let me go, let me go," by himself. It was after a siget of suffering; he seemed to long for rest, and he sang as if his soul was in every word. He was exceedingly fond of his grandchildren. His last years were spent almost entirely with them. He was the strong right hand of their father and mother in training them to be industrious and good. He loved the little fellows with a great love. Just before he died he called them all around him, and gave them his parting counsel and blessing. To Henry, the eldest, he said in substance: "My boy, I am going to leave you; try always to be good and true. As the eldest, you are an example to the rest. Live like I have tried to teach you." And so he spoke to all the six. It reminds us of the old patriarch, Jacob, who gathered his children around him, and gave them his dying injunction and blessing. Being asked one day if he was ready to die, he answered readily, "Yes." And so he passed away, leaving behind him the rich heritage of an honorable life, and a dying testimony that all was well with his soul. All that a faithful wife, loving daughter, kind son-in-law and sympathizing friends could do were done to relieve his sufferings, but the time of God had come, and he gladly heard the summons, "Come home." "He is not here;" he is gone. To his loved ones, and to all, we would say: Let sorrow have her way; weep, for it is not wrong to weep; let your memories dwell lovingly on the virtues of a good life; but withal remember his confession of faith in a Savior mighty to save, and then look forward to a time of glorious reunion—a time when God shall wipe all tears from our eyes, and death and suffering shall be no more.

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. C.

Our schoolmate and friend, MARVIN GRAHAM, of Kemper county, Miss., died Nov. 24, 1901, in Jackson, Miss., after a protracted sickness of three weeks of typhoid fever, aged nineteen years. Marvin attended our school the session of 1900 and 1901, and while with us he stood high in his studies, and won our love as well as the respect of all who knew him. He enjoyed a high place in the estimation of his professors. Having the happy faculty of making friends, and at the same time knowing how to be a friend, he leaves a host of fellow-students to mourn his departure and lament their loss. We will miss Marvin, for in losing him we lost a man of purpose and decision of character; a man who possessed the elements that go to make up true nobility and a life of usefulness. He had an intelligent conception of the plan of salvation; that, with the moral and religious influence which overshadowed him while under the profession of his godly parents, and believing he committed no sin but what God, in his infinite mercy, is willing and able to forgive, therefore, let us, his bereaved parents, sisters, brothers and friends, think of him not as being dead, but as one translated and in the presence of his Maker, blending his voice with the voices of angels, singing and shouting glory to his matchless name. E. G. MOHLER, JR.

ROSSE R. MCCORMICK was born in Union parish, La., April 23, 1861, and died near Sibley, Lincoln parish, La., Nov. 30, 1901. Losing his father in early youth, his business, moral and religious training fell upon his mother, and so well and faithfully did this intelligent, energetic and consecrated Christian mother perform her duty that the deceased was ever diligent in business, honest and upright in all his dealings, having a high regard for the rights and interests of others. In 1884 he was converted, and soon after united with the M. E. Church, South, and ever afterwards lived as becometh a child of God. Bro. McCormick's devotion to his mother was a marked feature of his character, never having done aught contrary to her wish or counsel, and being always watchful of her interest and comfort. The deceased was a great sufferer, having been afflicted for several years with a peculiar nervous malady which medical skill failed to reach. He made it a point to read and meditate upon some portion of God's Word every morning and evening, and had thus read and meditated but an hour or two before he was suddenly called home. An aged mother, brothers, sisters and many friends are left behind, only realizing that the deceased is forever at rest. T. J. FORD.

MRS. MARTHA D. ALLEN (nee Love) was born May 2, 1819. She was married to Mr. Elbert H. Allen, Dec. 31, 1835. She was the mother of ten children, seven of whom are living. She died Dec. 5, 1901, quietly, very much as one going to sleep. She had been a life-long Christian, and a faithful member of the Georgetown Church. Her life was always above reproach, and all who knew her loved and respected her as a friend. She set an example of industry, working when there seemed to be no necessity; only she loved to work. Hers was a home of plenty; a kind, hospitable home. "Her children arise up and call her blessed," and have gone out to follow her example and to be a blessing to the world. Sister Allen came of a large and notable family, of whom only two are now living. She will be missed so sadly by the loved ones and by the church. The remains were buried in the family graveyard, near the old homestead in Copiah county, Miss., to await the resurrection of the just. C. MCDONALD.

OCSOLA C. ROUSE was born Nov. 11, 1878, and died at Clinton, Miss., Nov. 2, 1901, aged twenty-two years eleven months and twenty-one days. To his parents he was always dutiful, and he had the confidence and respect of his neighbors. Everybody liked him. About five years ago he joined the M. E. Church, South, and when the end came he expressed readiness to go. This is a source of great comfort to his sorrowing loved ones. May his life and death be an inspiration to them to be watchful and ready for the coming of the Lord! L. CASLEY.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

No true preaching stops short of the conscience. The gospel is meant for the moral and spiritual nature, rather than for the intellectual. It is time the gospel reaches the conscience through the intellectual appeal; but that preaching which aims only to interest and instruct the intellect with speculative philosophy, or with ethical casuistry, falls short. We must tunnel at the gates of conscience with the artillery of moral verities that bear upon individual responsibility. We must turn the search-light of eternal truth down into the darkened chambers of the soul where craven evil hides and lurks. We must drag the cowering culprit to the light. Let him see the Sinaitic lightning flames. Let him feel the hot breath of that divine justice which will in no wise clear the guilty. Then, and not until then, can we effectually lead sinners to Christ, and induce them to seek shelter under the shadow of the throne.—The Evangelical Messenger.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

When, in the midst of the stormy whirlwind of action and passion, we are apt to trust to our own frail barks, and we hear not the voice of God until after the storm, in the still, small whisper in our souls. When the heart is calmed we can feel the power and behold the brightness of our Father's love, and we can yield ourselves to Him, and desire to be led by Him wherever he chooseth.—Hill.

The longer we live, and the more we think, the higher value we learn to put on the friendship and tenderness of parents and of friends.—Dr. Johnson.

I had been troubled with gastric dyspepsia for two years. I could not eat or sleep, was short of breath, and suffered from dizziness. I found no relief until I heard of R.I.P.A.N.S Tabules. After the first 5 cent box I felt the difference. When I had taken six of the 5 cent boxes I was able to eat very well, and to sleep, and the dizziness gradually disappeared. The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

Glances at the World.

The agitation in favor of concerted action by civilized nations in prohibiting the sale of intoxicants to native races in Africa and the South Sea Islands is meeting with much encouragement. The United States Senate in January last passed the following resolution: "In the opinion of this body the time has come when the principle, twice affirmed in international treaties for Central Africa, that native races should be protected against the destructive traffic in intoxicants, should be extended to all uncivilized peoples by the enactment of such laws and the making of such treaties as will effectually prohibit the sale by the signatory powers to aboriginal tribes and uncivilized races of opium and intoxicating beverages;" and President Roosevelt endorsed in his message this restriction. Now, in a letter to the chairman of "Native Races Deputation," of Dec. 11, 1901, Secretary John Hay says: "Your suggestion that I call the attention of the nations concerned to the resolution of the Senate, adopted Jan. 4, 1901, as likely to have influence by indicating the concurrent opinion of the two branches of the treaty-making power, the Senate and the Executive, has my cordial acquiescence. I shall initiate renewed overtures in the proposed sense by communicating the Senate resolution to the British Government, with the suggestion that it be made the basis of concurrently reopening the question with the powers having the influence on commerce in the Western Pacific, or in any other uncivilized quarter where the salutary principle of liquor restriction could be practically applied through the general enactment of similar laws by the several countries or through a conventional agreement between them."—Christian Intelligencer.

Practical men are beginning to realize the possibilities of wireless telegraphy. Not only on land, but across wide stretches of water, communication is demonstrated to be practicable. Even ships far out at sea can communicate with each other. Recently two ships, one the well-known Lucania, were in communication in mid ocean. When the first dispatch was received the vessels were 120 miles apart; when communication ceased they were 190 miles apart. To one like the editor of this ADVOCATE, wholly unacquainted with the mysteries of electricity, and who never ceases to wonder at the ordinary telegraph, this wireless method of talking through the air is the mystery of mysteries. We wonder, but we are never skeptical at any announcement of the practical scientists. We talk through wire, and send messages without wire. After a while we will be riding in air-ships. We expect soon to have wireless communication with friends and business houses at as little cost as by telephone. We are living in an age of wonders.

The case of Admiral Schley is again prominently before the country. He had a lengthy interview with President Roosevelt a few days since, and it is understood that the President has consented to review the whole case. It has been given out that the matter—the legal aspects, we suppose—has been referred to the Attorney General. The friends of the Admiral are rather happy over the turn affairs have taken, and earnestly hope that there will be a reversal of the decision of the majority of the Court of Inquiry. The Admiral, it is said, presented his case fully to the President, and that the President was much impressed. He must have been, else he would not have consented to the review, and run the risk of reversing his former judgment, which, though formal, was really nothing more than an approval of the finding of the majority of the Court, based on the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy. The more the people learn of the great naval battle, and of the laws governing the navy, the better satisfied they are that Admiral Schley is entitled to the honor which his friends claim for him. It is to be hoped the President will see the matter in a clear and unprejudiced light, and do justice to a brave and honorable son of the country.

The first election in Cuba occurred a few days ago, when a President was chosen. There were two candidates: General Tomas Estrado Palma, and General Maso. The friends of the latter made an effort to have the date of the election postponed, ostensibly because they did not have time to make ready; but as their request was denied, they declined to vote, and Palma had what the politicians call "a walk-over." General Maso stood no chance. He represented sentiments and elements in opposition to the best interests of Cuba. Palma represented those who are in favor of establishing in Cuba a constitutional government under the protection of the United States. A Constitution, it will be remembered, was adopted not long since. Now that a President has been elected who understands that Constitution, and has accepted it, the hope is that the island will enter upon a long career of peace and prosperity. The tariff, about which we hear so much, will cut but little figure as an oppressive force, if the people will settle down to work and resolve to be contented. We say this on general principles, without expressing any opinion on the tariff as a party measure. With peace in Cuba, we expect to see a great republic.

WITNESSES FROM MEXICO.

BY REV. F. S. ONDERDONK.

Neither human nature nor the power of the gospel has changed since Jesus, knowing the value of a living testimony, said to his disciples, "Ye are my witnesses."

In our work among the people of Mexico, whatever their nationality, it is seen that sinners are "overcome by the word of their testimony." In the city of Morelia the pastor has divided the membership of the church into classes, appointing over them as leaders the most spiritual and otherwise best equipped of their number. A live spiritual membership that, without a single exception, is in regular attendance upon the church services, is the result of this experiment under twentieth century conditions.

I can not soon forget a testimony meeting that was conducted by the pastor of the above-named church. The pastor set a good example by speaking first. He related how a friend (now one of our preachers), having become interested in the gospel, literally took him by guile to a Protestant service. The earnestness and spirituality of the missionary who directed the service were used of God to bring him under conviction, which deepened until he found Christ precious to his soul.

One of the stewards next arose and told how God led him into the light. The substance of his experience was about as follows: "I was a strong believer in the Roman Catholic religion, but was addicted to the vice of drunkenness. I kept up my outward duties to the church, but had no peace in my soul. I tried repeatedly to leave alone that which was destroying me. A friend persuaded me to come to church, which I finally consented to do, attending, however, the night service, that I might not be seen. The reading of the Bible and the preaching of the gospel convinced me that my only hope of salvation was in Christ. I trusted him, confessed his name, and his peace entered my soul. And, brethren," said he, "since God saved me, I have been free from my former vices and sins." Great tears coursed freely down his shining cheeks as he told how the peace of God flowed through his soul. Time would fail me to go into the details of each experience. No time was lost, however, and the witnesses who testified to the assurances of a personal salvation were just as clear as those of our brethren across the Rio Grande.

I wondered why one of the most faithful women did not testify. At the close of the service I asked her, in the presence of her unconverted husband, who had remained hard and unmoved through the revival, why she did not talk. She responded, "My heart was too full, and my eyes would not let me." She then began to weep, and that wordless testimony touched the husband's heart, and he wept also. This was truly a blessed meeting.

During the recent session of our District Conference (which, by the way, was one of the most spiritual I ever attended anywhere) the nine o'clock Sunday morning love-feast was a time to be remembered. The preachers, without exception, gave clear testimonies to the saving grace of Jesus Christ. In taking up the cross two or three had suffered the loss of friends, families, and all things, but had found Christ "all and in all."

One of the Indian brethren from an adjoining village, a tall, intelligent man, whose principal occupation is freighting by mule-back between Toluca and the low-lands, told how God saved and kept him. He said: "Brethren, I love God. He is so good to me. Many nights, while I am camped on the road with ungodly men who know not the Savior, I feel much alone; but in their presence I pray and read the Word of God, admonishing them, and the Lord never forsakes me." His large frame convulsed with emotion, and his honest face, wreathed in smiles of joy, was a picture which, to be appreciated, must be seen.

A brother of the one mentioned above, and one of the best, most faithful men I ever knew, next arose. In substance he said: "About nine years ago God had mercy on me. My brother came to my house and invited me home with him, saying he had some fine liquor, and that we could have a good time. Upon arriving at the house, I noticed a girl reading intently, and I asked her what she was reading. She said, 'A book,' and very reluctantly handed it to me for inspection. I opened it at the beginning, and found it to be the Holy Bible." Here his emotions overcame him, and we all wept together for joy. "I sat down and began reading the first chapter of Genesis. As I read about the creation and fall, my heart was stirred within me. My brother urged me to drink, but I refused, and continued my reading into the afternoon. I tried to buy the book, but to no avail. After much persuasion the girl consented for me to keep it two months. I bought a pile of paper, and began to copy from the Word of Life. At times I worked day and night until the time was up. In this way the light of the truth came into my life."

For a consuming desire to possess the Word of God, I have never seen this case surpassed. The relation of this experience, so characterized by humility and love, went to every heart, and fairly broke up the depths. This brother's contributions to the church would put to shame some of his fairer brethren in the home land. He and his fellow-workers have built their own church, and last year put in an Epworth organ, which cost them $160.

On Sunday night of the District Conference a ten-year-old boy came to me after the benediction, and, taking my hand, said, as the tears of joy streamed down his young face, "Brother, I desire with all my heart to be a preacher of the gospel." This young witness testifying in this peculiar manner greatly stirred my heart. Having known the consistent life of that dear child for three years, I doubt not but that God will make him a chosen vessel to his own people.

One thing which must always impress the missionary is, that the gospel of Christ has the same effect upon the people among whom he works as it has upon his own soul, or upon his brethren in his own land. This fact makes a Methodist love-feast a bit of heaven, whether it be in China, Brazil, or Mexico. Our greatest wish and most fervent prayer for all our mission churches is, that they may be composed of testifying Christians.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOARD.

Rev. J. D. Ellis read the report of the Sunday-school Board, which was adopted, as follows:

To the Bishop and Brethren of the Mississippi Annual Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Your Sunday-school Board submits the following report:

The proceeds from Children's Day amounted to $466.61; from other sources, $6; total, $472 61. Our disbursements for the year have been as follows:

For general expenses	$ 45 97
To Barbee & Smith	174 00
To Prof. Henry Spence	22 00
For printing Conference Minutes	35 00
To General Board of Education	47 06
To General Sunday-school Board	47 06
Total	$472 09

Balance on hand, 52 cents.

Your Board this year has distributed free of charge 14,165 Children's Day programmes, aided fifteen Sabbath-schools in the supply of various literature, put a library into one school, and considerably increased the circulation of the Magazine and Sunday-school Visitor.

Your Board are pleased to report that every application during the year for aid in supplying the regular lesson helps to needy Sunday-schools has been granted. A few applications from Sabbath-schools for libraries and Visitors were turned down later in the year on account of our limited means. The Board at this time, and on account of an exhausted treasury, can not say how soon the proposition concerning help toward libraries can be renewed, but it stands ready to grant aid toward any and all needy schools unable to supply themselves with the regular lesson literature.

We report again with regret that the collections have fallen considerably behind the collections of last year, a large number of charges not having reported anything whatever; nor was Children's Day observed.

We further regret to say that some of the pastoral charges which we have so generously assisted in recent years have remitted to us the least money. We would urge upon all the pastors that Children's Day be observed as the Discipline directs, and no other day be substituted in its place.

In accordance with the 243rd paragraph of Discipline a Conference Sunday-school Convention was held last March at McComb City, and the Board is pleased to report an increased number of pastors and others in attendance. The next convention will be held at Utica, in March or April of next year. It will be combined with a Sunday-school institute conducted by Dr. H. M. Hamill, and no effort will be spared by the Board to make it a most profitable occasion. We respectfully call the attention of all the pastors and Sunday-school workers to the fact that the Sunday-school Convention is their, as much so as the Sunday-school Boards, and we urge that all be in attendance.

Your Sunday-school Board would further call the pastors' attention and sympathy to the course of study for Sunday-school teachers prepared by the General Sunday-school Board. It is through their help that the movement set on foot can be successfully conducted, and the Sunday-school teaching lifted above the haphazard method so often the character of Sunday-school teaching.

The Indiana Association observed one week in October last as Sunday-school week. A week was designated during which every house in the State was visited on a given day, several meetings were appointed to be held in each church, and all was to close with a Decision Day service on the Sunday named. The reports indicated that the Sunday-school enrollment in that State is equal to about two-thirds of the church membership. Decision Day was observed in hundreds of Sunday-schools. One in Indianapolis had 71 conversions, another 41, and another school with but 50 pupils had 17 conversions. In the ten schools of one small city there were 138 decisions for Christ. Truly it was a great campaign.

N. A. MOTT.

TO REMEDY A DOLEFUL SITUATION.

Dr. Cuyler is the highest authority on revivals now living. When he began his ministry he was far in advance, equally, in the discussion of public matters, the promotion of education, and the conversion of souls. His preaching attracted all classes.

Men who hated his anti-slavery sentiments were convicted by his preaching of their need of conversion. Men who did not wish to give up the use of wine and liquors as a beverage, and thought him altogether too extreme, were converted to God, and many of them by the subsequent leaven made total abstainers almost without their knowing it.

In The Evangelist this, our Nestor, accounts for the lamentable falling off in the percentage of conversions during recent years, chiefly by the fact that too many discourses are addressed to nobody in particular. Preaching to Christians has been relatively overdone, and to the impenitent, underdone. He has no sympathy with denunciations that only irritate, or exhortations that are often only a waste of breath. He asserts that "the ugliness and the doom of sin should be preached till the sinner feels his own guiltiness, and Christ should be so presented that the sinner should flee to him as his only Savior. . . . The minister has no more right to cap Sinai or conceal hell than he has to hide the sin-atoning cross of Calvary."

The most successful preachers, from Whitefield and Wesley on to Spurgeon and Moody, were men whose chief aim was to awaken the unconverted, and to lead them straight to Jesus Christ. Spurgeon never had any revivals, for there were no spiritual declensions. 'He sowed the gospel with one hand, and reaped conversions with the other." "His church," says the Doctor, "was like the orange trees I saw in California; there were white blossoms on some limbs, and ripe golden fruit on some other limbs."

Dr. Cuyler does not believe much in the common theory that to awaken sinners ministers must first preach to awaken Christians. He thinks that this is often kept up till the members of the church are rather hardened under constant hammering. 'Nothing stirs up comatose Christians like the sight of awakened persons going into an inquiry room with their pastor." God pity the churches when the chief business is to Christianize Christians!

This very practical article emphasizes the importance of personal conversations, and notes the decline therein, and a similar diminution of warm, living, and attractive religion in too many professedly Christian homes, believing that these changes are sufficient to account for the fewness of conversions. He supports his views by an account of a very zealous and judicious pastor not far away, who for the last three years has had "a very large ingathering without any outside help." This pastor impresses the people that they are as responsible for souls as he is, bids them to seek power from on high, calls for volunteers to converse with unconverted acquaintances, and urges Sunday-school teachers to pray for and labor with their scholars. In the meantime he preaches awakening and soul-convicting sermons, and has written two hundred letters to individuals, directing them to their path of duty.

Any sincere Christian pastor can be the means of genuine conversions if he makes that his primary purpose. — Christian Advocate (New York).

Miscellaneous Notes.

The Florida Christian Advocate comes to us in a new dress and new form, and with a new editor, the Rev. L. W. Moore. With the exception of the last page, it is made up almost entire of "pure reading matter." The editor is doing good work, and the publishers are sending out a fine piece of printing on good paper. Success to the Florida!

From all directions comes the good news that the "Bible Teachers' Study Circle"—the new movement in our Sunday-school work—is being heartily received, and great good is expected to result. Superintendents and teachers who have not already engaged in the work would do well to correspond with Dr. Atkins. Address Dr. Jas. Atkins, Nashville, Tenn.

Sunday, the twelfth, was advertised as a great day at West End Church, Nashville. The debt of $17,000, which has troubled the church so long, had been wiped out, and the brethren planned for a great celebration. Bishop Candler was sent for, and booked for two sermons. Dr. Chappell rejoices with his people. West End is no longer "the last End," as Dr. McFerrin was wont to call it before the new building was erected. It is quite up to the front.

A Vanderbilt note in one of our church papers declares that the "societies" of the university "have never been the potent factors in the university life that they should be.' He assigns two reasons: First, that the time usually devoted to society work is given to fraternity meetings; and, second, the college spirit and enthusiasm dissipate themselves in athletics. "None is left for the literary society. It is too tame for those who are inured to the intense excitement and brutality of foot-ball."

What Our Editors Say.

METHODISM AND THE MASSES.

The insinuation that Methodism has kept aloof from the masses, that it has disregarded the humbler classes of society, is in direct contradiction to its whole history. From the very first, Methodism has been distinguished by its peculiar adaptation to the masses. Its broad, catholic spirit, its simple forms of worship, its plain and sensible presentations of the truth, have brought it more immediately into contact with the public mind and heart than any other denominational system, and have been among the chief elements of its power. It is emphatically the religion of the people. While from the first it has numbered among its votaries the learned, the titled, and the rich, who have delighted to recognize its claims, and to render to it the willing tribute of their talents and their means, it has particularly sought out the poor, the neglected, and the lowly, bringing to them amid all the privations of their lot those supreme consolations which the gospel alone supplies. . . . It is to be hoped that the Methodist Church will never lose this chief characteristic of her primitive history. Whenever she shall cease to be the church of the people and the poor she will lack the principal evidence of her divine mission, and be shorn of her prestige and her power.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

ADVICE TO WRITERS.

If one is going to write on a certain subject, if it is one of importance, let him get his brain and heart full of it before he begins. He will then write with ease and force. A young man delivered one of the best graduating speeches I ever heard. I asked him how long it took him to write it. He said he wrote it at one sitting one night. He then informed me that he had been thinking about it all the session. His mind had been filled with it. A writer should not waste his time and strength in writing upon trifling subjects. If he write, let him write on something worth writing about. A man in his daily work may be very busy and industrious, and yet accomplish nothing, because he wastes his time and energy on trifles. When one writes for the Advocate, let him avoid all offensive personalities written or implied.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

BURY THE PAST.

Don't forget to bury in the past with the old year any and every grievance which you may have held against a brother. Begin the new year with a clean sheet untrammelled with unholy feelings. To have our souls which aspire for a purer, brighter day, a happier, sweeter, fuller divine life by the felicitous conditions of the dawn of the year 1902 sullied by the filth of harboring ill feelings toward one who has wronged us, or indulging in unholy tempers or dispositions, will clip the wings of our lofty aspirations and leave us floundering in the mire and quicksands of doubt and gloom all the year. In connection with this, let us read and imbibe the truth taught us in Matthew v, 23, 24.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

VALUE OF CLEAR THINKING

What a pleasure and what a profit to sit under the teaching of the man trained to think clearly and luminously upon great issues that affect the moral and spiritual weal of humanity. It is a mistake to conclude that people are not capable of appreciating this sort of definite and thorough preparation. If we will get the truth in its most intelligent apprehension and deliver it in power and demonstration, the people will catch its meaning and inspiration. But a tangled, muddled and obscure perception of truth in the mind of the preacher leaves the people in a state of bewilderment and confusion. We need, therefore, to learn to think clearly and consecutively, and then present the truth in simplicity and earnestness, and we will never lack an audience to attend profitably upon our pulpit ministrations.—Texas Christian Advocate.

MULTIPLYING BY GIVING.

When Christ commissioned his apostles and sent them out to preach—having given them "power and authority over all devils and to cure diseases"—he said to them: "Freely ye have received, freely give." This is the law of Christian life. Christ's call to men to become Christians does not mean a call to a life of receiving only, but to a life of giving. It is not giving, but withholding, that impoverishes a man. We do not diminish, but increase, our stock of knowledge by imparting knowledge to others. We do not exhaust, but replenish, our love and enlarge our capacity for loving by letting our love go out to God and to our fellow-men. Every gift and blessing multiplies when devoted to the service of God.—Southern Christian Advocate.

PLAGIARISM.

Of plagiarism in pulpit, in type, and with pen, much ought to be said. To steal chickens by night is bad; to steal sermons by day is worse. The sermonic brother who never gets an idea outside of the helps on Sunday-school lessons, nor a thought not jotted down by a commentator or an author on homiletics, is purloining, however little he may consider the matter. Editorial kleptomania is detestable. An article written for one paper, whether it be editorial, presiding elder's round, or communication, should be duly credited to that paper, or—left out. Indefinite credit is a weak salve to a smarting conscience—a confession of something due, without the courage to pay the debt in sound coin.—Midland Methodist.

WHERE THE BLAME RESTS.

If you teach your son, either by precept or by example, that money or social position is worth more than character, you been not be surprised if he sacrifices character to get these things. All the probabilities are that he will turn out a thief or a snob. What else can you expect of him than that he should reduce to practice the lessons which he has learned from your lips and life? In case he comes to nothing or brings actual disgrace upon your name, you should blame nobody but yourself. If there are to be any reproaches, he is entitled to heap them on you, not you on him.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

LETTER FROM ARKANSAS.

BY REV. C. F. SMITH.

EDITOR NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE: We are here in our own "third house," and trying to do the work of the Lord. Bowman, Clifford, and myself, all went to Louisiana three years ago, and all transferred this year, and not one of us can lay claim the title, 'giraffe,' for no single one of us knew what we were to receive from the appointing power. We gladly took "pot luck" in our new Conferences as we had in Louisiana. It was simply a coincidence that we three transferred the same year; but so it was.

Fort Smith has about twenty thousand people, and is just now taking on a vigorous growth. First and Central Churches are both strong, active organizations. The former has 325 members, and the latter 410. At present very cordial relations exist between the two churches—a condition which has happily existed to a satisfactory degree for six years. The editor of the ADVOCATE knows something of the founding of Central Church, and the condition which brought it about. In this instance division of one church has resulted in two stronger churches. It is my privilege to serve Central; and I am sure it is a privilege. It is one of the most social churches of my knowledge, and seems to be well organized. Prospects are bright for a good year's work. We have just ordered a fine new furnace, which will be fully paid for upon arrival.

The weather has been much colder than in South Louisiana, but this writer has increased in weight six pounds, and I think this locality will suit the health of this transfer's family.

The brethren whom I have met are cordial and fraternal, though some expected the redoubtable high silk hat and gold-headed cane of a "giraffe." My presiding elder told me that he was glad to know that I was not of the silk-hat or kid-glove variety.

Arkansas Methodism is of vigorous growth, and evidences of prosperity exist on every side. Fort Smith will have fifty thousand people in ten years. Our church expects to keep pace with this growth. Central congregation has built and paid for two church edifices in fourteen years. And they are not a wealthy, but a willing people. Such people will see that Methodism leads.

The Louisiana Conference made few changes. The brethren selected three strong, representative men for the General Conference. I am sure they will wisely represent the body.

And Bro. Floyd Vaughn came back home. It was just as I expected. I was associated with him in Crowley, and felt certain that Methodism beat high in his bosom still. He will do good work among the brethren of the Louisiana Conference.

Now, in conclusion, Dr. Boswell, this writer can not subscribe to your views upon the deaconess question. We have a place for them in our cities, and no fear of the ambitions of a few women should keep us from planning wisely to conserve our work among the lowly, and add to our numbers many whom we are not now reaching, because, forsooth, we have no lady workers who can give their whole time to this needed work. As to ordination, that is a mere quibble, and it should only mean an act of separation and consecration to their peculiar work. Let us have deaconesses. We need them.

Dear Doctor, your valued editorials have the ring of conviction. We like that. Back of the writing is the man. This is not an age of strong convictions, speaking generally. It is an age of entertainment and opportunism; yet convictions are not dead, only slumbering like a volcano. Put strong men to the fore, and we shall see the trembling hosts, if God be the motive power, moving at the behest of the conquering Christ.

CONFERENCE APPOINTMENTS.

There is always more or less dissatisfaction with the appointments after Conference, both among preachers and people; but I believe more is being said and written on this subject now than formerly. Several articles have occurred in our Advocates recently that indicate the chafing of the yoke in tender places. One brother, on his way to his new circuit, by no means pleased, having been led to believe he was going to a different and better place, said to me he intended to do the best he could there, for the people and the Lord were not to blame for his appointment. And so the question arises often, How much has the Lord to do with making the appointments?

We have a good system of church government, specially good at this point when in the hands of capable and good men, but susceptible of abuse when weak and prejudiced men are in power. As a rule, our presiding elders are good, representative men; but sometimes small men, not equal to the position, get into office. I would not like to see our church try the experiment, but if our presiding elders were to be elected by their brethren over whom they are to preside, some men who get in and stay would never be chosen, and sometimes we would have a better class of men in office.

The best thing for a pastor to do is to be thoroughly loyal to his God first, and then to his church. In former years I suffered myself to be anxious about my appointments, and sometimes tried to steady the ark when I thought the oxen stumbled; but experience taught me what reason ought to have taught me—to let everyone attend to his own business. Now (and for many years past the same), my rule is to commit the whole matter to the Lord in prayer, and then accept my appointment as from God. If, in fixing it, God was ruled out in any way, still he can overrule all for my good, and will do so if I trust in him and do my duty. I do not believe God had any hand in selling Joseph to that company of Ishmaelites; nevertheless, the transaction resulted in bringing Joseph into Egypt, where God wanted him, and the outcome was under God's supervision and blessing, so that in after years Joseph said to his brethren, "As for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass as it is this day." And so even the wrath of man shall praise him, and the remainder of wrath he will restrain.

Conference is over, the appointments have been announced, and the preachers are at their places. Now for a good year's work for the Master. Let everyone seek for a closer walk with God, pray earnestly for the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit, and labor as if he knew this to be the last year of his ministry—and it may be.

SENIOR.

AN HOUR WITH THE HYMN BOOK.

BY FANNIE MINOR MONTGOMERY.

How they gather round me, the living and the dead, as I turn its sacred pages and hear in memory the voices of those who have been associated with its holy songs! Here is one that rings with the melody of our dearly loved Dr. Walker's voice,

"What wondrous love is this,
O my soul!"

In this Dr. Mathews is declaring,

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing,
Which before the cross I spend."

Now Dr. Sawyer calls fervently,

"Come, ye sinners, poor and needy."

Here Bishop Parker and his "little flock" at Louisiana Avenue are singing,

"O thou God of my salvation,
My Redeemer from all ills,
I will praise thee, I will praise thee;
Where shall I thy praise begin?"

Dr. Carter and Felicity Street class are exclaiming,

"Hark, my soul! it is the Lord.
'Tis thy Savior; hear his word."

Now that sweet singer in Israel, Bro. Christian Keener. Hear him crying,

"Away, my unbelieving fear!
Fear shall in me no more have place."

Here Bro. Frank Keer, militant as usual, shouts,

"Come, we that love the Lord,
And let our joys be known;
We're marching to Zion, beautiful, beautiful Zion."

Bro. Downer and the missionary society are jubilant over

"All the dark places of earth's heathen races."

Now a quavering treble testifies,

"How happy every child of grace,
Who knows his sins forgiven."

The tune gets away sometimes, for Bro. Garrison's earthly house is perishing, and he is soon to find his "place in heaven." With the old hymn comes the memory of his happy death-bed; comes, too, his solemn warning, "Brethren, the Lord never sends a baby into the world but he sends a mother to take care of it, and this church need not expect conversions till it is ready to take care of them."

Here, in a sweet soprano, clear as a bird's warble, Miss Mattie Linfield leads the woman's prayer meeting,

"In the beautiful light of God."

And Sister French Flowers rejoices that

"'By and by' will soon be now."

And Sister Black thrills the class with

"I'm going home, to die no more."

Here, too, is my dear mother's precious

"In the Christian's home in glory."

And my old nurse's lullaby,

"Am I a soldier of the cross?"

Now the voice of my own first-born is saying as the death angel hovers near, "Mama, sing, 'I am trusting, Lord, in thee.'"

Here is one that takes me back to a prayer meeting in Natchez and good old Bro. Gunning. As we sing we hear a train that is bringing the body of a brave young brakesman, who chose rather to lay down his life than forsake his duty, and who, like his Master, "saved others; himself he could not save." Well might we sing,

"God's children are gathering home."

Truly, it has been a profitable hour that I have spent with my hymn book—a veritable companion of saints.

"And heaven comes down our souls to greet,
While glory crowns the mercy seat."

THE ORPHANS' HOME AT WATER VALLEY, MISS.

To the Friends of This Home:

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home was held at Winona just before and during the session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. The various and important interests of this worthy institution were fully canvassed. After prayerful consideration and discussion some changes were deemed imperative and advisable. The expenses of our plans of administration have been too heavy. We have had an agent in the field and a manager at the Home, beside other officers which were necessary. It was decided to combine into one the offices of field agent and manager. For these duties an active and alert man is needed. The Board selected unanimously for this position Rev. W. T. Griffin, who has been representing the Home as agent. They confer on him authority to appoint a young man, whose duties are to teach the school, and to direct and superintend the boys in the farm work.

The Board gives honor and praise to Brother and Sister Harrison for their excellent influence and work in the Home, especially for their godly example and for the spiritual instruction imparted to the children, quite a number having joined the church. We believe that some of the seed he has thus sown will be found bringing forth fruit for his praise and honor in years to come.

The work that Bro. Griffin now enters upon is no easy one, and we beg the prayers and co-operation of every friend of the Home in his efforts to make it a success.

Your Board of Directors will not rest contented until the great and good work this Home is doing shall reflect its rays into every corner of our State; and we beg the help of our friends to assist in letting those also who are outside of the church know what we are doing for the unfortunate children around us.

At this writing we are grieved to learn of the death of Bro. R. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, a member of our Board of Directors. In his death we lose a noble and good man, a wise counselor. His faithfulness to duty and sound judgment has had much to do with bringing the Home up to its present standard. With sorrowing hearts we sympathize with his wife and relatives, and may God comfort them in their sad bereavement!

Dec. 21, 1901.

Through the kindly suggestion of Mrs. Dicks, corresponding secretary, I have just received from Mrs. Trueheart a copy each of "Via Christi" and "Prayer Calendar" for 1902 of W. B. F. M. I heartily recommend both of these books to our missionary societies as studies of great importance. "Via Christi: An Introduction to the Study of Missions," gives a world-glimpse of missions from the time of Paul to the beginning of the nineteenth century. This is the first of a series of systematic studies of Japan, China, and all foreign fields, which courses will be forthcoming for the year's study of the societies. There has been a long-contemplated plan to unite all the Women's Boards of Missions in the United States, and at the Ecumenical Conference in New York (1900) a committee was appointed to formulate a course of study to this end. "Via Christi," with its subsequent books, is the result of this committee's work. A review of "Via Christi" induces me to recommend it to all our societies as a fine prelude to the year's study. The "Prayer Calendar" is full of inspiration from the first page, which is adorned by the saintly faces of Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. McGavock, to the last date, Dec. 31, 1902. There is a systematic guidance in the daily prayers of our devoted women, and this concentration of petitions will surely work mightily toward the world's salvation. We would urge our home workers to secure these books as speedily as possible from the Publishing House at Nashville—"Via Christi," 35 cents; "Prayer Calendar," 25 cents.

BOOK NOTICES.

THE CHRIST OF OUR POETS. By Rev. H. W. Featherstun, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference. Pages, 172. Price, 75 cents. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

This little book is dedicated to Rev. H. M. DuBose, Secretary of the Epworth League, and editor of the Epworth Era, at whose suggestion it was written. Of course, it is designed for use by Epworth Leaguers, and is part of the League's reading course for the present year. The book is not a book of poems, but designed to show that the leading poets had supreme faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. With this end in view, Dr. Featherstun quotes largely from their poems, and he adds greatly to the value of the volume by interpreting the sentiments, so that they may be clearly understood by all. Young Leaguers, especially those who are fond of verse, will be delighted and edified by reading this book. Dr. Featherstun is an enthusiastic Leaguer himself, and gives much thought and time to the League work. We advise our young people to procure this volume. We trust it may have an extensive sale.

PROHIBITION AT LAST. By Rev. C. T. Kincannon, Aberdeen, Miss.

This is a pamphlet of over sixty pages, giving a history of the different campaigns for prohibition in Monroe county, Miss. It was written and published, the author informs us, "to confirm and perpetuate the good effects of a good work." The struggle for prohibition in Monroe county was repeatedly renewed. The host several times went down in defeat, but only to rise again with stronger determination and greater energy. The history reads like a romance. The author, who is pastor of the Baptist Church in Aberdeen, put his soul and energies into the campaign last Summer, and, aided by a noble band of Christian men and women, a great victory was the result. Brother Kincannon takes no credit to himself. He gives the honor to others, and makes their names prominent in the pages of his pamphlet.

We do not know whether the pamphlet is for sale or gratuitous distribution. Persons interested would do well to write to the author for a copy.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbors' faults. Forget all the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends and only remember the good points which make you fond of them.—Lutheran.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." Miss ADA DOTY, Sidney, Iowa.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.

Beginning of the Church.

As introductory to the studies in the Book of Acts, which our schools are just now beginning, it may be well to study the apostolic college, as selected by our Lord after a night of prayer, and sent forth two by two. We are indebted for the following to Rev. C. E. Cunningham, Presbyterian pastor at Yazoo City, who followed Thompson's classification:

"TWO BY TWO.

"Peter, the bold, impetuous man, acting on the spur of the moment, is joined with Andrew, the apostle instinctively chosen by the Scotch as their national patron, as far-seeing, cautious, careful, full of the sense of difficulty.

"James and John differed greatly in age. John must have been very young, for he outlived Jesus by seventy years. So the Master paired them off, old and young together.

"Philip, the slow-witted, was paired with Nathaniel Bartholomew, the quick-witted.

"Thomas, the doubting, skeptical intellect, was joined with Matthew, one of the heroes of faith.

"James, the practical man, was united with Jude, the man of doctrine.

"Simon the Zealot, a man of zeal, enthusiasm, independence and patriotism, with Judas Iscariot, the business economist. So the Master made one whole man out of the two half men. And so should his church go forth two by two, each with the one most unlike himself, and, therefore, best able to help him.

"These were their positions when sent out, but they did not all maintain their relative places, as we see by consulting the subsequent list in Acts. This may be taken as giving their final positions, determined, it may be, by service and congeniality after experiment. In this list the brothers are separated. Peter and James now go together, while John and Andrew are found in company. Thomas and Philip now itinerate together. Those mentioned among the first in Matthew's list are among the last here. Why this change? Has diligence anything to do with it?

"All of these men may have been busy, but only half of them are ever heard of after they were sent out, except through the very unreliable testimony of tradition. Of Peter, James, John, the other James, Jude and Matthew, we know something; but of the other six we have not a trace, save of Judas."

Again, in writing on the sin of Ananias, Mr. Cunningham has the following, which suggests the thought, which should be borne in mind in studying Acts, that the blessings and trials, the persecutions and the triumphs of the early church, go in pairs:

"There is every evidence that Ananias was equally well off as Barnabas, which renders the contrast more suggestive. These are two types that struggle for the domination of the world, and they are to be found in every congregation. Thus the Bible continually gives us the opportunity to contrast the real with the spurious, as when Abel and Cain, Moses and Nadab and Abihu, Elijah and the prophets of Baal, Elisha and Gehazi, Paul and Demas, and Jesus and Judas, are put before us as companion pictures."

AN EXAMINATION.

The Sunday-school Board of the Mississippi Conference desires to announce that they will offer two prizes—a five-dollar gold piece and a teacher's Bible—to those who make the highest marks in an examination on that part of the Book of Acts covered by the Sunday-school lessons during the first six months of 1902. The competitors are not to be over eighteen years of age, and the examination will be held in connection with the Conference Sunday-school Convention that will be held at Utica.

We hope that all the pastors, superintendents and teachers of that Conference will bring this to the attention of their schools. The only object the Board has in view is to stimulate and encourage Bible study. We hope their labors will not be in vain.

It may not be amiss in this column to state that all Sunday-school supplies and books for the Study Course can be ordered through Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., who is the colporteur for both Conferences in Mississippi. Bro. Bachman takes great interest in Sunday-school work, and is a faithful servant of the living God.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FAYETTE, MISS.

On the twenty-seventh of December, 1901, Mrs. Saunders, little Hattie and myself arrived at this place. Our reception was warm and cordial. We were met at the depot by a committee of gentlemen with conveyance, and carried to the parsonage, where a committee of good ladies awaited, with the house lighted and heated, and a warm supper on the table. Our first hour in the parsonage was very pleasant, and was a prophesy of what our stay may be with these royal-hearted people. A large, new, comfortable and well-furnished parsonage, and the pantry supplied with good things sufficient to last quite a while. We shall try to prove ourselves worthy, in some degree, of the kindness of these good people.

Sunday, Dec. 29, was a damp, cold day; but I spoke a few words at 11 A. M., at the Methodist Church, on the thirteenth verse of the fifth chapter of Matthew, to a small congregation, and at 7 P. M. spoke to a larger congregation at the Presbyterian Church. Am glad to have Rev. Mr. Ford, a friend and brother of former years, as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in this place, and we very much appreciate the cordial welcome given us by him.

Bro. Huntley and his family carry with them the love and devotion of these good people. They have impressed themselves on the town, and leave no influence for good behind them which will last for years to come. Any pastorate may consider themselves fortunate to have such a man as Bro. Huntley to serve them as pastor. May the blessings of God continue to rest on his labors in the new field to which he has been sent! We are planning and praying, and will work to make this a prosperous year in the history of the Fayette charge.

Am glad to be associated with the preachers of the Natchez district, and with Bro. Adams, the presiding elder, who has given us a cordial welcome into his district. May our associations be pleasant and profitable!

W. A. SAUNDERS.

THOMASVILLE, MISS.

Rev. W. A. Terry, writing from Thomasville circuit, under date of Jan. 2, says:

"We are starting off very encouragingly on Thomasville charge. Are getting ready to call three churches. We are going to have three churches dedicated this year. We are planning to paint one. We are expecting a glorious year. Methodism is looking up in this country."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

On Dec. 31, at 7:30 P. M., the people and packages began coming into the parsonage, and in a few minutes the house and yard were filled with people, and the pantry was well supplied with substantials for the preacher's family. Mrs. Kingry presided at the organ, and singing was indulged in for some time, after which the ladies took possession of the dining-room, and from the well-filled baskets spread a magnificent supper, and the pastor and family were invited to the first table (this suited the pastor), after which all present were invited to dine, and there was plenty left for a bountiful supply the next day, not including the many things stored away for future use. After supper was over all remained to see the old year out and the new one in. Just as the clock was about to strike for the last time in 1901, we all engaged in singing, "Come, let us anew our journey pursue." May God bless those who so kindly remember the pastor and family! Our prospects for a fine year's work are indeed encouraging. A. W. TURNER, P. C.

AMITE CITY, LA.

DEAR DOCTOR: We have commenced the work of the new year on this charge under favorable auspices, and hope to be successful in the Master's work. Our people, thus far, have exhibited no particular sign of dissatisfaction on account of our return for the third year, and I verily believe will treat us kindly, provided we do our duty in the fear of the Lord; and that we propose to do by the help of the Lord.

Your brother, T. J. UPTON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

COURTLAND, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have been most cordially welcomed for the third year. Our work has grown steadily in interest from the beginning. Substantial progress has been made both temporally and spiritually.

Christmas Day brought us many tokens of the good will, kindness and generosity of our people. Our hearts abound with gratitude to those who have so often ministered to our comfort. May our Heavenly Father reward them. We hope to do the best year's work of our ministry. A Happy New Year to you!

Fraternally, O. L. SAVAGE.

Remember that if the opportunities for great deeds should never come, the opportunity for good deeds is renewed for you day by day. The thing for us to long for is the goodness, not the glory.—F. W. Farrar, D. D.

It is one of the fine sayings of Dr. South that "though idleness be a sin which the devil loves to tempt men to, yet he is never guilty of it himself."—Exchange.

When we pray God to perform his gracious purpose with regard to men, let us not insist overmuch that he do it according to our way of thinking.—Southern Churchman.

Pistol Practise

Is becoming more popular among women. The reason given is that a woman should know how to use the pistol for self protection. The theory should be carried further. Where a woman is in danger from assault once she is in danger from disease every day of her life. Women have not only to run the risk of diseases which threaten husband, brother, and son, but they have also to guard against diseases which are peculiar to womanhood.

From these diseases Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will effectively defend women. The use of this medicine preserves as well as restores the womanly health. It corrects irregularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"I cannot say enough for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Ida M. Tutt of 406 Franklin Street, Crawfordsville, Ind. "I could hardly walk alone or do my housework when I heard of your wonderful medicine. I used five bottles of each and several vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' and can say I am a well woman. I thank Dr. Pierce for his advice for he helped me to live. May many thousand women take my advice and when in poor health or suffering from any female trouble take Dr. Pierce's wonderful medicines."

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The learned editor of one of our exchanges quotes, apparently with approval, another editor who "pithily" remarked that "if Christian conversation is not a means of grace, it will be a means of disgrace." But just how "Christian conversation" can be a means of disgrace we are not informed.

"Swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath," is St. James' injunction to the church—a piece of advice, if followed intelligently, that would force every man to fully and clearly understand what he hears before he undertakes an interpretation, and proceeds, in an angry spirit, to answer back. We have known careless hearers to get mad and say ugly things because the preacher, in well-meant remarks, said something they construed as personal. St. James was well acquainted with human nature and human needs. We had better listen to his advice.

Dr. Rankin, of the Texas Advocate, calls attention to the fact that a local preacher, elected lay delegate to the General Conference by the Kentucky Annual Conference, had, during the quadrennium, withdrawn from our church, and, of course, was out of the ministry during the time. Dr. Rankin raises the question of his eligibility to a seat in the General Conference, the law specifying that such representatives "shall have been members of our church for at least six calendar years next preceding the time of their election, and also at the time of holding the General Conference." If the brother was out of the church any length of time during the past six years, it seems unnecessary to raise the question of eligibility.

It is coming to be the fashion to speak of a "preacher and his family," or a "preacher and his wife," as having been appointed to a pastoral charge. This is not exactly right. The preacher's wife is not appointed to a pastoral charge, and is not authorized to take oversight of any work connected with the church. If she is competent to lead or supervise, so much the better for the church; but the idea that she is appointed, necessarily causes some churches, not as well informed as they should be, to expect too much of the preacher's wife. If she fails, the church blames her, and she leaves the charge painfully hurt. Generally, the hands of the preacher's wife is full of domestic cares. The additional burden placed on her by giving her pastoral work is too much.

THE COMING DEACONESS.

Deaconess—A female deacon: one of an order of women whose duties resembled those of deacons; a woman set apart for church work by a Bishop; a woman chosen as a helper in church work.

This definition is according to the dictionary. The modern deaconess assumes vows, and by solemn consecration, more or less formal, is separated from the world. The vows, whatever they may be, it is said, do not bind for life. The deaconess may give up the work whenever she feels disposed to do so. This, as far as it goes, is in imitation of the Roman Catholic sisterhood.

Nobody denies that the work proposed for the deaconess is important, and often delicate; but it has not been made clear that the work is of such a nature, and so delicate, that it is necessary to separate our godly young women from their homes, and put them under oath, in order to accomplish it. We deny that the church of Christ is so constituted as to be unable to carry on its work except through the help of an organization that in its very nature requires its members to abandon, even for a time, their God-ordained mission. God's original purpose in creation has not been changed, nor has he authorized any organization which, in its workings, is obliged to contravene his plans. For this reason we stand opposed to a celibate clergy. For the same reason we oppose any movement that looks in the direction of a celibate sisterhood. One is as much opposed to nature and God's order as the other.

Admitting the importance and delicacy of the work, in mission sections of cities in which it is proposed to employ deaconesses, we undertake to say that any city church, of numbers and strength, in all our Methodism, can find inside its own bounds one, or more, women of sufficient consecration, intelligence and tact to reach the classes that need reaching and help. We know it is said that these women in our home churches will not do it, and can not do it, without some guarantee of support. That is even so. The same is true of the deaconess. They are to be supported and their support must come from the churches.

Now, if the work must be done—and it can be done by the women of our home churches if guaranteed a support—why not put them to work? If we are to wait for an organization to furnish the women, and plan the work, and to beg the money necessary to the sisterhood, we only proclaim our lack of courage and enterprise. If the mission work of our cities is to be done through separate organizations, we simply acknowledge that the church, as a missionary agency in itself, is a failure. This we are not ready to acknowledge.

In regard to this deaconess movement, let it be noted: 1. That a set of separated women are necessary to its existence. For this no scriptural warrant whatever can be found. 2. That they are to take vows, and be ordained to the work—not necessarily by the imposition of hands, but solemnly set apart. Another thing not authorized by the Word of God. 3. They are to be uniformed—that is, they are to wear the habit of their order. This, it is said, will give them ready access to low places, and serve as a protection. That is a poor argument in favor of aping Romanism. We know a much better one: The habit proclaims them church beggars, and gives them access to merchants and dealers, and free transportation over public highways. The uniform is also said to be cheap, not being subject to the demands and fluctuations of fashion. We succumb to that argument.

Note, also, that the deaconess movement calls for deaconess homes. That means "a mother superior," a big, expensive house with high brick or stone walls around the yard—nunneries in everything but name. We are not ready for all these accessories of Romanism, nor do we believe that the strength of Rome consists in her cloistered sisters. Let us put to work the willing hands we have; let us do it with energy, and if any woman can not work save as an ordained deaconess, and proposes to leave the church if we fail to give her a berth in a deaconess home, why, just let her go. A woman of that temper is not as consecrated as she thinks she is. She needs an additional grace. More anon.

THE CHILDREN OF THE CHURCH.

Dr. Rankin, of the Texas Christian Advocate, writing on "Some Needed Legislation," expresses the opinion that, "in the minds of preachers and laity" in our church, "the relation of baptized children to the church is involved in considerable mist." That may be true. If so, it is not the fault of the church, but the fault or misfortune, perhaps both, of the preachers and laity.

Our Discipline, which voices the sentiment of the church, rings clear on the subject—at least, so far as the care to be exercised over them is concerned. It is at this point Dr. Rankin thinks our preachers and laymen are involved in mist, judging by the quotation he makes from the Discipline of the M. E. Church, which he hopes to see reproduced in our own law book. This quotation, which embodies directions to preachers-in-charge, as well as defining the relation of baptized children to God, is not any more explicit in its directions than our own book; nor are the directions any fuller, except in a few minor details. In some particulars the directions in our Discipline are fuller and more satisfactory than the directions given in the Discipline of our sister Methodism.

We have a whole section, embracing five paragraphs, "concerning the children of the church." In order that our readers may see, we quote the paragraph from the Discipline of the M. E. Church, as given by Dr. Rankin:

> We regard all children who have been baptized as placed in covenant relation to God, and under the special care and supervision of the church. The preacher-in-charge shall preserve a full and accurate register of all the baptized children within his pastoral care; the dates of their birth, baptism, their parentage and place of residence. The preacher-in-charge shall organize the baptized children, at the age of ten years or younger, into classes, and appoint suitable leaders (male or female), whose duty it shall be to meet them in class once a week, and instruct them in the nature, design and obligations of baptism, and the truths of religion necessary to make them wise unto salvation; urge them to give regular attendance upon the means of grace; advise, exhort and encourage them to an immediate consecration of their hearts and lives to God, and inquire into the state of their religious experience.

Now turn to our Discipline, chapter four, section two, page 90, and read the instructions there given. Then, by reference to paragraph 131, page 59, it will be found that the preacher is required to keep a permanent record of all the baptisms and marriages within the bounds of his charge. What more do we need?

Dr. Rankin says if the article quoted from the Discipline of the M. E. Church were placed in our Discipline, it "would give homogeneity to the administration of pastors, and enable them to answer the third question in the business of the Quarterly Conference." We do not know about the "homogeneity," but we are sure our pastors have no reason to be unable to answer the "third question." The Discipline says that the section concerning the children of the church contains "things especially to be noticed in the written report of the preacher-in-charge to the Quarterly Conference on the pastoral instruction of children." With such directions any preacher ought to be able to make an intelligent report.

The matter of taking care of our children is of the very utmost importance, and Brother Rankin bases his plea on the highest ground. The church that best looks after the children, and trains them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, is bound to be the strongest and most successful church of the future. As Southern Methodists, we need more "stirring up by way of remembrance" than more law. Of the latter we have sufficient. Let us exhort one another. A thorough reading of our Discipline will refresh our memories, and more grace will help us to do our duty.

THAT "BOOK AGENTS' REPORT."

We assure our brother of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that when we wrote about the Book Agents' Report to the Annual Conferences, we were sane and "really serious." Looking at it after the lapse of two weeks, as it appears in the clear, cold type of the Wesleyan, we are inclined to stand by it. We see in it nothing to take back. What the editor calls "a mere quibble," and "a trivial treatment," of the subject, we based on the demand, more than once made, for "an itemized statement" to the Conferences. Such a statement could not be made without including sales and receipts, even of the smallest items. And we submit: The law requires no such thing.

We submit further that the Annual Conferences, having received these "exhibits" regularly during the last forty years, in coupling their demands for fuller information, with the statement that nobody can determine from the exhibits what is the condition of the Publishing House, nor "what we have in the House, and what the business is," are not only demanding something the law does not require the Agents to give, but raise doubts in the minds of some as to the soundness of business principles employed, and as to the moral soundness of the Agents themselves. The editor of the Wesleyan can not discuss this matter as he has, nor in the light of the action of the Tennessee and Virginia Conferences, without impressing somebody that something is wrong.

If the Conferences needed fuller information of the status of the House, and of its work from year to year, surely the General Conference would have required it of the Agents. But as the General Conference has not done so, the present Agents have followed precedent of long standing, and it is now too late to make war on them. The General Conference is at hand. Let us settle the matter there.

AT AMITE CITY.

Sunday last we spent pleasantly, and we trust profitably, with Rev. T. J. Upton and his clever people at Amite City, a thriving town on the Illinois Central road, sixty-eight miles from the city. The day was perfect, and a good congregation of attentive hearers greeted us, and we did what we could to edify the saints and warn the sinners. Brother Upton has just entered upon his third year in the charge. He was heartily welcomed by the church, and has his work well in hand. He is comfortably fixed in the parsonage, on a lot large enough for a garden, which the preacher cultivates, and in which he grows a variety of vegetables, among them as big turnips, perhaps, as grows in the State. There is also ample room for fowls, and to "this branch of industry" Sister Upton gives attention with great success. It will not be long until she has a yard full of Spring chickens. And how this editor did enjoy the big, blazing wood-fires. We never realized so forcibly before the difference between coal and wood. The very thought of a big, wood fire inspires a desire to go to the country. And when we tell our readers, especially the preachers, that in front of that big fire we had the company and conversation of a sympathetic Methodist preacher and his wife, they will know the extent of our enjoyment. It was the only real Methodist-preacher talk we have had in a long while. We will long remember our visit to Brother and Sister Upton. Nor will we forget the sweet little grandchild.

We did not have time to mix with the people in a social way, but we made the acquaintance of many of them at the church. They are intelligent, loyal Methodists, give their preacher a competent support, and meet their obligations to the various benevolences of the church. We hope to visit Amite City again.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The following notification was received from Bishop Fitzgerald on the thirteenth instant:

MY DEAR DR LAPRADE: You are hereby notified that you are appointed as preacher in-charge of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, for the current year. You will also, to meet the present demand, discharge the functions of presiding elder of the New Orleans district.

O. P. FITZGERALD.

It will be seen by the foregoing that a double duty has been laid upon me. I shall require much assistance from my brethren, and their forbearance if my service as presiding elder should not seem to be full. WM. H. LAPRADE.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT.

The district stewards of New Orleans district will please meet at Carondelet Street Church, pastor's office, on Friday, Jan. 24, at 7:45 P. M. WM. H. LAPRADE.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to each for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

PERSONAL.

The address of Rev. R. H. Barr has been changed from Mathersville, Miss., to Waynesboro, Miss. Correspondents will please take notice.

Rev. Josiah Bancroft, one of the "Old Guard" of the Alabama Conference, recently passed to his reward. He died a few days after the session of his Conference. He was one of the true men of the church.

Rev. F. M. Williams, of Beauregard, Miss., has entered upon another year's work at Beauregard, and met with "a very warm reception by his people." May he have a happy and prosperous year!

Dr. S. S. Keener, now presiding elder of the Baton Rouge district, will still reside in New Orleans. His address is 1114 Carrollton avenue. The Doctor has entered upon his work, and reports a hopeful outlook.

Rev. J. W. Lewis, D. D., transferred from the Louisville to the Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Central Church, Meridian, entered upon his work the first of the year. He is a strong man, and is a valuable addition to the ranks of Mississippi Methodism. We pray that he may have a pleasant and successful year.

Dr. M. B. Corrigan, who was sent from the Little Rock to the Louisiana Conference, and appointed to Texas Avenue, Shreveport, for some cause declined to take charge of the work. Such is our information at this writing.

Rev. J. B. Kent, for several years a useful preacher of the Louisiana Conference, but now in the local ranks, has opened an office in this city. His residence is in Covington, La. We had the pleasure of a call from him this week.

Rev. J. H. Rogers, recently appointed to the Pittsboro circuit, has entered upon his work, and has met the kindest reception at the hands of his people. They have supplied him with many of the good things of life, which he duly appreciates.

Rev. T. W. Adams, presiding elder of the Natchez district, calls attention to mistakes in the appointments as published in the ADVOCATE. R. A. Sibley, Jr., goes to Liberty; E. J. Coker, supply, to Wilkinson, and Ira B. Robertson to Homochitto.

Rev. W. G. Forsythe, writing from Gloster, Miss., says, "The entire assessment to Gloster on account of foreign missions for the year 1902 has been provided for." This note was written Dec. 30, 1901, and is the first note of victory for the new Conference year.

Two of the most active and successful workers for the ADVOCATE are Rev. R. J. Harp, of the Louisiana, and Rev. W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. It would be hard for us to make the award in case a premium had been offered. Oh, for a host of such agents!

In another place in this issue it will be seen that Bishop Fitzgerald has placed Dr. W. H. LaPrade on double duty, having given him pastoral charge of Rayne Memorial, and retained him as presiding elder of the New Orleans district. The Doctor will have his hands full.

Rev. M. Dickie, one of our Brazil missionaries, who has been in the city several weeks under treatment for throat affection, while retaining his general health, we are sorry to say, is not hopeful of a speedy recovery of his throat. This is quite a trial to a faithful and active missionary.

A letter received from Rev. R. S. Collier, once a member of the Louisiana Conference, informs us that he has been appointed to Moore, West Texas Conference. The letter reached us too late for publication in advance of the meeting of the Louisiana Conference, as Brother Collier intended. Hence this note.

The Walnut Ridge (Ark.) Republican, in its issue of Dec. 6 (ultimo), speaks in complimentary terms of Rev. A. H. Williams, who came from the White River to the North Mississippi Conference, and was appointed to Gunnison. The Republican says Brother Williams "is accomplished, a good orator, and well qualified to fill any position to which he may be appointed."

A personal note received from Rev. W. D. Burroughs, who was placed on the superannuated list at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, informs us that his health does not improve. Brother Burroughs is one of our best young men, and it is painful to know that he is so disabled. He will go to Texas in the Spring, where he hopes to be permanently benefited.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, lately appointed to Columbus district, has had a new experience as presiding elder. He says: "The people met us, and had for us all the nice things that make a preacher and his family feel at home. We are indebted to them, and are determined that we will do our best for them religiously. May the Lord give us their hearts, that we may do them good in his name." Amen!

Our old friend and neighbor, Mr. E. M. Gardner, a fine and popular artist, who has his studio in our Publishing House at Nashville, has made an oil portrait of Bishop Keener. It is a reproduction of the Bishop's latest photograph. Dr. Hoss says "it is a speaking-likeness," and that critics declare it to be "a real work of art." We also have in our office a "speaking-likeness" of the Bishop, but, better than all, we enjoy every day or so his company, and all the time his benediction.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could the ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bonnds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Union Gospel Mission.

To the Readers of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE -

DEARLY BELOVED: As you all know of the working of the above mission, the writer wishes to state that in order to continue its work of love among the poor, that all who read this appeal must try and give us a helping hand in the work of this new year. At present we are just barely paying rent, and there is so much that we really need to carry on the good work. We are badly in need of mattresses and bedding, also Sunday-school lesson books and papers for the children, and Testaments and tracts for our hospital and jail work, and coal and wood for the mission. These things we are badly in need of, and must have, in order to carry on the work successfully. We need your help at once, let it be ever so little. Remember the widow's mite. Anyone moved by the Spirit of the Lord to help us, can send it to the mission, or drop a postal card or letter to the undersigned, and the gift will be sent for. Any cast-off clothing for men or women can be used in the work.

Your servant, in His name,

E. A. VAIL, Supt. U. G. M.

Notice.

Pastors desiring my assistance in revivals during the year should make arrangements with me within the next sixty days. I thank the Lord for the great success that crowned my labors last year. I intend to make the year 1902 the best year of my life. Pastors and their people should not allow their doubts about the financial part of the work to hinder them from having a revival. A genuine revival will pay its own way. If a pastor will think for a moment that when things are scarce at the parsonage his people need a revival, his first plans would include an early effort to save his people. My terms will be so arranged as not to allow what I have for my labors to be deducted from or in any way decrease the pastor's salary or Conference collections, but tend to the payment of them in full.

So, dear brethren, I call your attention to this matter thus early—not so much to get calls, but to get the calls that I will get in time to regulate them properly. If part of the invitations that I receive the last six months of the year were dated for Winter and Spring, I could assist a great many more that write me to help them, and not overwork myself. Therefore, let those who contemplate holding early revivals—which are always best for pastors and people—and desire my help, write me at once, and I will arrange to serve as many as possible between now and May. Very truly,

W. D. BASS.

DR. D. M. BYE CO.:

DEAR SIRS—A few months ago I was reading the Arkansas Methodist and saw your advertisement for the cure of cancers. I had one on my neck and thought I would try your medicine and sent for one of your catalogues, and after reading that, I sent for medicine and after using it for a few months, I can say I am well and it cured without pain. Can also say that you are very prompt in doing business. I am very thankful to you for your kind and skillful treatment. Yours very respectfully,

EDITOR ADVOCATE: I would like to answer through the ADVOCATE two questions that have been repeatedly asked me since my location by the Louisiana Conference, at its session at New Iberia, in December, 1901. The questions are these: 1. "Did you know you were going to be located?" 2 "What were you located for, or what was the cause of your location?" My answer to the first is, No; I knew nothing of any intention to locate me. Had I known anything of such an intention, I would have been on hand to answer to the charge. I was told that I would have to move (the reason for which was not clear to my mind, as many of my people appeared very anxious for my return), and was advised, as an economic measure, not to go to Conference. My answer to the second is, I have been told that it was for inefficiency. My presiding elder has never informed me as to the charge. I was never more surprised in my life. I had no thought of being located, and, further, I invite an investigation of my work and life.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN: After the usual disappointments and delays on the part of the printers, I am assured that our Conference Minutes will be ready for delivery by the sixteenth instant. After that date enquire at your express and postoffices. I will send by the former to those convenient to express office, as it is much cheaper. There will be a few hundred copies more than we have funds to prepay on. So I can send extra copies at forty cents per dozen—enough to pay transportation charges—to those who may desire them.

Do You Get Up with a Lame Back?

Thousands of Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To prove what The Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, will do for YOU, every reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail.

Women suffer untold misery because the nature of their disease is not always correctly understood; in many cases when doctoring, they are led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for their ills, when in fact disordered kidneys are the chief cause of their distressing troubles.

Nervousness, headache puffy or dark circles under the eyes, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or tearing down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine, frequent desire to pass it night or day, with scalding or painful sensation,—these are all unmistakable signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone.

If you have any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine at once, about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is cloudy or muddy, if there is a brick dust sediment, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

When the heart is acting badly, have you ever thought that it may be due to kidney trouble as is often the case?

Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root are sleeplessness, dizziness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, variable appetite, but no strength.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty cent and one dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere.

DOCTOR AFTER DOCTOR.

"NONE OF THEM SUSPECTED THAT THE CAUSE OF MY TROUBLE WAS KIDNEY DISEASE."

MRS. G. DeFT.

VINTON, IOWA, JULY 15th 1901.

In the Summer of 1891, I was taken very ill. My trouble began with pain in my stomach, so severe that it seemed as if knives were cutting me. I was treated by two of the best physicians in the county, and consulted another. None of them suspected that the cause of my trouble was kidney disease. They all told me that I had cancer of the stomach, and would die. I grew so weak that I could not walk any more than a child a month old, and I only weighed sixty pounds. One day my brother saw in a paper your advertisement of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. He bought me a bottle at our drug store and I took it. My family could see a change in me, for the better, so they obtained more and I continued the use of Swamp-Root regularly. I was so weak and run down that it took considerable time to build me up again. I am now well, thanks to Swamp-Root, and weigh 148 pounds, and am keeping house for my husband and brother, on a farm. Swamp-Root cured me after the doctors had failed to do me a particle of good.

MRS. GERTRUDE WARNER SCOTT.

EDITORIAL NOTICE.—Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder remedy is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all our readers who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Be on the Watch.

A gentleman stopped suddenly before a sign that told him messenger boys were to be had inside. He hesitated, and then went in.

"How many boys have you in just now?" he asked.

"Six," was the reply; "it's dull to-day."

"Then they're all here," said the gentleman, looking around, while the boys themselves were all attention, wondering "what was up."

"Boys," said the gentleman, eying them scrutinizingly, "I suppose you know there is an exhibition of trained dogs to-night?"

The faces of the boys showed that they were perfectly aware of that fact, and that they might even give him some points in regard to it.

"Well, I'm looking for a boy to take a blind man to see it."

A titter was the first response; then followed a variety of expressions, as: "A blind man!" "You're foolin'!" "What could a blind man see?" and "You can't guy us that way!"

"I'm not guying; I'm in earnest," said Mr. Davis, and then, looking at one of the boys who had said nothing, he asked:

"Well, what do you think of it?"

"I think I could do it," was the reply. "Yes; I'm sure I could, sir."

"How do you propose to make him see it?"

"Through my eyes, sir. That's the only way he could see it."

"You're the boy I'm after," said Mr. Davis, and he arranged for him to meet the blind man.

The exhibition was in a large theatre, and the blind man and his guide had a box to themselves, where they could disturb no one; but Mr. Davis, from his seat in the audience, knew that the boy was telling what went on so that the blind man could understand, and others in the audience became interested in the messenger boy and his companion, who, through carrying on an animated conversation, seemed absorbed and excited over everything that went on. Indeed, no one applauded more heartily than the blind man himself.

The following day Mr. Davis again appeared among the messenger boys, and after a few words with the manager, said:

"Boys, there was a chance offered every one of you yesterday—a chance for lifting yourselves up in the world—but only one of you grasped it. My friend, the blind man, has felt for some time that he might get much pleasure out of life if he could find some young eyes to do his seeing for him, with an owner who could report intelligently. My stopping here yesterday was with the thought that possibly such a pair of eyes could be found here. It was an opportunity held out to every one of you, but only one understood and grasped it. For the rest of you, it was a lost opportunity, for my friend is delighted with the experiment—says he is sure I hit upon the one boy in town who will suit him, and has offered him a good position, with a fine salary. Messenger boys are easy to get, but a boy who can make a blind man see is at a premium. And yet you might—well, you see, that boy, although he did not know it, was on the watch for a good opportunity, and when it came, he knew how to manage it. It is the only way to keep good opportunities from slipping away, boys; you must be on the watch for them."—Anne Weston Whitney, in the Sabbath Recorder.

A Dainty Table.

It is a pity that the mother of every family does not realize what a strong influence the meal hours and the surroundings of the table exert over the formation of their children's characters. If they did, the poor, tired housewife would neglect something else and give her best energies toward making the table attractive. Some one has said, "Show me the company a man keeps and I will tell you who he is;" and we might add, show us a family at table and we will tell you if its members are refined and well-bred. It is certainly an excellent test, particularly in the home where no servants are kept. Under such circumstances, constant watchfulness is necessary, lest the family fall into careless and disagreeable habits.

One of the first mistakes many housekeepers make is in wearing themselves out preparing too great a variety of dishes; what is placed on the table should be of good quality, and well-cooked, but it is better to have less and to pay more attention to the manner in which it is served. Fine linen, china, and costly silver, though desirable, are not indispensable for a dainty table; it is surprising what good results may be obtained by a little taste and care even where one has only the plainest furnishings. No matter how cheap the table linen may be, always select white. Many imagine the red tablecloth an economy, but such is not the case, as they soon become dingy from washing. A great deal depends upon the way in which table linen is laundered. Unless one has a first-class wash-woman, it is best to do it separately. Coffee and other stains should be removed at once, and the linen dried and laid aside until wash day. Do not boil table things, but wash in hot water with borax, as it is excellent to preserve linen from discoloring. Many do not use any starch at all, but it is well, especially with the cheaper grades of linen, to rinse through starch water. Iron while damp, and be very careful to pull the edges straight. Nearly all good housekeepers use a cover of some soft, heavy material under the table cloth.

With well-laundered linen, and dishes that are nicely washed and polished, it is easy to have an attractive table—the more so if use is made of the wild flowers and garnishings which the country affords in such abundance. Encourage pleasant conversation, but never permit haste or disorder at the table. Health and good-breeding alike demand that a proper time be allowed for meals, and that certain indomitable rules be followed.—Eliza R. Parker, in Farm and Home.

Be Observant.

A child may know more than a philosopher about some things. A little girl entered the study of Mezeral, the celebrated historian, and asked him for a coal of fire.

"But you haven't brought a shovel," he said.

"I don't need any," was the reply.

And then, very much to his astonishment, she filled her hand with ashes and put the live coal on top. No doubt the learned man knew that ashes were a bad conductor of heat, but he had never seen the fact verified in such a practical manner.

Two boys of my acquaintance one morning took a walk with a naturalist.

"Do you notice anything peculiar in the movement of those wasps?" he asked, as he pointed to a puddle in the middle of the road.

"Nothing, except they seem to come and go," replied one of the boys.

The other was less prompt in his reply, but he had observed to some purpose.

"I notice they fly away in pairs," he said. "One has a little pellet of mud, the other nothing. Are there drones among wasps, as among bees?"

"Both were alike busy, and each went away with a burden," replied the naturalist. "The one you thought a 'do nothing' had a mouthful of water. They reach their nest together; the one deposits his pellet of mud, the other ejects the water upon it, which makes it of the consistency of mortar. Then they paddle it upon the nest, and fly away for more materials."

You see, one boy observed a little, and the other a good deal more, while the naturalist had something to tell them that surprised them very much.

Boys, be observant. Cultivate the faculty. Hear sharply. Look keenly. Glance at a show window as you pass it, and then try how many things you can recall that you noticed in it.—Ex.

The Blessing of Work.

It is a great blessing to any man to have work to do, whether he feels like it or not. If a man is placed in such circumstances that he can lie in bed in the morning until he feels like getting up; or that he can do nothing after eating his breakfast if he feels lazy; or that it is not necessary for him to take hold of business on days when he feels like doing nothing, he is at a great disadvantage in life, and can not do the best work of which he is capable.

In this respect a poor man is in better circumstances than a rich one, and a rich man can bring himself up to the level of a poor one only by connecting himself with some enterprise where he must work day by day.

Pressure is essential to the highest measure of physical or mental success. If one has work to do every day, whether one cares to do it or not, one may thank God for that constraint. "If you are at liberty to work or not, according to your feelings," said a teacher to some young folks, "pray God to bring you, by some conditions, into such a state that you must be a worker together with God, whether you live or die in so doing."—Wellspring.

"Go On, Sir."

A great astronomer was once telling the story of his life.

"When I was a boy," said he, "I grew tired of mathematics."

In one of his discouraging moments he declared he was going to give them up. He collected his books, and began to put them aside. One book, however, he thought best to look into again. Now, what, think you, were the words that this boy found there, the words that fixed his attention? These, "Go on, sir; go on, sir."

Did he take the advice?

Yes; he took these words for his master. All through his life, whenever he grew tired of any undertaking, this master was his teacher. "Go on, sir; go on, sir."

"No one ever won a victory by turning his back and running away," said this wise man.—Presbyterian.

Every brave heart must treat society as a child, and never allow it to dictate.—Emerson.

It can hardly be gain for us to die until it is Christ for us to live.—Bascom.

Temperance.

SAVED BY A TOY.

A Little Tin Watch That Proved as Efficacious as a Temperance Pledge.

It was a hot, sultry day in August, so hot that most of the children were kept indoors; but in some way Babe Sweet and James Holton managed to be out. It is probable that they had slipped out of the large hotel unobserved by their nurses. At any rate, they were having a glorious time playing in the sand on the shore.

James remarked that the sand was lots finer in front of the hotel.

Babe peeped out from behind the boat house and answered: "I rather play here."

"Yes, so would I," answered the boy.

Whether it was because the boat house afforded shade, or because they didn't want the other children to join them, it is hard to tell, but probably the true reason was that the boat house sheltered them from the hotel, and so from the mother's and nurse's eyes.

James Holton and Bertha Sweet (for that was Babe's real name), were strangers only three weeks before. In the middle of July little ten-year-old James had come to the Thousand Islands with his parents to spend the warm summer months. At first he thought it rather dry. He did not get along with the children. It was too hot to have any fun, and he wished he was back home.

One day about two weeks after his arrival, he was sitting on the steps wishing for something to do, when a carriage drove up. An elderly gentleman alighted and assisted a very stylish lady. She looked like an invalid, for she leaned heavily on the gentleman's arm. Besides these two, there was a very attractive little girl of about six.

"Oh, papa," she exclaimed, "can you carry this fruit? I have these flowers and Dolly."

"Not now," replied the gentleman, kindly. "Wait until I see mamma in, and then if nurse is not here I will come back and help you."

"All right," replied the girl.

Just then James arose, walked down toward the carriage and offered to help the maiden. Babe (for it was she) gladly accepted his help, and thus began their friendship. These two seemed to enjoy each other's society better than that of the other children. Wherever you would see one you were sure to see the other.

On the day that our story opens arose their first dispute. After they had played together for several hours beside the boathouse they wandered down nearer the water. They were busy playing and did not notice the rising tide until Babe jumped up and said: "Why, my dress is wet." She dove her hand into her pocket for her handkerchief; and she pulled it out a string of beads fell into the water. They were immediately washed about two yards from shore, where they caught on some seaweed.

"Oh, my beads!" exclaimed Babe; "get them for me, James."

"What are they good for?" asked the boy.

"Oh, they are dolly's necklace," answered Babe.

"Well, it won't hurt her to lose them," replied the boy.

"Oh, James, won't you get them?" begged Babe. "I will give you anything you want if you will only get them."

"The only thing I want is a watch and chain, and you won't get that," he answered.

For an instant Babe's face clouded; then it brightened, and she said: "I will give you a watch and chain if you will only get the beads."

"Honest?" he demanded.

"Yes, honest, truly," she said.

The beads were soon restored to their owner, Babe's tears dried and she was happy again.

In a few minutes Mr. Holton came after the children. He said: "They have been hunting everywhere for you."

James did not even seem to mind the scolding he received on account of his wet shoes, for the thought of the watch and chain was uppermost in his mind.

"Now, don't forget, Babe," were his parting words.

"I will give it to you at tea," she replied.

When James went down to tea he found a little box under his plate. Well he knew what it was. He didn't want his people to see it, so he put it in his pocket. After supper he hurried off by himself to have a peep at his new treasure. When he opened the box he found a little tin watch and chain. His eager face clouded, for he had expected a real watch and chain. He said he would take it right back to Babe; but something made him change his mind, and instead he put it in his pocket and said: "It is just like a girl."

The icicles have formed their crystals and the buttercups have bloomed a score of times since then.

Two men in uniform were standing on the porch of the hospital. The taller and darker one asked his companion how Capt. Holton was.

"Well," replied the companion, "the doctor says he will live, but it was a narrow escape. The bullet caught in a little tin watch he had in his vest pocket."

Two weeks after a merry crowd of soldiers were gathered around the bedside of Capt. Holton to hear the story of the little tin watch, which the reader already knows.

James replied to the soldiers' eager questions: "Yes, at first I thought the watch worthless, but I didn't want to hurt the girl's feelings, so I kept it. As I grew older it grew dearer to me. I have that little watch to thank for making me what I am.

"Boys, when I was about 25 the wine cup was dearer to me than respect, mothers or sisters; yes, dearer than all else, except that little toy.

"Let me tell of three different times that it saved me from ruin. Once I was so drunk that my comrades were making sport of me. They asked me the time. I pulled out the little tin watch, at which they guyed me and made fun of it. I didn't care what they said to me, but I wouldn't let them make fun of the watch; so I got up and left, vowing never to go back to a place where the inmates would make fun of my watch. For several months I kept my vow; but at last temptation got the best of me. I went to an unknown saloon and ordered a good big drink. I went to pay for it, but as I was hunting in my pocket for change my fingers touched the watch. It burned like fire. I turned and left the saloon, leaving the drink unpaid for and untouched.

"The last time it saved me was shortly after I joined the army. This time it not only saved me, but ten good, worthy soldiers. We had been in camp several weeks, and such cold, damp ones that we were almost dead. So ten of us decided to get permission to visit the neighboring town and have a good old time. We gained permission and made for a saloon. We were all having our first round, when one of the boys asked if the others had seen my little tin watch. They hadn't, but were anxious to. As I pulled it out to show to the boys it was like an angel's face warning me. I pushed the glass from me and related the story I have just told to you. When I was through there were tears in every eye. One of the boys said: 'Amen;' we all rose as one body, leaving the glasses half empty, and left the saloon. The ten of us then made vows never to let liquor overcome our better selves.

"So you see, boys, that little watch is dear to me. It has not only saved my life, but my character."

"Now tell us about the girl," demanded one of the boys.

The captain blushed and replied: "Some day she will be my bride."—Florence Tilden, in Banner of Gold.

OBITUARIES.

Mrs. Evelyn Purvis (nee Aldridge) was born in Concordia parish, La., in November, 1824. She was brought up in Natchez, Miss., and married to Mr. H. A. Purvis early in life. From her girlhood she was a member of the Methodist Church, and a devout Christian. She was faithful unto death. In her old age she lived with her two daughters in Yazoo City, Miss., where she was highly esteemed for her many virtues. She had been in feeble health for months, but suffered in patience and in meek submission to her Father's will. She died on the thirty-first day of December, 1901. One of her daughters, Miss A. Purvis, was stricken down suddenly after her mother's case was hopeless, and died Dec. 29, 1901. We buried the daughter one afternoon and the mother the next. It was a sad dispensation to the surviving daughter; but she mourns not as those who have no hope. Miss Rebecca, like her mother, was a Christian woman, and had been a true follower of Christ from childhood. Both of them are remembered in much affection by many friends whose sympathies go out for the stricken one left behind. The mother died without knowing the daughter had gone before, and must have been sweetly surprised to meet her in heaven. W. R. LEWIS.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women to-day who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhœa. They let the months pass and their trouble becomes harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of in the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

Belen, Miss., March 9, 1900.

I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught. Before I began to take your medicines I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicines until I get cured, for I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me.

The Epworth Organ helps the preacher

When the singing has plenty of snap and power, the preacher finds it easy to preach.

There's nothing like good rousing music to make the people attentive.

The Epworth organ has a sweet, rich tone—strong and sustaining. It reaches the people back by the doors and encourages the whole congregation to join in.

The singers like it because it's so easy to sing with. The organist likes it too, because it's so easy to play. The touch is responsive, and the pedals work easily.

Lemon Elixir will not fail you in any of the above-named diseases, all of which arise from a torpid or diseased liver, stomach or kidneys.

At the Capitol.

I have just taken the last of two bottles of Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir for nervous headache, indigestion, with diseased liver and kidneys. The Elixir cured me. I found it the greatest medicine I ever used.

J. B. MENNICH, Attorney,
1225 F Street, Washington, D. C.

President National Bank,

McMinnville, Tenn., writes: From experience in my family your Lemon Elixir has few if any equals, and no superiors in medicine for the regulation of the liver, stomach and bowels. Your Lemon Hot Drops are superior to any remedies we have ever been able to get for throat and lung disease. W. H. MAGNESS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

Letters from a Self-Made Merchant to His Son

They are from John Graham, an old Chicago pork packer, to his son Pierrepont, who has just left Harvard College, and is beginning work in earnest as an eight-dollar clerk in the old man's packing-house.

This series, recently published in THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, has been put into a little booklet, and a copy will be sent free of charge to any one sending one dollar for a year's subscription to THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. More of these letters are to appear in early numbers of THE POST.

Profitable Work offered agents in every town to secure subscriptions to THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. We want agents who will work thoroughly and with business system to cover each section with our illustrated little booklets and other advertising matter, and to look sharply after renewals from old subscribers. The pay is first rate, and at the end of the season $20,000 will be given the best workers as extra prizes for good work. How well some of our agents have succeeded is told in a little booklet we would like to send you—portraits of some of our best agents, with the story of how they made it pay.

The number of crimes committed in our large cities is appalling. The matter of suppression is a problem that no one thinks of trying to solve. The best that can be done is to reduce lawbreaking to the minimum. This could be done if proper vigilance were exercised, and punishment, prompt and adequate, were meted to offenders. Once a year public attention is called to the subject by the reports of officials. The report for New Orleans has just been made public. The number of arrests, which is supposed to indicate the amount of crime, for the year past was 17,221. This, it is said, is below the average for some years past, the number going frequently over 20,000. On the supposition that the city has a population of 300,000, which is near the correct figure, the report shows that one person out of every seventeen, or thereabout, was arrested last year. How many criminals escaped arrest, it is impossible to determine, but they were numerous. This is an indication of the widespread corruption in the city. And when it is known that New Orleans is not as bad as some of the large cities, it is seen at once that corruption is general. These alarming facts call for earnest thought on the part of all good citizens.

The question of electing United States Senators by the people instead of by State Legislatures is again up for discussion. A bill is before Congress now asking for an amendment to the Constitution to that effect. "This proposition always has been popular in the House, and the resolution will be adopted if the Committee on Rules will give it a day, but it never will be permitted to pass the Senate. Many similar resolutions have been smothered in Senate committees. The leaders there do not propose that there shall be a change in the existing and traditional customs of Senate elections by the State Legislatures. Nevertheless, opinion exists that something ought to be done to prevent States from being deprived of their full representation," as is the case now in Delaware, which has no senator on account of the failure of the Legislature to elect. The proposition is also popular with State Legislatures and the people.

No accurate knowledge, it seems, can be obtained concerning the health of the Pope of Rome. It is a matter of almost supreme importance to the Roman Catholic Church. One day he is reported to be in excellent health, with a clear intellect, and fully alive to all that concerns the world. Another day it is given out that he is feeble, that his end is near, and withal unconscious much of the time. The Pope is very old, and if he is hovering between life and death, and unconscious at times, there is much ground for uneasiness, for he is head of the Roman Catholic Church throughout the world, and, in the condition described, wholly unable to attend to the business satisfactorily. Momentous questions are now confronting the church, and a clear head and steady hand are needed. Dispatches say that leading dignitaries of the church are ready to proceed to Rome the moment notice is received of the death of the Pope.

The Legislature of Mississippi is now in session. Among other important matters to be considered, Gov. Longino has submitted "the question of the passage of a law prohibiting the sale of all spirituous liquors in the State." The prohibition sentiment largely prevails in Mississippi, five-sixths of the State, or, perhaps, a larger per cent., being free from the sale of liquor through the operation of the local-option law. The demand is now for absolute prohibition, and the governor's action is in compliance with strong petitions from religious assemblies, and we doubt not that back of the expressed wish of conferences and conventions is the strong convictions of a majority of devout Christian men, and others who have the interests of the people at heart. Our own opinion is that if the Legislature will give the State a prohibition law, it will be sustained by the people quite as well as the present local-option law; the opinion of some secular papers to the contrary, notwithstanding.

A measure of significance and of far-reaching importance has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Rixey, of Virginia. The bill provides for the opening of Federal Soldiers' Homes to ex-Confederate veterans. The introduction of such a bill is significant of the spirit of the times. Should the bill pass, it will indicate how widespread the feeling of good-will is. There were manifest expressions of sympathy with the measure when proposed. If any ill feeling was displayed, it was not reported to the public. The South, of course, in paying taxes, helps to sustain the Federal Soldiers' Homes; but never until now, thirty-eight years after the close of the war, has such a favor been asked at the hands of the Government. The disposition to grant such a favor evidently springs from generous hearts, and at the same time recognizes the honor and valor of the fighters for the "Lost Cause." The era of good-will is here.

AN AWFUL WARNING.

I send you in this a copy of a letter written by Will Mathis to his son —a boy now about three years old. Mr. Mathis was the principal in one of the most atrocious crimes ever committed in Lafayette county; perhaps in the State of Mississippi. He and his confederates murdered two officers who had gone to his house to arrest him for illicit distilling. He was then under indictment and out on bond for counterfeiting. This man attained his majority with a good character, and a member of the church. These officers were killed in his own house, and he burned the house down over them to hide the evidences of his crime. He is now in jail here in Oxford, and sentenced to hang on the fourteenth day of February, 1902. One of his confederates, a negro, is to hang the same day. Another confederate, his father-in-law, goes to the penitentiary on one count for life. Still another confederate, his relative by marriage, goes to the penitentiary for life, and a brother of this last-named confederate, who was an accessory after the fact, goes for two years.

Since the above was written the father-in-law has been found guilty on the second count, and sentenced to hang on Feb. 14.

The down-grade of Mr. Mathis was short, but fearfully precipitous. Drinking, illicit distilling, counterfeiting, arson, theft, murder. He is yet a young man—only twenty-six.

GILDEROY.

Jan. 15, 1902.

To Baxter Cleveland Mathis—

MY DEAR SON: It is with a heart full of sadness that I write you this from the county jail, where I am now confined. I am in an iron cell 8x16 feet, where I am kept day and night. Everything in the room is a stove, an iron bedstead, a hard mattress, and some blankets. If you live to be old enough, I want you to visit the place where your father spent his last days, and let my fate be a lesson to you. My cell is the second on the right. As you look in I hope you will realise that right here I spent many an hour of fear and anguish on account of your welfare. Many a time I have hugged you to my breast, and while I loved you with all the tender affection that a father can feel for his baby, I had rather you had died in your infancy than to follow the life I have led. One thing that is the earnest wish of your loving father is, that you do right in all things from the time you are old enough to know right from wrong. Love and obey your kind mother, and try to be a comfort to her, and make up for the trouble I have caused her. Your life will be just what you make it. You can make it a success or a failure. You will find that people will watch you closely on account of the way your father has done; but you will get credit when you do right, and condemnation when you do wrong. You will meet with evil temptations to submit to the first to do wrong. Be industrious and economical. Love and fear God, and success will crown your efforts. Remember that poverty does not degrade you or make you unhappy. Nothing will degrade you but sin; the wages of sin is death. Above all, never touch whisky or any strong drink. Never think that you can take one drink without it hurting you. Every drunkard has seen the time when he could let whisky alone. Intemperance has ruined more men than every other evil in the world. When whisky gets the advantage of a man he is fit for no business or position in life. All the demons of hell combined could not contrive or invent anything that would be a worse curse to humanity and work for Satan as whisky. And I want to say here that women could put whisky and drinking down if they tried.

When I was young my life was promising. I was the idol of my parents, and well thought of by everybody. There was nothing to keep me from growing up a good man, but I learned to love whisky. At first I would only take a social drink with friends, but I kept on taking it until the appetite grew on me, and I could not stop. It led me to where I am now. Never touch it, my boy. Remember your father's warning, and grow up a good man. Forgive me the wrong I have done you.

Your loving father,

WILLIE C. MATHIS.

If you are in trouble, give your burden to the Lord, and try to comfort somebody who is in greater trouble. "There is nothing that sweetens a bitter heart so surely or so quickly as prayer."—Exchange.

SOUTH CAROLINA LETTER.

BY DR. JOHN O. WILLSON.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: It was pleasant to me to see again the face of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. I always enjoyed it—editorials, contributions, and all. Your contributors will pardon me for saying that when I saw in your columns anything from Bishop John C. Keener, that had precedence over everything, and it never failed to pay for being given the first place. You are fortunate in being where you can see the "grand old man" of Southern Methodism, and now and then can secure a word from him for your ADVOCATE. May he linger long with us, and may "his natural force" know no abatement!

I write you from Abbeville, in a county of the same name. It is a section that has furnished many marked men. John C. Calhoun and George McDuffie were born here. It was from our county that "Gilderoy's" parents moved west, and prevented him from being one more of our prized productions. His ancestry was located near Lowndesville, not far from the line between Abbeville and Anderson counties. The family church was Smyrna, which still holds the name, though now removed a few miles from its old situation.

The Huguenots first settled in Abbeville county. They brought the names of sunny France to the then wilderness — Bordeaux, Abbeville, and the like. French names are still to be found here. But these clay hills were too fertile to be left to one class of settlers. The Scotch-Irish followed the Huguenots, and from that day to this "the woods have been full" of that sturdy people. These latter brought with them their faith, as did the Frenchmen, and so Presbyterians have been many hereabouts. The finest church in our town is the Presbyterian, and yet only two miles away is historic "Long Cane," where a large number of Presbyterians hold membership. At this place is a very old cemetery, which was said to have been selected this way: There was a lower and upper settlement of Presbyterians which agreed that when one of their number died, each would set out on the one highway, and where the two companies met, they would bury the corpse and thereafter make their cemetery. The agreement was carried out; the meeting place was Long Cane; there the burial proceeded, and God's acre was chosen.

While there can be no doubt that the Presbyterian Church is the finest in town, yet ours, and those of the Associate Reformed Presbyterians, and of the Protestant Episcopalians, are fine structures, and the Baptist Church is worthy company of the rest. Our negro fellow-Christians have good houses of worship.

Writing of the nationality of Abbeville's early settlers reminds me of a simple story that I heard years ago. Col. Thomas Thomson was a distinguished lawyer and faithful Presbyterian about the middle of the past century. The State Legislature finally elected him one of the judges of the Circuit Court. Of course, all Abbeville was delighted. An enthusiastic friend rushed to the mother of the judge with the news. "Mrs. Thomson," cried he, "Tom has been elected circuit judge of South Carolina." The old lady laid her work on her lap, looked up, and said in her broad Scotch, "Well, Tammas will mak' 'im a gude judge." "Why, Mrs. Thomson, aren't you proud of your son's promotion?" said the astonished messenger. "Promotion!" said the old saint. "Hoot, mon, but Tammas has been an elder in the church of God this mony a year." In her eyes an honored place in the church was higher than anything Legislatures could confer. Pity that feeling was not the conviction of today!

Stories sometimes have to be given up when inquiry for fact is made. But I was delighted to hear from Mr. Quarles, son-in-law of Judge Thomson, that this one is true. The words may not be exact, but the incident occurred.

It is time to stop. I know how much editors prefer short articles, and this is scarcely entitled to that credit.

TRAINED WORKERS.

BY REV. W. T. HOLLING, D. D.

In every field of labor trained workers are ever in demand, because they can do more and better work than can the untrained, who, in the very nature of things, must waste more or less force in inability fully understand and skillfully do the work in which they are engaged. The church suffers much at this point, and should endeavor to reduce the waste to the minimum. The young man in the ministry should be trained in the school and practical exercise in preaching before being put in charge of a mission, circuit, or station, to do the most delicate and difficult work in which any human being can engage. If the time ever was when this training in thought and labor was not a necessity, that time has passed, and the demand for scholastic and practical training grows more and more imperative as the conditions under the changes of human advancement make the work of the ministry more difficult.

Of course, no instrument as a preacher can be effective without the personal presence and power of the Holy Spirit; but it is no lightness to assume that God can use the finished and furnished instrument to greater results than can be obtained through a defective one. St. Paul must ever remain what we may call a striking lesson as to what God can do with a trained mind and a soundly converted soul, and the contrast is no questioning of what God can and does do with such men as some of the other apostles, who, full of faith and zeal, were used to mighty results, but not like those coming through St. Paul.

What is true of the ministry is true of every other human agency in the work, and the church should not fail to see and use the possibilities which are in the untrained forces at her command. How much is wasted through untrained and incompetent teachers in the Sunday-school; and for the want of the ease and effectiveness of training, how many good women are prevented from doing full work in the vineyard!

To visit the sick and approach the poor properly is a work which one must be trained to in order to do the good which is possible, but which no untrained man or woman, however full of zeal, can do. We, who are older in the ministry, and are armed with the experience of years of practical contact, can do this work; but an untrained one is utterly helpless in attempting to reach the souls of men and women when they are under what seem to them to be calamitous conditions. How often does a zealous, but untrained young woman seek to do this delicate work only to the injury both of herself and those to whom she goes. Her visits are only occasionally made, and then unto each in the same way, so that she has little or no knowledge of conditions and moods, and, of course, wonders why some seem to take no interest in her efforts to do them good. In every church those who are willing to do this work should be trained to do it just as the nurse is trained, or as is the skilled laborer in any field of work; and in order to this, there must be training-places. What can be better, then, for this purpose of training consecrated women in the work than Deaconess Homes in different localities, unto which they may go and be educated, if you please, and fitted thoroughly for the great work which it is possible for them to do?

Though somewhat along in years and old enough to be behind the times, I am not dead to the pressing needs of the present, the most glorious time for the development of useful force in the church to the glory of the Master, and hence I sincerely hope that the next General Conference will make provision for this important organization, and so conserve rather than let us continue to dissipate so much force needed to move the car of religious progress along the up-grade of the century.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension will be held on the twenty fifth of April, and it will be necessary for all who desire to apply to the Board for aid, either in donations or loans, to have their applications made out and in the hands of the secretary of their own Conference Board of Church Extension by March 1, and that the secretary of the Conference Board shall have those applications, which his Board approves, placed in our hands by the first of April. Let all applicants see that all information they wish us to have in regard to their applications shall be in our hands in writing by April 1, as any information coming to us later than that date can not receive the attention that we desire to give to such matters.

Let all who wish to apply to the Board for aid send at once to this office for the blanks they need on which to make their application.

A GENEROUS DEED.

It was the wish of the Rev. P. A. Johnston, long identified with the Mississippi Conference, and one of its most devoted members, that his children should give from his estate the sum of five hundred dollars for the Conference Endowment Fund. The following note, received Jan 21, shows that his wish has been fully respected:

Meridian, Miss., Jan. 20, 1902.

DEAR DOCTOR: The heirs of our late brother, Rev. P. A. Johnston, have this day turned over to me $500 for the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund. This is carrying out the request of their sainted father. Fraternally,

D. P. BRADFORD.

Miscellaneous Notes.

The Wesleyan Methodists of England have succeeded in raising the full amount of the proposed Twentieth Century Thank-offering, one million guineas—a sum equal in our money to about $5,000,000.

Bishop C. D. Foss and Rev. Dr. T. B Neely, corresponding secretary of the Sunday-school Union of the M. E. Church, have been in the city during the past week. They will meet the Louisiana Conference of their church this week at New Iberia.

The Vanderbilters—faculty and students—recently passed two hours and twenty minutes pleasantly listening to an address much mixed with politics. The speaker was a noted politician who had just returned from the Philippines, and he was full of what he saw, and what he thought ought to be done with the far-off isles.

Dr. D. C. Kelley says in the Midland Methodist that "the Nashville district was established in 1812," and "is probably the oldest district bearing the same name continuously, west of the Blue Ridge, in our church." Also, that it "stands at the head of all the districts in our Methodism in contributions to the cause of Christ, with the exception of the St. Louis district, which is much stronger, financially, than our Nashville Methodism."

A man of integrity will never listen to any plea against conscience.—Home.

Christian Advocate.

What Our Editors Say.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

There is need of more sympathy, more tenderness of feeling—more earnest solicitude among Christians for each other. The church is a family, and Christians are brethren—members of the "household of God." It is always the weakest, the most dependent, the most helpless one in the home that receives the most sympathy and attention from the members of the family. When the babe, the pet of the house, takes his first steps—learning to walk—how he is applauded, and when the little feet trip and he falls, strong, loving arms lift him up, and with encouraging and soothing words he is started off again. When, by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, a soul is born into the kingdom of Christ, he is a mere babe in Christ—just beginning to walk, and he should receive the sympathy and encouragement of Christians, and if in his weakness he stumbles and falls, set him on his feet again and give him a new start. There is no duty so much neglected by the church as the duty of restoring those who have been "overtaken in a fault." When a member goes astray it is generally left entirely for the pastor to look after him, while many members of the church stand with folded arms, looking on, seemingly with very little sympathy for the fallen one—finding fault with the pastor—criticising his methods, and saying: "That is just what I expected: I told you so: I knew he would not hold out." Many a poor fellow, enslaved by evil habits, has, by divine help, gained the victory over his appetites, and began Christian life joyfully and hopefully, but when the freshness and odors of his experience of conversion passed away, he has made shipwreck because the church did not give him the moral support that he needed. If, when he joined the church, Christians, instead of predicting that he would not hold out, had rallied round him, by their co-operation and the help of God he would have held out. Give the new converts a chance. Pray for them, encourage them, and "do all in your power to increase their faith, confirm their hope and perfect them in love."—Southern Christian Advocate.

TRY A "NEW TACK."

A Methodist preacher makes a grievous mistake when he acts on the principle that all the paths, pastoral, theological, and homiletical, which he is to tread have been marked out for him, and that he dare not follow any other. Such a man, when he tries the old plan and fails, folds his arms and becomes either a manikin, an ecclesiastical mummy, or a wailing simulacrum of a prophet bothering the public with mechanical Jeremiads. Brother, if you have failed to draw a congregation, have successful meetings, or carry full collections to Conference, according to the old methods, try a "new tack." God smiles on the "new-tack" men who hold to the old Gospel, and appeal to the old Spirit of power.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

OUR SUPERANNUATES.

We ought to do better by our worn-out preachers and their families. The sum of money raised for them by most of the Conferences is ridiculously inadequate to the demands. The government pensions her disabled soldiers. Railroads are beginning to provide for the men who have worn themselves out in the service. Recently some business firms have commenced similar arrangements for the care of life-long employees. While the church is not a financial organization, yet she has ample ability to see to it that her worn-out preachers shall not come to actual want in the closing days of their pilgrimage. Having this ability, she ought to exercise it for the cause of common humanity, and for the development of her own vigor and healthy growth. . . . We plead for our worn-out men. If the various charges clamor for young and aggressive men, they must prepare to take care of the aged ones who have borne the burden and heat of the day.—Midland Methodist.

REVIVALS AND COLLECTIONS.

That was our cry at the beginning of the year—let there be a general revival in the churches, led either by special evangelists or by the pastors, and let every collection be in full! Brethren, why not? Is there so little business in the church, so little desire to see the church enlarged at home, that we are willing to trail along in the same old way? Rest assured that if you are not adding to the church, in numbers and in business strength, you are going to fall back, no matter whether you are in the handsome stone-front and tall pinnacle, or in the log-house in the woods. God's law is that we shall do our best at all times, and that means continual improvement. Some of our friends may begin to make excuses, as we laymen sometimes do, but as is often the case with both classes, the excuse may be of little value. Again we say, On with the revivals, and up with the collections!—Central Methodist.

REV. RANSOM J. JONES.

BY DR. H. M. DU BOSE.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: I come to speak in memory and praise of a friend and brother departed. The death of Rev. R. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, enlarges my view of the inheritance of the just. Happy the death of such a man, and happy the thoughts of those who speak, remembering his days of earth! Truth is greatest when lived, and manhood is the measure of living. The story of manhood can not be written; it must write itself. When, at last, the mists and mirage of romance are lifted from passing being, and its record settles down into the severity of history, only fact and life will remain; and it is evermore seen that simple worth and simple faith are to hold most securely through that test of time.

The worth of the man whose life reassured me, and whose memory now moves me to grateful praise, was a model of excellent tempers, unvarying kindness, lofty motives, and Galilean manliness. I should search in vain the records of my associations, in many relations and in many places, during twenty-five years of active life, for a truer type of gentleman, or for more unmistakable tokens of religious sincerity and fidelity. It was a daily inspiration, when I was closely associated with him, to mark the unruffled movement of his faith, and to note the winnowed grace of his chaste and Christian speech. With him I took counsel, and to him committed the confidences of inmost thought. He enriched my spirit with mutual returns. His secret professions became an open vision in his life as he walked. Strong in intellect, modest in demeanor, a soul abiding in love with gentleness, he has diminished, by his going, the honor of the company of the elect on earth, but has enhanced that of the assembly above. His life was rounded with the peacefulness of sleep. The night was past; the dawn was come. From wakefulness of fever, the tired eyelids, closing, shut out from the soul of God's servant the "lurid morning's" stress, and shut in upon it restfulness and—heaven. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

"THEY WERE LOVELY IN THEIR LIVES."

BY MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

Last Summer, while visiting in Ohio, my hostess accompanied me to see two ladies, who, in the parlance of less progressive times, would have been called "old maids." There were once three sisters living alone, quietly and simply; they were very poor. As the years went by the eldest became ill. There was, apparently, no definite trouble; only a great weakness that kept her in bed, and a growing whiteness that betokened the paling of the life-blood. Softly, one day, she went out from the little home to the longed-for mansions of the other country. The two stricken hearts caught up the threads that had been laid down by the translated one, and in the activities of hourly duties, whether in household toil, or religion, or philanthropy, they wove close meshes over the gaping wound, and, with peaceful faces, smiled upon the world. As my companion and I stood upon the steps of the home where the two sisters lived, the door was opened, and Miss Anna greeted us joyfully. Taking us into a small room, we found Miss Sue in bed—still and white and emaciated. When I was introduced she drew my face down close to hers, and kissed me again and again, in a raptnre of delight, talking eagerly all the while of my blessed work and the outlook for our cause. Just before I left she took my hands in hers and said, "You must send me your itinerary, and every night when you go upon the platform to speak to the people, I will lie here and pray for you." As we passed out upon the street my friend said: "Dear Miss Sue is going just as her sister went. No visible suffering; only that pitiable weakness, that same deadly pallor." How beautiful that interview was to me, and how holy, for Miss Sue was, even then, upon the border-land, and the light from eternity's shore was resting upon her face.

Christmas Day a letter came to me from Miss Anna, in which she told me that her lovely sister had entered the life immortal. A little handkerchief was enclosed; worn, and with faded border. It was smoothly ironed and so folded that the name of the blessed soul who once owned it (Miss Sue) should be plainly seen when the envelope was opened. A glimpse of that pathetic possession brought back the scene in that sick-room months ago, with that angel-heart, already attuned to the heavenlies, offering to pray for me; wanting to help even unto the end. With this memory came the consciousness of the sweetness of spirit that prompted the sending of the little gift. I pushed the love-tokens aside that had come from others, and, taking that poor, little faded handkerchief in my hands, I pressed it to my lips and wept.

Years ago two old ladies from Sweden went to Nebraska, and settled on a little farm. One was a widow, the other unmarried. They were sisters. Their poverty was pitiable, but their mutual devotion was strong enough to face it without a murmur. When the bitter Winter days came on, one of the sisters, in attending to some work, fell and broke her hip. She was unable to have a doctor; so the bones went unreplaced, and now protrude, giving the appearance to the old body of having no thigh whatever. Both of the women have had rheumatism so severely that their limbs have swollen and burst. Their feet are double their natural size and bandaged; their hands twisted and almost useless. Through all the long days they sit, reading aloud to each other, trying to keep up courage in divers ways, but all the time praying for death, although triumphant through grace over suffering.

The people of the village of Lexington heard of their isolation and helplessness, and they bought them a cottage, and carried them into town to live. As they were taken through the streets the two pitiful old ladies, so far 'frae home," yet so thankful to God for their deliverance, lifted up their quavering, pathetic voices, and chanted in their native tongue the twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want," ringing out like a benediction upon the people.

Lord God, let the spirit of these who "were lovely in their lives" descend upon humanity.

THE SABBATH.

BY ARTHUR ERWIN.

The Sabbath day, as it comes to the Christian, is of Hebrew origin. It was a link in the chain of testimony to the world through Israel that God created the world and all things contained therein, and forms a part of that system of education ordained of God to teach man his ways, to lead him back to the estate from which he had fallen when he was a "keeper of the garden," not the proprietor, and walked and talked with God just as the high-priest, the typical man, walked and talked with God in the discharge of his most holy duties. It was given to Israel as a people, a nation, and the first thing requisite to its observance is the first commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Hence his will was to become the law of the nation, and the compliance with his will, as revealed through the law, daily essential to the proper observance of the Sabbath. It was not a thing separate and apart from the other duties of daily life, as one would sometimes think from the zeal of its advocates. Each and every part of the law was so framed as to blend into a perfect whole; hence James tells us that "whosoever keepeth the whole law, yet offends in one point, is guilty of all." The covetousness of one man brought defeat to the army of Israel at Ai, and the loss of thirty-six men, thus clearly teaching the interdependence of good men and of all upon God.

The observance of the day was a partial restitution and recognition of God's dominion, typical of the fuller recognition and restitution of the Sabbath year, the year of the "Lord's release," and again of the "jubilee," or "fifty," year; the end of the law, for the law could give no greater liberty, no greater rest to man, to the land, the nation. It was typical, also, of the rest that came to the soul of the faithful at death; again, of the rest that would come to body and soul of the faithful with the coming of the Messiah, whose mission was the redemption of man in this life; typical of the "perfect day," Pentecost. The purpose of this law, in connection with the entire law, was to develop character until man would do habitually and sincerely all that the law required him to do in the year of jubilee. Man could do this grudgingly or of necessity—that is, the outer man complied with the law, but the heart of the man, the soul, the inner man, protested against it. He complied with the letter of the law, but not with the spirit, not in the spirit. Then to the faithful son of Abraham the seventh day, the seventh year, and the jubilee, constituted the Sabbaths of the Lord, the God of Israel. He sacredly observed the first with the true spirit of devotion, thus proclaiming to his brethren his readiness to comply with the second and third just as sacredly. He also declared to all the world his faith in the unredeemed promise of a coming Messiah in the fullness of time. Then to the Christian it means the promise fulfilled that the day is holy, beginning with the first day of the week; all time is holy, every year a Sabbath year, every year a jubilee; that he is at peace with God, conscious of his abiding presence; that he is in love and fellowship with all the followers of Christ; that he has made restitution to God, and recognizes his universal dominion; that he no longer counts his possessions or himself as his own; neither his time by years, months, or weeks; but day by day he lives, not of right, but by the grace or permission of God, who has a right to take away the breath of life at any moment. Now is all the time he can claim; hence he must do now all that is essential to insure his peace and acceptance with God.

Such is the declaration of all who sincerely observe the Sabbath day, and pray, "Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts (now) as we forgive those indebted to us," and, "Thy will be done on earth as in heaven." He also declares his readiness to do all in his power to fulfill the will of the Lord as revealed by his Son, whom he recognizes as the heir to "the heavens and the heaven of heavens; the earth also, and all that therein is."

Brethren, all, are we keeping the Sabbath?

NOT ALL A DREAM.

Whilst seated at the table with his literary club around him, Dr. Johnson being asked his opinion of dreams, replied: "Accept not dreams in their entirety, lest you accept much error; reject not dreams in their entirety, lest you reject a little truth."

In our views on this subject, we coincide with the Doctor. There has recently come to our knowledge two dreams so remarkable that I shall give them to you, and request any Joseph found among your readers to give me an interpretation of them through your paper.

The dreamer of both is a lady member of our church, of signal piety, and the mother of a family. She is the daughter of a Methodist preacher, and about thirty-eight years old. Some two months since I received by letter from her the following dream, coupled with the request for an interpretation thereof: She dreamed that she was standing on the banks of the most beautiful river she ever beheld; the water flowing evenly with the banks, clear as crystal, as far as she could see; the land was perfectly level, and beautifully carpeted with vegetation on both sides of the stream. Looking across, she saw two personages, in ladies' attire, moving down the stream, one just behind the other, their garments as white as the driven snow. She watched them till they had passed far down the stream, and then saw them turn around and return, the one in front bearing in her hands a large white volume. As they neared her they hailed her, saying, "Come over to us; come, come," and asked her if she thought she was doing the will of God.

In the second dream she said she had with her to supper her father, a man of varied experience, and her oldest brother, a distinguished attorney. When supper was over she and her father and brother were sitting around the fire, she having her youngest child in her arms. When she looked at her child's cuffs they seemed to be celluloid. She saw a message written thereon which was as follows: "A Proclamation: In behalf of the State of Mississippi and the northern portion of Louisiana, I beseech that there be missionaries sent to the people at once. Although they have my word among them, they take no heed, and unless they be aroused from their slumber, they will most assuredly suffer at the coming of my judgment."

LENOX.

A RECKLESS PRANCER.

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

The following elegant communication to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was turned over to "Circuit Rider" to answer, but the meeting of the Annual Conference at the time, and an appointment since to a new field, have prevented my noticing it before now.

The ADVOCATE readers will find the letter to be an effusion of deep seated spirituality, to say nothing of the fraternal spirit which it breathes. It is as follows, "verbatim et literatim:"

"Ackerman, Miss., Dec. 6, 1901.

"CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans, La.:

"A man by the name of Fear, whose nom de plume is 'Circuit Rider,' and whose utterances are false—yea, as false as the essence of the slime of perdition can make them—is out in an article in your paper, of Dec. 5 (yesterday), in which he pretends to quote Dr. Wall. Now, I will obligate myself to join the Wesleyan Society if 'Circuit Rider' will find that quotation in Dr. Wall's writings. I will pay $100 in gold, and give a crop out of each one of my ears, for the quotation from Dr. Wall. 'Circuit Rider' is either a willful falsifier, or he is an ignorant dupe.

"Please publish and oblige.

"W. M. HICKS,

"Baptist Evangelist."

The quotation which was attributed to Dr. Wall in the ADVOCATE issue, of Dec. 5, and which has given the Rev. W. M. Hicks so much offense, is as follows, "The ancient Christians, when they were baptized by immersion, were all baptized naked, whether they were men, women, or children."

"Circuit Rider" can get the testimony of a hundred witnesses that the above quotation can be found in Dr. Wall's writings, and, if necessary, he is willing to go before a magistrate and swear that the quotation made from Dr. Wall is neither a forgery nor a misrepresentation.

If the Rev. W. M. Hicks will refer to "Wall's History of Infant Baptism," Part II., chapter ix, volume 1, page 591 he will not only read the above language, but he will see as follows: "What was just mentioned of the Muscovites baptizing stark naked, and dipping three times, is perfectly agreeable to the ancient practice in both usages. The ancient Christians, when they were baptized by immersion, were all baptized naked, whether they were men, women, or children."

The predicament into which the Rev. W. M Hicks has gotten himself is not to be envied. The reader observes that he publicly obligates himself to do three things:

1. To join the Wesleyan Society.

2 To pay one hundred dollars in gold.

3 To give a crop out of each one of his ears.

The public being the judge, "Circuit Rider" has perfect liberty to get a "crop" out of each one of the ears of the Rev. W. M. Hicks; but he does not desire to further disfigure him just now. He can keep his ears whole awhile longer, but let the public remember that part of the ears he is now wearing is borrowed.

As for the $100 in gold, such a pile can be used quite advantageously, and the demand is made that Evangelist Hicks send it at once in care of NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. If he is a man of his word, or willing to keep a promise publicly made, it will not be necessary to take legal steps.

Concerning the promise and obligation of joining the "Wesleyan Society," Evangelist Hicks' attention is respectfully called to the fact that no church in existence calls itself the "Wesleyan Society." If he means the M. E. Church, South, which is very probable, "Circuit Rider" is willing to put him on "six months' probation," and if he improves in language and spirit, or gives satisfactory evidence of genuine repentance, etc., he ("Circuit Rider") might consent to "mark" him subsequently into the M. E. Church, South. But until such assurance is given, Methodism prefers not to suffer by any such additions.

The offer, however, of the gold is accepted, upon remittance of which a receipt will be given through the columns of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

To the Members of the Woman's and Young People's Foreign Missionary Societies in the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference:

Our fiscal year is drawing to a close. March will soon be here. I am impressed with the magnitude and importance of the work yet to be done. The deficit in the Contingent Fund is alarming. I know societies who seem to almost ignore this very important part of the finances. I beg every officer and member to labor earnestly during the remainder of the quarter, and each do her part towards raising the amount lacking on dues, specials, pledge, and Contingent Funds. Let us make the best report in the history of our organization.

Sister, whatever you owe to the Lord, pay it promptly. His work must not suffer loss. I trust the new Conference year will bring to us a large increase in membership and a quickened zeal in our work. Subscribe for the W. M. Advocate and Little Worker. They are essential to an intelligent conception of the needs of the work.

Will all auxiliaries, both the old and the new ones, be careful to report to me on time? Address me at Poplarville, Miss.

Have nothing for show. Let your rooms look as if they were lived in. Provide convenient cases for your books, comfortable chairs to sit in, tables or desks at which one can write with comfort, pleasant pictures or engravings to look at. Do not envy the melancholy splendor of superfluous apartments, rarely opened, and full of ghostly shadows. The time and money expended in the care of these possessions are out of all proportion to any pleasure that can be derived from them.—Julia Ward Howe, in Good Housekeeping.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

CENTERVILLE, MISS.

We are beginning our second year upon the Centerville charge, which consists of Centerville and Whitaker, both situated on the Y. and M. V. railroad, in Wilkinson county. We went through last year without accomplishing any great revival work. We are hoping and praying that it may not be so this year. The salary of pastor and presiding elder was paid in full the past Conference year, and the Conference collections were paid in full, and a little over, both the Epworth League and Sunday-school having rendered some practical assistance in this latter work.

Our Home Mission Society is well organized. They are reading a part of their course, and, besides making each quarter a small contribution to the connectional work, they have the funds for a hundred dollars' worth of much-needed furnishing at the parsonage.

We hope to be worshiping in a new church at Whitaker before the Spring is far advanced. The cash in hand, and other resources in sight, make this beyond cavil now.

The Natchez District Conference is to be held in Centerville at the Spring-time, and we hope for a full attendance from all over the district. We pray that it may be an occasion of great blessing.

I should not omit to mention that the church members and others have been very kind to the occupants of the Centerville parsonage. Especially on Thanksgiving Day did our table share in the bounty of the land.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

DEAR BROTHER BOSWELL: I am glad to tell you that we had a glorious revival among the college girls during the holidays, which resulted in the salvation of about forty more of our girls, making, perhaps, one hundred and fifty professions among the students this session. The faculty began the meeting at the college, and we continued it at the Helping Hand Mission, Brother Hopper assisting us three days. We closed out with a watch-night service, which was a gracious time, resulting in sixteen professions at that one service. While the devil was holding high carnival in some quarters of the city, the Lord was wondrously saving souls at the little mission. Truly the Lord is good, and his arm is not shortened. He is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever.

Things are moving on nicely at the college. We have enrolled quite a number of new students since the holidays. We have room for but few more at present, but have arranged for another annex next session.

May the Lord bless you in your important work! Pray for us.

Yours in Christ,

J. W. BEESON.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MANSFIELD, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: The new year and century has begun under favorable auspices for us at Mansfield. Last year the ladies of our church undertook to put a new carpet on the old church, take off the old plastering, ceil and paint the church overhead, and numerous other repairs have been enterprised and carried into effect; so that now the old church presents quite an attractive appearance, and the arrangement of the pulpit and choir seats is a great improvement on the old arrangement.

Our new pastor, Rev. C. B. Carter, has entered into work hopefully and vigorously, and I am sure he will have the hearty support and co-operation of the best people of his charge; and present indications point to a year of great success for him and his pastorate.

As an old pastor and ex-P. E, I think the appointment of a young man to this charge was eminently wise. Mansfield has been served for quite a number of years by men past the meridian of life. The change to a young man in full sympathy with the young life of the church will doubtless, prove a blessing to young, and old alike.

I am here enduring the hardships of a soldier in hospital, and, with the help of God, I intend to do what I can to make the world brighter and better.

I find abundant opportunity about the little home which I am trying to build and pay for, for the exercise of body, mind, and spirit; and I hope in the employment of my time and energies, and whatever strength God giveth me, to gain strength for a more active life another year.

Cordially,

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Mansfield, La., Jan. 13, 1902.

SHREVEPORT, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: With your permission, I wish to say through the ADVOCATE that by appointment of our presiding elder, Dr. Sawyer, I have undertaken to supply the pastorate of Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, till Brother Lutz returns from college in June, after which I will be free to meet my engagements with the brethren in revival work.

I reached Shreveport last week, and have been kindly received by the good people here, and they gave me a very generous pounding, which was very gratefully received, and a good congregation at two services Sunday. I am trusting and praying for convicting, converting and sanctifying power on the people, and, by the grace of God, I expect to see it. Mail sent to me at Louchiunis street will reach us.

J. S. SANDERS.

Few people can understand the feelings of the pugilist as he is being counted out. He hears the seconds ticked off. He struggles to rise, but struggles in vain. He has lost the fight.

There are some who are making a losing fight for life that can appreciate this; those whose lungs are diseased. With every tick of the watch, they know that they are being counted out.

The great question is how can a quick rally be made to continue the fight against disease? Many who have asked that question have found a satisfactory answer in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures bronchitis, obstinate, deep-seated coughs, hemorrhage, night-sweats, emaciation, and other conditions which if neglected or unskilfully treated may find a fatal termination in consumption.

"When I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. John T. Reed, of Jefferson, Jefferson Co., Ark., "I was very low with a cough, and would at times spit up blood. I was not able to do any work at all, was weak and my head was dizzy. The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it and continued until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I do not look like nor feel like the same man as I was a year ago. People were astonished and said they did not think I could live. I can thankfully say that I am entirely cured of a disease from which had it not been for your wonderful 'Discovery' I would have died."

There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which no "just as good" medicine can show.

It does not make the best feelings creep over an editor when, in his own office, after fifteen minutes' conversation with a leading church official, he is called by the wrong name, and is compelled to tell his visitor that "the paper changed hands more than a year ago." The feelings are deepened when the visitor begs pardon, and says, "I didn't know." Verily some editors in some official circles are "little and unknown."

It is a strange sort of Reform Club that will frame and present to a State Legislature a bill authorizing the opening of liquor saloons on the Sabbath, in the hope of decreasing lawlessness. Yet this is what the Reform Club of New York has done. This club proposes to over-ride the sanctity of God's law, in order to save New York saloon keepers from the penalty now attached to the sale of liquor on Sunday. Saloons keepers are the pets of politicians. They must be cared for—even at the expense of the gospel and the morals of the people. Great is the saloon, and the politician is its protector!

A Baltimore priest recently married a young lady to a gentleman who is manager of a baseball team. In advance of the administration of the solemn vows he made an introductory talk, much of which was delivered in the "dialect of the 'fans'"—that is, in base ball talk. It is said "the ushers and best man and maid" were convulsed until their faces were made scarlet by their efforts to restrain laughter. It is said that the priest is a great admirer of the national game. He certainly forgot the proprieties of the occasion, else he let his propensity to play on words get away with his judgment. For such a thing the last place on earth is the marriage altar.

The Nashville preachers can discuss anything that has a religious, moral, or ecclesiastical bearing. They are in a humor for tilting every Monday morning. Recently they worried over "progressive euchre," trying to determine whether or not it should be classed as gambling. Generally they are on the right side, and all stand together. They would have maintained their record on this occasion had not some of them unfortunately taken their cue from Prof. Dyer, of Vanderbilt, who was quoted as being on the negative side of the question. In view of the popularity of the game, and its demoralizing tendency, it is a great pity the Nashville preachers were divided. What goes out from Jerusalem ought to have no uncertain sound.

THE PREACHING WE NEED.

If the gospel is not true, men do not need any preaching at all. If it is true, it ought to be preached according to the intent of the Founder, both as to the matter of preaching and the purpose in view. To depart from either is to vitiate the scheme of redemption. Indeed, a gospel preacher is bound by his call and commission to confine himself to the message authorized by the Great Head of the church. This message had in view the universal sameness of human nature, and the certainty that it would remain the same through all the ages. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Being assured that the gospel is intended for all men, and that it is peculiarly adapted to meet the necessities of human nature under all circumstances, no man need hold it back from any fellow-being, lest he commit the blunder of giving it to some who are too good to be benefited by it. Such beings do not live. There are those who vainly imagine that the old-time gospel has answered its purpose, and preachers and people who entertain the thonght have accommodated themselves to each other, and while they maintain the forms of worship, the true essence of the gospel is lacking. Such a notion is confined principally to so-called society, and those who are wise above what is written. The gospel has not cut itself loose from them; they have cut themselves loose from the gospel.

The true preacher can not ignore this class. If it seems that he does, it is not because of neglect, but for lack of access. The door is not open to him. His mission is to be accomplished among the masses. To these he must give the gospel, and in the gospel way.

The preacher must deliver the truth; not his own conceptions of truth, but the truth as revealed. Outside of revelation he has no right to go. If he undertakes it, he will find himself in error, and will become at once a false teacher. His theme is to be, "Christ, and him crucified." Around that his theology must revolve. A thousand questions, more or less, will arise and demand explanation and interpretation, but they are all to be answered in the light of that great truth. And if all remembered that this is a matter outside the realm of science, faith would never be shaken, nor the moral world startled, when some great scientist gives it out that he has proven religion a delusion and a snare. Nor would we lose hope in the power of the gospel to save when told that culture is to be the cure of evil, and the refining power of society.

St. Paul was a model preacher; good for his day, and good for all time. He listened to nothing but the voice of God. To the Corinthians he said, "I determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." He held to that determination firmly. He was with them "in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling," delivering unto them that which he had received, "how that Christ died for their sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." One who can not find material sufficient in such statements must be more than man. One who is not satisfied with such doctrine has little faith in the blood of Christ, and is far short of being evangelical. If the gospel of the day is not the power of God unto salvation, it is because the preacher has departed from the faith.

It is not denied that by learning and research new light can be thrown on the Word. We are constantly learning, and getting a clearer insight into the mind of the Spirit; but it is denied that the old truths can be substituted by anything that is new. One who undertakes to do so is false to his Lord. We are still commissioned to preach a crucified and buried, but risen and ever-living Jesus. These truths came to St. Paul "not by man, or the will of man, but by revelation of Jesus Christ." These truths we, his successors, are required to hold fast.

The style of preaching is not to be overlooked. It has much to do with the efficacy of the gospel. Truth is often made of none effect by the dress in which it is presented. The best models were men of simplicity. Our Lord was as plain and simple as it was possible for a preacher to be. He never obscured his thoughts by words out of the ordinary, or above the comprehension of the people; yet who was ever so fresh and vigorous, so forcible and so effective, as Jesus? The learned and unlearned alike were charmed. "The common people heard him gladly," not alone for the matter of his discourse, but the charming words that fell from his gracious lips. We can not improve the style of the Master.

St. Paul was a learned man, and might have attracted the crowds by a display of words, but he eschewed all excellency of speech or of wisdom, and preached, "not with enticing words of man's wisdom," but in simplicity and godly sincerity, that the faith of his converts "should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." Nothing is more out of place than uncommon and high-sounding words, or a display of great learning in the pulpit. It neither adds force or effectiveness to the sermon. It often destroys both, and the message is a failure. If any preacher supposes that big words are essential to elegance or eloquence of style, or that they are necessary to convey the truth to the mind and heart of his hearers, he is mistaken. The world loves plain and simple preaching. The more elegant and eloquent it is if the preacher knows what words to use and how to put them together. Alas! so few of us know. The art can not be learned except by long, patient, and persistent labor. Not many of us can reach it to perfection, but all of us can avoid making a spectacle of ourselves to men and angels by being natural, and preaching the gospel in the language of the people.

Adhering to the great central truth of our holy religion, there will be no danger of switching off, or forsaking the old paths. We will run into no grievous errors. Patterning after our Great Teacher as nearly as possible, we will attract the people and save their souls. The truth delivered in simplicity and power is what the world needs. It is what the Spirit demands.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

The new, or revised, Constitution of the M. E. Church, lately adopted, will allow women to sit as members of the General Conference. This leads the Methodist Protestant to say, "And pretty soon the agitation to ordain them will be started, and then there will be another vote taken, and that will be passed," etc. Dr. Smith, of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, resents this insinuation, and says "it is surprising that one of the minor and comparatively unimportant provisions of this new body of fundamental law should be so generally seized upon first for comment." We suppose each voter determined for himself the relative value of the various provisions of the new instrument, and Dr. Smith, as is his privilege, judges the amendment which admits women to the General Conference as "one of the minor and comparatively unimportant provisions" of the new organic law; but his opinion does not alter the fact that the fight for the adoption of the new Constitution was mainly over that provision. It was the only point that put the measure in jeopardy, its friends being in dread that the minority of English-speaking preachers, combined with the German preachers, would be sufficient to defeat it. So we, on this side of the line, have been led to believe.

Dr. Smith does not fear that the entrance of women into the law-making department of the church will inspire a desire to enter the ministry. But his lack of fear does not assure us that the Methodist Protestant's fear is groundless. Women are in law, medicine, politics, on the lecture platform, and in our sister Methodism they are ordained deaconesses. Why not seek ordination to the ministry? Dr. Smith informs us that in his church women fill the offices of steward, Sunday-school superintendent, and class leader. We do not wonder they aspire to seats in the General Conference. Now let Bro. Smith's church send a sufficient number of women to the General Conference to hold the balance of power, and he will see whether or not women will be granted authority to enter the ministry.

The desire of women to preach is not confined to our Northern sisters. A few in the South are preachers. A few more, we think, might be named who would gladly enter the work but for the naughtiness of those in authority, who have decided that it is not lawful. But sentiment may change.

HE IS RIGHT.

The pastor of a leading church in Arkansas has announced a series of Sunday evening discourses, and chosen as his subjects certain literary characters: "Charles Dickens, Robert Burns, Count Tolstoi, Lord Byron, George Eliot, and John Ruskin." A "Layman," calling attention to the matter in the Arkansas Methodist, says: "We of the laity understand that when a man is called of God, ordained and set apart by the church to preach the gospel, he is not to preach Dickens, Burns, Tolstoi, etc., but to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified." "Layman" further intimates that the laity have "a right to expect from the sacred desk the gospel of Jesus Christ." "Layman" is right. Let others join him in demanding the gospel. And if the demand is general, they will not be long in securing their rights as hearers.

But "Layman" should not be too hard on the preacher. He is only following the example of older men. It has not been many years since one, verging then on to threescore and ten, took "Hall Caine's Christian" for his text, and actually carried the book into the pulpit for reference. Such misuse of the sacred desk ought to cease.

A PRIESTLY UTTERANCE.

The secular press recently gave publicity to an utterance of Rev. Dr. Rainsford, a priest of the Episcopal Church in New York, which was so utterly at variance with truth and common sense that we felt sure he had been misquoted, but it has gone uncontradicted long enough for his utterance to get into the weekly papers, and we feel free to accept the report as first sent out. The utterance was made in an address before the Church Club of New York. He declared that "the Woman's Christian Temperance Union consists of good women who are doing the devil's work." Surely the Doctor does not believe that these good women are wholly under the influence of the wicked one; yet we can not see how he could otherwise reach such a conclusion. But how one who professes to be working for the uplift of humanity can attribute the efforts of good women to save men from the curse of strong drink to the agency of the devil, is more than we can understand.

Our vocabulary is wholly insufficient to condemn the utterance. Perhaps it is condemnation enough to say it is the language of Rev. Dr. Rainsford, of New York. We are scarcely less surprised at his coarseness in attributing the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to the agency of the devil than we are to his acknowledgment of the existence of the devil. He is that much nearer orthodox than we supposed him to be. What a spectacle on that splendid occasion: Bishop Potter denouncing prohibition as an "imprudent failure," and one of his chief clergy denouncing the work of earnest Christian women. Both these reverend gentlemen favor the opening of liquor saloons in New York on Sunday.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference for the session of 1901, edited and published by Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., have been received. We thank Brother Bachman for his kindness, and the brethren generally will thank him for being prompt. Now let all the preachers who discover errors that ought to be corrected, send them to the secretary, Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss., who will send corrections to the ADVOCATE.

DEATH OF REV. J. P. DRAKE.

Immediately after our issue of last week we heard of the serious illness of Rev. J. P. Drake, of the Mississippi Conference, and hence were not surprised to read in the Times-Democrat, of the twentieth, of his death, which occurred at Summit, Miss., on the nineteenth instant. He was sick three weeks. Everything that a loving family and skilled physicians could do to save his valuable life was without avail. Brother Drake was intelligent, cultured, an able preacher, and a true man of God. He occupied a high place in the estimation of his brethren. He had just entered upon his third year at Summit. The prospect before him was pleasing. His funeral was preached by Rev. B. F. Jones; Revs. J. W. Chambers, B. F. Lewis, and W. K. Ferguson assisting in the services. We expect a memoir in due time from some friend well acquainted with his life and character. May the hearts of sorrowing ones be comforted!

A GREAT SERMON.

Through the kindness of some friend we have enjoyed the pleasure of dipping into a great sermon by Dr. Collins Denny, of the Baltimore Conference, and professor in Vanderbilt University. The subject of the discourse is, "The Validity of Christian Experience." The argument is strong and conclusive. It will appeal to thoughtful readers. It is published for distribution by Mr. John P. Branch, who heard the sermon, and "took it into his heart that it ought to have a wider hearing." Send two cents to Rev. H. M. Hope, 728 East Main street, Richmond, Va., and get a copy.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Robt. Selby is much encouraged in his work at Brandon, where he is serving his second year. He says the prospects for the second year are better than the first.

Bishop Granbery passed through the city, last week, en route to Mexico, to hold the Mission Conferences, beginning with the Northwestern Mexican Mission on the twenty-third. He was accompanied by his son, Rev. John C. Granbery, Jr., both of whom honored our office with a call. We were glad to see this honored Superintendent in good health.

Rev. J. B. Culpepper has an engagement early in the Spring to assist in a meeting at Aberdeen, and will, perhaps, be able to assist at other points, if needed. Those who desire his help will address him at Grenada, Miss.

Rev C. McDonald, a faithful pastor and successful worker for this ADVOCATE, recently addressed a pastoral letter to the members of his charge, Tryne, Miss. It is short, but to the point. It is a model letter, and worthy of imitation.

We thank Rev. R. A. Davis, pastor, for a kind invitation to visit Greensburg, La. The invitation is backed by a tempting promise: "As hot wood-fires to sit by as Brother Upton's; spare-ribs, back-bones, and sausage." The editor wishes he was there now.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, presiding elder of the Shreveport district, has appointed Rev. J. S. Sanders to Texas Avenue, Shreveport, as supply. The Doctor expresses himself greatly pleased because he was able to secure his services, and thinks he will do a splendid work.

A press dispatch from Heidelberg, Miss., says that Mrs. E. A. Hardin, mother of Rev. P. D Hardin, of the Mississippi Conference, died suddenly on the morning of the seventeenth. She had risen, dressed, and was sitting by the fire, when she fell out of her chair dead. We extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary, and Rev. Geo. B. Winton, missionary in Mexico, were in the city a few days since, where they joined Bishop Granbery on the way to Mexico. Dr. Lambuth will attend the Conferences, and then visit some of the churches in the West. The Doctor is much encouraged over the missionary outlook.

Mr. Alex Morrison, son of Bishop Morrison, died in Atlanta, Ga., on the ninth instant. He was a member of the Senior class in Wofford College, S. C. He went to Atlanta to spend the Christmas with his parents, was taken with pneumonia, and passed away in a few days. He was a young man of great promise. We extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy.

Rev. E. M. Jones, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Miss Grace Waterberry were married in Iowa City, Iowa, Jan., 1, 1902. The happy couple left immediately for their home, Ashland, Mississippi. On reaching Holly Springs, they were given a reception at the parsonage by Rev. W. G. Harbin, the pastor, and a special friend of Brother Jones. We trust the young preacher and his bride may be happy and abundantly useful.

The Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative, in a recent issue, has these appreciative words concerning one of our General Superintendents:

Citizens of Mississippi, regardless of denominations, delight to honor Bishop Galloway as one of the foremost citizens of our grand old commonwealth. Knowing his great abilities, they are not surprised that he is in constant demand for great occasions, North and South. During this month he was the principal speaker at a great Missionary Rally in one of the largest churches in New York.

On Wednesday evening, Jan. 15, in the Centerville (Miss.) Methodist Church, Mr. Thomas Hines Reed and Miss M. E. Clay Rogers, attended by fair friends and sisters, were united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hawkins. Mr. Reed is a grandson of the late Rev. W. B. Hines, of the Mississippi Conference, and the bride's father, Mr. H. C. Rogers, is president of the Centerville Board of Stewards. The wedding march was rendered by Mrs. B. E. Eskridge, organist of our church at Baton Rouge, La. Blessings on the happy young couple!

We are sorry to learn of the indisposition of Dr. C. W. Carter, presiding elder of the Crowley district. In a note to the editor, under date of Jan. 17, he writes:

Please say to the preachers of the Crowley district that I have been laid up for repairs. When an old hulk goes on the stocks there is no telling when she will be in trim again; so tell the brethren to hold their Quarterly Conferences, and take the P. E.'s collection, and send it forward. That is needed to keep the "repairs" going.

We hope the brethren of the district will not forget the request of this faithful and devoted servant of the church.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

Reported by Rev. C. D. Atkinson.

Tri-State Epworth League Conference.

This Conference was organized by Rev. G. D. Parker, now missionary in Brazil, during the Summer of 1899. Its purpose, in the words of its founder, is "to promote systematic study of God's word; awaken a more intelligent interest in missions; to train leaders for all the departments of League work, and to bind into closer union the Christian workers of the Gulf States."

The Conference has been true to its purpose, and has grown in influence each year. The coming Conference of 1902 will no doubt be the best of all. Most of its work to make it a success was done a year ago, and its managers are very hopeful.

Our traveling secretary, Mr. Joe Ramsey, of Tennessee, a noted League workor, will make an itinerary of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. If your League is included in this itinerary, consider it an opportunity of great value to your League workers. One of the objects of the visit of Mr. Ramsey will be to secure delegates; but there is no need of waiting for a visit from our secretary, before you begin to plan to send one or more delegates to this great training-school for Leaguers.

PLAN TO SECURE DELEGATES.

First appoint a committee of three on delegation. The work of this committee will be to make a canvass among all the Leaguers, and find out how many will make an effort to go. As the Conference can be made to take the place of a Summer outing, and as the delegates will get so much personally from the trip, therefore it will not be asking too much of your delegates to bear half of their expenses. If the above plan secures your delegates and half of their expenses, and if you will begin at once a delegation fund for your half of the expenses as a League by July, you will be ready to send one or more Leaguers.

OUR STATE CONFERENCE.

It will be remembered that at the last Conference, Jackson, La., it was decided to hold the Conference of 1902 in New Orleans, La. The Epworth League Board of the Louisiana Annual Conference decided that the Conference be held during the first week in April. The Programme Committee appointed was: Prof. Thos. Carter, of New Orleans; Rev. W. G. Evans, of Grand Cane, and Miss Gussie Tooke, of Arcadia, La. We were invited to New Orleans by the Union Epworth League of the city. They have already begun to plan to receive and welcome us. Let us try to attend in large delegations and make the coming Conference the best in the history of our State work. There are some matters of very great importance to the interest of our League work to be considered at this Conference.

NEW ORLEANS CITY UNION.

The Union of the City Leagues took place several years ago. At its last meeting, Jan. 14, the following new officers were elected: President, Dr. Jno. T. Crebbin; first vice-president, A S Daniels; second vice-president, F. E. Higbee; third vice-president, Miss Eddie Bentley; secretary, Fred Veith; treasurer, F. McKnight. This Union League has under its control a mission on Tulane avenue, which promises to become a church some day.

NOTES.

Dr. Jno. T. Crebbin, who was lately elected president of the Union Epworth League, was president of the Union when the State Conference was held here before.

Mr. Tom Tooke, brother of our State secretary, Miss Gussie Tooke graduates at Soule College, New Orleans, in this month. Mr. Tooke is a consecrated Christian and an active Epworthian.

Three of the active League workers of our State had a conference on the evening of thirteenth instant. Most of their time was given to the interest of the Tri-State Epworth League Conference. They are very hopeful as to the outlook.

The first Junior Epworth League organized in Louisiana is the Junior Epworth League of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans. This church has an Intermediate Epworth League in addition to a Junior and Senior League.

Miss Lessie Jackson, an active member of Arcadia (Sr.) Epworth League, and who will graduate this year at Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn., has made a fine record as a student and leader in Christian work.

The Combination Oil Cure for Cancer.

From Oklahoma—Remains Well After Four Years—The Judge Tried to Dissuade Him.

STOUT, OKLA., SEPT. 4, 1901.

DR. D. M. BYE CO., DALLAS, TEX.:

DEAR SIRS—Four years ago I had two cancers on my face—one on my ear and one on my nose I heard of you and your Oil Treatment. When I got through with the first month's treatment, my ear was sound and well; and I sent for the second month's treatment, and before I got through with it I was sound and well. That has been four years ago. When I sent for the first treatment, my neighbor, ex-probate judge, went home and told his wife, "Creswell had better fix up his business, for that doctor will sure kill him." Two years later the judge, J. C. Hatchett, had a cancer himself and he came to me for your address, and he was cured sound and well. I will answer any and all that may write me in regard to the above statement, and I hope if anybody sees this, that has a cancer, they will give you a trial. If you publish this I hope it may be a benefit to somebody.

Yours truly, JOHN CRESWELL.

Books and papers sent free to those interested. Address Dr. D. M. BYE Co., L. Box 462, DALLAS, TEX. 175 Main St.

Forest District.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: For divers (though not diverse) reasons, the Missionary Institute heretofore appointed to be held at Heidelberg will be held at Vossburg, Feb. 4, and 5.

Please correct in programme sent you some days ago, and also in my round of appointments, and in the foot-note thereto. This change is made by request of church members. The District Conference will be held later at Heidelbreg.

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could the ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

We have been overwhelmed for two weeks, and more, with requests to change addresses. To comply requires much time and a great deal of trouble. We are doing our best. There will, doubtless, be mistakes and omissions; but no request will be overlooked or improperly entered on purpose. It is to our interest to do right; but we are human and sometimes fail. Our patrons will please bear with our infirmities.

North Mississippi Conference Missions.

The Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference, at its last session, inaugurated a new system in meeting the demands of those who serve mission charges. The old policy was to pay at the end of the year, and until last year less than the amount appropriated for years has been paid. Last year we paid 100 cents on the dollar. We propose to pay these appropriations quarterly. In order to do this, it will be necessary to take the collections early in the year. We ask every pastor in the Conference to take the collections for foreign and domestic missions just as early as possible—not later than the fifteenth of March. Forward the same to the treasurer, F P. Jenkins, at Aberdeen.

Please do not fail to present this to every congregation, and make an earnest appeal for those who are on the border line, who are dependent largely upon your effort, and entirely upon the liberality of your people for their support.

The president of the Board was requested to appoint missionary secretaries in each of the nine districts, whose business it would be to look after the cause of missions in their respective districts, and report quarterly what is being done to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

The district secretaries are as follows: Sardis, J. H. Shumaker; Grenada, W. S. Shipman; Winona, J. C. Park; Durant, R H B Gladney; Columbus, P. E. Duncan; Aberdeen, J. A. Leech; Corinth, B. F. Jaco; Holly Springs, W. G. Harbin; Greenville, H. P. Crowe.

These brethren can be a wonderful help in this work in the district by beginning a postal-card correspondence with each pastor, and keep it up until a report is made from every charge. If we are to pay these appropriations quarterly, we must have the money as soon as possible. We resolved to pay at least half of the assessment for foreign missions, and put it in the hand of the treasurer at Nashville by the meeting of the General Conference in May. Let us do this.

The secretary of the Board will furnish blanks for making the reports. These reports must be sent to the treasurer. Any brother failing to send his quarterly report will fail to receive anything on that quarter. We will gladly give any information we can to help these brethren in their work. W S. LAGRONE.

Home Circle.

The Sheep That Moved.

A mother sheep had long frequented a certain field. She and her frisky twin lambs found it a comfortable and safe refuge from the night or the storm. The shepherd was quite faithful, considering he was only a man with human limitations. The adjoining pastures were green and nourishing, and the brook that murmured down the hill never failed. The two lambs, the mother's pride, were growing finely.

But the woolly family decided to move to a distant feeding-ground. Rumor came that the grass was richer and the region more prosperous. No intimation was given the shepherd, so long their guardian, of their intentions. Taking advantage of a gate accidentally left open, escape was made, and at length the coveted home found. After a time the shepherd missed them, ascertained whither they had gone, but sent no word to the flockmaster, who had charge of the new field of the runaways.

The sheep that moved did not seek the fold attached to their fresh pasture. At nightfall they crouched in a thicket, shivering with cold, alarmed by the distant howls of wolves. The shepherd, whose fold and care they should have entered, was seen approaching the next day, but the mother evaded him in the bushes. Later he came upon them unawares, but his gentle call to his watch-care and protection was disregarded. The lambs, growing stronger, began to creep through the hedge and associate with rough goats that scampered over the common. Here they grew wild and unkempt. They were pursued, wounded, and at length devoured by wolves that did not dare approach the fold, whose refuge they had shunned. Even the catastrophe to her offspring did not induce the mother to place herself under the protection of the shepherd. At last, inextricably caught in thorns, she was made the prey of the wolves also.

If you seek the moral of this sheepish tale, take a census of your neighborhood, to find how many members of churches in other places have failed to connect themselves with congregations where they now live. There may be for ministers, elders and church workers much cause for thought and action in the facts revealed.—Rev. Charles Lee, in The Presbyterian.

A Fruitful Deed.

In our work for others we must, if we hope to reach them, do it through the love and good-will that has for a foundation-stone willingness to sacrifice self when, by so doing, we can draw nearer to the one we are reaching for, and thus prove our nearness to Him whose co-worker we profess to be. The story is told of a minister, poor in this world's goods, but who endeavored to work faithfully in his parish, situated in a rural district. Among other duties, he strove to persuade a family of the neighborhood, so vagrant in their habits as almost to be styled tramps, to settle down and attend church.

"At least," he said to the mother, "let the boys come to our Sunday-school."

"They have no clothes fit to wear," said she.

"I will find clothes for them," he answered.

The clothes were provided with much difficulty and self-denial by the minister.

"They shan't go barefoot," said the mother. "I won't have my boys laughed at."

The shoes could not be bought. The minister's pockets were empty. He thought a moment.

"My own boys will go barefoot," he said, "then yours will not be laughed at."

"What do you say, Jack, Tom?" he said a few hours later at the supper table. "Will you go barefoot to bring the lads to school?"

Jack and Tom, with somewhat wry faces, laughed, and finally consented.

The other boys went to Sunday-school for a few months, and then the entire family disappeared, and soon passed out of the minister's mind.

Last Summer the good pastor, now almost an old man, preached in a remote country village, and after service was over was greeted by a young man, the pastor of a small church near by. He was one of the vagabond boys.

"All that I am I owe to that kindly thought of yours about the shoes," he said. "It was the first act of self-sacrificing kindness that had ever come into my wretched life. It turned me to a new path of thought and action, and the good influence of the Sunday-school did the rest. Your boys probably thought it was a little thing to go barefoot for a few Sundays, but it saved a human soul."—Classmate.

Who Took It?

Mama Bell took the last stitch in the cobwebby lace, dropped her crochet-hook in the drawer at her side, and, spreading the delicate, filmy fabric out on her white apron, she leaned back in her chair and gazed doubtfully at it from different angles.

"It will have to be washed," she decided, at last. "The perspiration from my hands, careful as I tried to be, has soiled it more than I thought, and mother likes everything to be daintily clean."

So the beautiful gossamer lace was tenderly cleansed with white soap and the softest water, the twins Beth and Bea watching with interest every move of their mama's deft fingers, until at last it swung in the sunshine on a lower limb of the Early Crawford peach-tree in the back yard.

Then the twins went to their playhouse under the old sweet-apple tree, and thought no more of the matter until their mother called them, two hours later, to help her hunt the lace.

"You are sure you have not seen the lace, girlies?" questioned the mother.

"Oh, yes, quite sure. We have not left the sweet-apple tree in all that time."

Again and again they all three hunted over every inch of the yard, out into the barn-lot, and even out into the roadside, but not a trace could they find of the missing lace.

"It certainly looks as if some one had stolen that lace," commented Mama Bell, with anxious brow and troubled eyes; "only there has been no person on the place to-day."

"Oh, yes, mama; Bettie Martin came over just after you hung up the lace. She stayed an hour with us under the apple-tree," said Beth.

"Did she come through the back yard?" said Mrs. Bell.

"Ye—s," answered Beth, slowly, and her eyes sank to the ground and filled with tears.

"Well," said Mrs. Bell, "Bettie Martin is a good child, and she never took that lace. We will never allow ours' ves, even to think of such a possibility."

But as she spoke she looked into the eyes of her little daughters, and in their clear, pure depths she read the distrust they could not altogether hide, and they had read the same in her own eyes. And suppose they were blaming Bettie Martin wrongfully; how dreadful that would be!

And so the Summer moved along in rather a dreary way to the twins, who loved Bettie Martin, but could not help suspecting her. When the Early Crawford peaches were ripe, Mrs. Bell went out one day to pick some for the tea-table. As usual, the biggest and ripest were on the topmost branches, and Beth clambered up the tree to secure them. When she had gathered the peaches and turned to come down, she saw a sight which caused her to drop her basket of peaches and cry out, excitedly:

"Oh, mama, look! It was the robin stole the lace you knit for Grandma Hill, and dear Bettie Martin did not touch it at all. Oh, I am so glad, so glad!"

The hidden burden of doubt and distrust lifted from the hearts of the three. They kissed, and wept, and rejoiced with each other, and one of the three made solemn resolve, there and then, never again to doubt another on circumstantial evidence.

Sure enough, in the forks of one of the topmost limbs swayed softly an empty robin's nest, and woven deftly out and in among its meshes was the length of filmy lace, discolored by the sun, and storm, and dew.—United Presbyterian.

How God Uses Little Things.

A nut once saved the life of a German count.

A plot had been laid to murder him, and the murderer lay hid in his castle through the day.

Before going to bed the count drew some things from his pocket, and a nut fell on the floor, which he did not notice.

That night the murderer entered the bedroom, but stepped on the nut, which in breaking cracked loud enough to waken the count, and the murderer fled.

Who would say that all this was by mere accident? In God's providence the man might have stepped just beside the nut; or the count might have picked it up; or he might not have let it fall; or one of a dozen other things might have been; but we know what was, and this was not by chance. All things are in God's hands.—Lutheran Witness.

"Singing Birds Build Low."

One who had been listening while a bright girl announced most ambitious aspirations and purposes for her own life, answered gently: "You may be right, dear child; but do not forget that 'the singing birds build low.'"

Taking this as its text, the Philadelphia Public Ledger speaks these words of comfort to girls: "If your flight is above the roof-trees, if your haunts are to be high up among the wind-rocked boughs, the home nest can not fail to suffer loss. Apart from the loss to those who remain, the daughter who goes out often finds too late the low nest was safest and best. There are colder winds on the mountain crags, and it is the birds of prey that build their nests on high.

"After all one's thinking and talking of progress of man or woman, it is true that nothing ever comes to us that is so sweet as the life of home. Let women seek the largest culture, the broadest freedom, the highest service. All goes well while they keep the home love warm. When love wavers, it is time to pause. We are building our nests in the wrong place. Singing birds are to make melody, first, for our nearest and dearest, and when our best is too good for the home, we are placing our nests too high."—The Standard.

Few Friends.

"I don't make many friends," said a young girl. She was talking to a companion, and she made her statement with quite a superior air, as if the possession of but few friends were a mark of distinction. "If people like me, that is all right, but I never run after anyone."

A few days later we were not surprised to hear a schoolmate say of her:

"Maisie is not a favorite with the girls. She isn't—well, spontaneous enough, if that's the proper word for it. She never goes heartily into anything, as the rest of us do; she is always sitting back in some corner, waiting to be coaxed and invited with a great deal of urgency before she will take any part. She seems to have a fear that she will be cheapening herself if she should be genuinely obliging."

Not to minister, but to be ministered unto, is the theory with which she has set out in life; not to give, but to get, and that ends always in soul-poverty and loneliness. Show yourself friendly, and you will have no lack of friends.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Cheating at School.

The other day a young man in one of the colleges stole his graduation essay from one that had been written by another collegian years before, and afterwards printed. It was considered so good that it won a prize, but the secret of the theft was soon discovered, and the thief was disgraced. What a sad and ruinous sin it was that wrecked his young life! Yet how probable it is that he began as a school-boy just by cheating his teachers in little things—looking over his schoolmates' sums, copying their answers, and so on—as so many thoughtless school boys do. Cheating is cheating, and stealing is stealing, whether what we steal be money or the solution of a problem in algebra. The honest lad should hate trickery of every kind, and stand squarely on his own feet.—Sunday-School Visitor.

No man minds, or ought to mind, its being hard, if only it comes to something; but when it is hard and comes to nothing; when all our bees' business turns to spiders; and for honeycomb we have only resultant cobwebs, blown away by the next breeze—that is the cruel thing for the worker.—Ruskin.

The Secret of Long Life.

A gentleman who surrenders himself entirely to business, and looks older than his years, had been curious for some time to learn how one of his neighbors, twenty years his senior, managed to retain his youthful spirits and activity. The old gentleman has the florid face that seems to belie the crown of snow-white hair. His eyes are sparkling, his step is elastic, his form erect, and his laugh contagious. When asked for the desired explanation he blushed like a school-boy, and occasionally stammered in his recital.

"Of course," he laughed, "I'm regular in my habits, get out of doors a good deal, and try to take things as philosophically as I can. That is, I won't permit myself to worry. But I wouldn't be telling you the whole truth if I withheld what I regard as the chief secret of my being so well preserved. I have courted my wife ever since I married her, and that was more than forty years ago. I pay her all the little attentions that I ever did when I was trying to win her, and which a woman never ceases to hold dear. I invite her to ride, ask her to go to high-class concerts, or whether she would enjoy accompanying me to some social entertainment, and take her out into the country and rave over its beauties, just as we have always done.

"In that way, don't you see, we fail to note the passing of time. She is the same happy girl and I the same attentive lover. If we have a little tiff, we act very much as we did when foolish youngsters, and make it all up in the same way. Try it. It's the secret of perpetual youth."—Christian Uplook.

A friendship which makes the least noise is very often most useful; for which reason I should prefer a prudent friend to a zealous one.—Budgell.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

On the sixth day of January, at 9 A. M., Mrs. BETTY TILLY, wife of Bro. B. W. Tilly, departed this life. Sister Tilly was fifty years old, and had been a consistent Christian for forty-one years, having been converted and joined the church at the age of nine years. She was the leading light and spirit of the community in which she lived, always practicing the virtues of the Christian religion. It was the writer's privilege to be her pastor for three years past, and I can truly say that I have never known a more consecrated Christian, always at her post, exhorting her children and neighbors to a holy life. The community has sustained a great loss. She had always expressed a desire to be able to shout when she came to die. A few minutes before the last struggle she revived, and was able to talk, and with her last breath she shouted, "Victory;" then, raising her hand and pointing upward, sweetly fell asleep. Leaving, like Dorcas, precious deeds which have been hung up in our memory, we point to them and say, "See what she did." Her son, Henry, preceded her only two days, and his wife died four hours after. It was our sad duty to bury the mother-in-law and daughter at the same service. The community is veiled in mourning. Three noble characters have been removed from our midst, which fills us with sadness. J. M. FRANKLIN.

PAUL GRAHAM, son of Rev. T. H. and Josie E. King, was born Aug. 7, 1898, and died Sept. 26, 1901. Little Graham was a bright and an attractive child, loved by his neighbors, a pleasure to his friends, and the light of his home, but God took him to his own nursery of love, and the tie that bound him to the earth by love is severed. There are desolate hearts in that little parsonage home which feel as though a pall of night had settled on them; stricken parents, who, though they still cherish the affection of the sweet little girls left to them, will evermore miss the bright and sunny face of little Graham, and think of the new-made grave on which their tears have fallen. Graham has gone from us, but he is not dead. All that was most precious still lives, and whispers to the ear of faith, "Not lost, but gone before." To the grief-stricken parents we tender our deepest sympathy. J. T. LEGGETT.

Mrs. MARGARET HARMON was born in Union district, S. C., April 1, 1826. She came to Mississippi in 1831, and remained here till she died. She lived to rear a large family of children, and see them all grown and married but two. Her husband preceded her in going home by about two years. After Brother Harmon's death Sister Harmon stayed some at her home, and some of the time she spent with her children. During her last illness she was with her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Cowden, of Tremont, Miss. Sister Harmon often spoke of going back to her home to die. How sweet the memory of home, sweet home! But she was not permitted to return to her earthly home, for, on the night of Oct. 31, 1901, surrounded by some of her children and grandchildren, God called her to her home above. The hands that she ministered to in life ministered to her in death. "Thank God for the memory of mother's own beautiful hands." Thank God for the service of the ministering hands of living saints who lift a drop of cool water to the lips of departing loved ones. Farewell, dear mama, but not forever.

G. S. SAUNDERS.

Dr. T. S. CUNNINGHAM was born Dec. 21, 1830, in Pike county, Miss. For some years he practiced medicine at Magnolia. He was married, Nov. 9, 1859, to Miss Josephine Evans. In 1860 he moved to Copiah county, just north of Rockport, where he lived ever since, devoting his time principally to his farm. For many years he lived a very quiet and retired life. He was the father of thirteen children, eight of whom sleep in the same graveyard with the father. Five are living, who, with the mother, mourn their loss. He was a consistant member of the Methodist Church at Providence. He had been troubled for many years with some affection of the heart. In the last illness he expected to die, and spoke of his readiness for the end. May God's grace sustain the sorrowing ones! C. MCDONALD.

Tryus, Miss.

BEATRIX TUCKER, only child of A. W. and Lula Tucker, was born Feb. 1, 1892, and died Aug. 10, 1901. From the very first she was a devoted little Christian. On being asked by her mother "if she would be willing to die and go to live with Jesus," she replied, "Yes, mama, I love you and papa, but I love Jesus better than you." Dear mother and father, do not grieve for one who has witnessed so good a profession for Christ. Your home has been saddened, but heaven is dearer to you now. Follow Jesus even as she did in her tender, sweet life, and when you have suffered God's will on earth, your loved one will greet you at the beautiful gate, and be yours through the roll of eternal years. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." UNCLE WILLIE.

November 29, 1901, little LOMY LEE, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Sugg, closed his beautiful eyes on earth to open on a brighter shore. His short life of two years two months and nine days was full of beauty. He was the joy and light of a loving household. The fair, tender little blossom faded beneath the burden of life at the beginning of its journey, and breathed forth his gentle spirit into the bosom of waiting angels, who bore it to the paradise of God. Dear parents, your little darling has only gone for a little while. You will see him again. EMMA R. WITT.

Some French scientists are advocating the temperate use of alcoholic drink. Such advice is not favorable to a lessening of inebriety in this hurrying age. When people have succumbed to the evil of intoxication one might as well try to keep water above its level without force, or confine a conflagration with combustible material as to expect them to take their alcoholic drinks in moderation. —Banner of Gold.

In four railroad accidents this year, each of which was attended with loss of life, it was ascertained that the responsible persons had been using spirits just before the accident. In two instances the responsible persons lost their lives. This was not mentioned by the press, but was known to the officers of the roads, and the necessity of total abstainers was emphasized more clearly than ever. In these cases it was the paralyzing action of alcohol on the brain which confused the trainmen, and ended in an accident.—Journal of Inebriety.

Drink and Crime.

In 120 army prisons throughout Germany 46 per cent. of all the murderers committed their crimes while under the influence of drink. Sixty-three per cent. of the cases of manslaughter, 74 per cent. of serious injury to the person and 77 per cent. of criminal immorality are due to the same cause. In the navy, out of 1,671 punishable cases during the last six years 75 per cent. of the most serious cases have been due to drunkenness. —Berlin Letter to London Chronicle.

CONSTIPATION INDIGESTION TORPID LIVER

These are the great curses which afflict three-quarters of the present generation. Sufferers from either one or all of them must always feel miserable, and sooner or later become chronic invalids, useless to themselves and a burden and nuisance to friends and family. There is one sure, safe and absolute cure which you can test without any expense. Our remedy is Egyptian Regulator Tea, a trial package of which we will send you free and prepaid on request. Unless you find our claims are true, we must be the losers by this liberal act. Shall we send you the trial package, and lead you to perfect health and happiness? Address,

R·I·P·A·N·S

I had been troubled with gastric dyspepsia for two years. I could not eat or sleep, was short of breath, and suffered from dizziness. I found no relief until I heard of R.I.P.A.N.S Tabules. After the first 5 cent box I felt the difference. When I had taken six of the 5 cent boxes I was able to eat very well, and to sleep, and the dizziness gradually disappeared. They are worth their weight in gold.

At Druggists.

The Five-Cent packet is enough for an ordinary occasion. The family bottle, 60 cents, contains a supply for a year.

NEURALGIA may not be dangerous, but it hurts. It seems to tear the face with redhot pincers. Stay in doors and use Perry Davis' Painkiller. The blessed freedom from pain which follows can not be told.

Epworth Organs are extra sweet toned

—extra durable too.

Besides, our method of selling direct, on trial, at the factory price is a great advantage. You save the middle dealers profit and are sure to be suited or the organ comes back at our expense.

Send for Catalogue to-day. Mention this paper.

A MINISTER'S WIFE AND A CHURCH DEBT

A minister's wife in Buffalo writes:

"Our church was encumbered with a mortgage. THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and THE SATURDAY EVENING POST seemed to offer a chance to accomplish something for the work, and I took the matter to the Ladies' Aid Society. I proposed that each member should enter her subscription, and try to secure other names. My plan was received enthusiastically. In addition to our own members we obtained subscriptions from many not connected with the church. Everywhere we went we talked JOURNAL and church mortgage. Soon we had subscriptions enough to reduce the mortgage considerably, and with very little work."

Glances at the World.

What is called the negro problem is to find solution by diffusion throughout the Union. That means they are largely to emigrate from the Southern to the Northern States. So thinks our neighbor, the New Orleans Picayune. "This," says the Picayune, "is not going to be in its first stages a rapid movement, but it will grow finally to great proportions, and operate with constantly increasing rapidity. All the existing facts revealed by the census show that a very decided movement is in progress among the negroes, and all the indications are that it will go on growing and increasing until the negroes are pretty well distributed among the white population of the Northern States." Such a diffusion might eliminate the colored brother from Southern politics, and settle the problem in that direction. But would he not become a disturbing factor in the social life of the North? He certainly would if he went North with the idea of receiving social recognition at the hands of the white population, for they are no more willing to so receive him than are the Southern people. It is well known that he meets with trouble when he goes North to find work. His troubles will enlarge if he goes North with his family in the hope of getting both work and social recognition. Our opinion is, he will not better his condition in any sense by leaving his old home.

In line with views above expressed, we read in the news of the day that the white man has invaded the dining-cars, and will force the colored waiters to retire. White members of unions in several large cities have agreed on this policy. They say the negro works too cheap, and is willing to depend on tips to make up for low wages. Of course, this movement originated in the North. A prominent railroad man has said that "north of the Ohio river white waiters are preferable to negroes. . . . In the South, where the black man is understood, or rather where he understands the white man, he is the ideal servant. But in the North the white man has spoiled the negro." This same railroad man says "the next step will be the substitution of white girls as chamber-maids on the sleepers." The poor negro, it seems, must go.

The situation in the Philippine Islands does not indicate a speedy settlement of existing troubles. In some of the provinces the natives are still in active hostility, and what is worse, many of them profess friendship for the government, but secretly give aid to the insurgents. If accounts that go out from Washington are to be relied on, more stringent measures are to be enforced in the future in certain districts. In the Batanzas province, which is just south of Manila, it is said that the native priests are among the most important and chief of the disloyal persons. Gen. Bell, the military commander of that province, declares that "it is practically certain that every priest in Batanzas and Laguna provinces is a secret enemy of the government, and in active sympathy with the insurgents. He orders that they be given no exemption whatever, but be brought to trial whenever sufficient evidence is obtainable, and adds that even in case of well-founded suspicion they should be arrested to stop their further activity. It is frequently impossible, he says, to obtain evidence against influential persons as long as they are at liberty, but once confined, evidence is easily obtainable." We do not vouch for the truth of the above. We simply give it as we find it in the press reports from the Capital.

It was said in this column some weeks ago that the isthmian canal question was practically settled, and so it was thought, but new complications have arisen, and matters have assumed such a shape as to become serious—sufficiently so to put the whole thing in doubt. The French, who have been at work on a canal for years on the Isthmus of Panama, when they saw the purpose of the United States to construct a canal, offered to sell their franchise and work for $109,000,000. This price was thought to be exorbitant, and the offer was declined. Then, when the Nicaragua route was chosen, and it looked as if work would soon begin, the Panama owners came forward with an offer to sell at $40,000,000. This was tempting, and a halt was called in congressional proceedings, and the offer taken under advisement. The commission to whom was referred the question recommends the purchase of the Panama Canal. This has struck terror to the friends of the Nicaragua route, for they fear it means postponement of the enterprise for years as well as a loss of all that was gained in the recent treaty with England. It is assumed that the enemies of all canal projects are favoring the Panama deal in the hope of ultimately effecting entire defeat. It is also asserted that there is scandal connected with the Panama scheme. We are not prepared to express an opinion either as to the two routes involved, or the question of scandal.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

BY PROF. B. E. YOUNG.

Millsaps College is just closing its Fall semester. The period has been distinctly one of progress for the institution. Beginning the year with a notable addition to the equipment in the shape of a handsome new observatory, the college soon afterward received Major Millsaps' great donation of the Jackson College property. The latter should bring us not only better facilities, but augmented income, when we enter upon its occupancy next session.

Besides these reasons for felicitation, there is the auspicious growth in number of students. The school has not only held its patronage, but increased it almost every week of the term. The morale and discipline of the school has been excellent, and not a single incident has come during the term to mar the harmony of our mutual relations.

Mr. F. E. Gunter, of the Junior class, has been the recipient of marked honors at the hands of the student body. Besides being chosen president of his class, he has been unanimously elected by the Young Men's Christian Association to represent them at the international meeting of delegates at Toronto, Canada, in the Spring. This international meeting, we believe, is held only every five years.

Rev. M. L White, of Carthage, was a welcome visitor to the college last week. His son, H. O. White, '01, is ably representing Millsaps in the graduate department at Vanderbilt University.

Among the new students who have come to us since the holidays are the following: Hudgins S. Ellis, of Yazoo City; J. A. McKee, of Jefferson; Benton Tindall, of Water Valley; T. W. Nolen, of Houston; W. A Lee, of Black Hawk, and N. B. Scales, of Crawford.

Mr. J. R Counties, of the Senior class, has been selected by contest to represent Millsaps College in the State oratorical contest, the winner of which contests during the Summer for the Gulf States' medal in oratory. A goodly number of candidates—fourteen in all—appeared to bid for this honor, and the speaking was of a high order. Mr. Counties is to be congratulated on this high honor. We trust that the phenomenal good fortune which has attended our orators may also attend him.

Last Friday night was the occasion of the public meeting of the Galloway Literary Society. As it was a gala occasion, a large number of visitors were present. The following new officers were installed: J. D. Tillman, president; Walter Merritt, doorkeeper; David Bingham, secretary. F. D. Mellen delivered the declamation, and W. F. Cooke the oration. Then the debaters of the evening measured their strength over the question, "Resolved, That the present pension system of the United States should be abolished," and the subject was excellently debated. Messrs. Dunn, Gunter and W. N. Duncan upheld the affirmative, while the negative was represented by Messrs. Counties and Neal. The question was awarded to the affirmative. After adjournment the societies held a reception in the fraternity halls, and refreshments were served.

Prof. J. A. Moore is thinking of establishing a Visitors' Day at the James Observatory. The building has recently been enclosed in a handsome iron fence. A series of popular lectures on astronomy are also a possibility of the future.

The Sophomore chemistry class recently made a tour of inspection of the new plant of the Jackson Fertilizer Company, under the leadership of Prof. Mnokenfuss.

The intermediate examinations begin on Jan. 29, and continue until Feb. 8. This period is one fraught with considerable anxiety to students generally.

Thursday night Messrs. Thompson and Potter, Seniors, presented to us a charming recital by the noted Quaker Male Quartette.

Hon. H. T. McCafferty, 1901, who is a member of the present Legislature, now in session at the Capitol, is boarding at the college in order to be among his many friends in this community.

We are glad to have with us, permanently located in Jackson, Mr. George B. Power, of the class of '97.

Mr. D. C. Enochs, of the Junior class, who has been ill for some time, is gradually recovering.

Mr. Dan A. James, donor of the observatory, is with us occasionally while on his trips to Vicksburg, where he has established a branch house of Peter James and Company.

Under the direction of Dr. Mnokenfuss the large number of geological specimens in our museum are being catalogued by students. Especially important among them is the collection presented last year by Dr. Goucher, president of the Woman's College of Baltimore. Several notable gifts have been received this year.

President Murrah spent several days in Nashville last week, in attendance upon the Educational Committee meetings.

President Edwin A. Alderman, of Tulane University, was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Murrah during his recent visit to Jackson, when he delivered an address at the Capitol.

MEMORIALS TO GENERAL CONFERENCE

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E Church, South, to Be Held in Dallas, Texas, in May, 1902:

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN: We, the members of the North Mississippi Conference, in session at Winona, Miss., do hereby present to your reverend body this, our memorial and prayer:

That Paragraphs 330 and 331 of the Discipline of 1898 be so changed that the Joint Board of Finance, instead of being appointed annually, shall be appointed quadrennially, as the other Boards authorized by the law of the church are. Our reasons for desiring this change are:

1. That when the Joint Board is appointed at the close of the Conference session, as is now required, no organization is effected usually until the opening of the succeeding Conference. Thus, during the whole year, while other causes are being pressed, this important claim for our worn-out preachers and their widows and orphans is allowed to drift along without having any special emphasis put upon it. Frequently not a dollar is paid in until the assembling of the Annual Conference in the Fall, and the claimants upon this fund have had to battle with their imperative needs throughout the whole year without any financial assistance from the Board. This should not be so. We believe the amendment asked for would obviate this by giving the church a permanent and thoroughly organized Board, with an Executive Committee to act throughout the year, and superintend and direct the raising and disbursement of this fund.

2. Many of our Annual Conferences desire to raise a loan fund for their superannuated preachers and their widows and orphans, the annual interest on which shall be used to supplement the assessments levied for their support. While the Joint Board of Finance, which properly should have the superintendence of all such enterprises, is appointed annually, it is well-nigh impossible to raise and administer such a fund. If one Joint Board formulates and projects a plan, before it can be consummated another is appointed. Without some continuity of management, such as a Board appointed quadrennially would furnish, the acquiring of such loan funds must remain practically an impossibility.

It may be urged against the desired change that, with a Board appointed for four years, it would be impossible, without continually changing some of its members, to always have one preacher and one layman from each presiding elder's district. We reply that we do not consider this provision necessary, and our petition is that it may be removed from the Discipline. We think the management and disbursement of this sacred fund may be safely trusted to any body of preachers and laymen, such as constitute the personnel of our Annual Conferences. If information is desired, the Joint Board can summon before it any preacher or laymen in attendance upon the Conference.

For the foregoing, and many other reasons which might be advanced, we trust you will see your way clear to grant our petition by making the change indicated.

R A MEEK,
J. R. BINGHAM,
T. W. DYE,
J. T. MURRAH.

Concurred in by the Conference as to Paragraph 330; non-concurred in as to Paragraph 331. The action of the Conference was as follows:

Amend Paragraph 330 of the Discipline, so that it shall read: "Each Annual Conference shall have a Joint Board of Finance, appointed by the president of the Conference (unless otherwise ordered) at the close of its annual session next following the General Conference, to hold office for four years."

JAMES PERRY DRAKE.

BY REV. J. W. CHAMBERS.

Although the soul of our brother has been released from its prison walls of affliction, his strong life abides. No absence of form and feature can efface the records of the noble deeds, the heroic suffering and the tender sympathy of this man, who was so truly a man of God. More skillful hands will write the story of his life. I, as one who knew and loved him, only desire space for a slight tribute to his many virtues.

His religion was joyous. The song of praise was the ordinary language of his soul. His love for youth was genuine. He entered into all their plans as one of them. His friendships were real. No passing wave of trouble moved his allegiance, or caused him to underrate the worth of his friends. His preaching was full—milk for babes, strong meat for men; but each, in his season, received comfort, instruction, edification. His aim was "to present every man perfect before God." His visits were blessed privileges of enjoying the counsels of one who walked with God. His courage was undaunted. Whatever ought to be done, he was both ready and willing to do, no matter whose views were opposed or whose influence was to be combatted. No father held the hearts of his children more surely; no husband more tender and true. When he died the community mourned, and, irrespective of denominational lines, expressed their sorrow by words and deeds of loving kindness.

Rev. B. F. Jones, P. E., had been constant in his attendance, and on Friday, seeing that the end was drawing near, sent a brother to hold his Quarterly Conference, and himself remained to watch and wait. It was eminently proper that this faithful man should preach the funeral sermon and have charge of the funeral services. The church was filled with those who had come "to weep with those who weep." Rev. B. F. Lewis read the lesson from the New Testament, and Rev. W. J. Ferguson read that from the Old Testament. The sermon was intensely spiritual; the exhortation to the congregation very touching. "He who has loved you, labored among you, and so often prayed for you, now, by his patient suffering, triumphant death, though dead, speaks to you, saying, 'Follow me, even as I also follow Christ.'" Here followed a full account of the life and labor of our brother, which, I trust, will soon appear in the ADVOCATE. Six of the faithful stewards bore the body to the train, and three of them followed as far as Jackson. Revs. B. F. Jones, J. A. Bishop and J. W. Chambers followed on to the family burying-ground in Jefferson county. There, under the old oaks, in the very place where his own hands had a few weeks before cleared the wild growth from the graves of his loved ones, we laid him to rest. Though the notice was short, many friends had gathered, among them Rev. C. N. Guice, who greatly assisted in the final services by singing, "Nearer, my God, to thee." The old servants of the family and the tenants on the place stood with uncovered heads and wept over the grave of him whom they had loved to call "Master." Reverent hands placed the floral offerings on the fresh mold. Bro. Jones pronounced the benediction. We tarried to breathe a word of prayer, that the mantle of his charity and earnest spirit might fall on us, who remain.

"DRIVE DOWN YOUR STAKES."

BY REV. B. P. JACO.

Whatever else Bishop Morrison failed to impress upon us at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, many remember his advice with reference to preachers trying to stay four years in a place. And I am sure it was not the mere vocal power or choice of words that gave the effective emphasis which has so impressed us. I rather suspect that those eighty, or more, itineraries lately experienced have given great impressiveness and, maybe, severity, or even pathos, to his saying.

I see in the District Reporter one preacher claims to have never driven more nor better stakes before, and still he was moved. I submit that he did drive good ones, and plenty of them, but the difficulty must have been with the cords. They were not securely fastened, or were weak or voluntarily loosened. We must also look after our ropes. I suppose we would do well to secure good stakes, and drive them deep. But while that is looked after, we must also have a care as to our connections with our stakes. There may have been good connections all during the year, and one's tabernacle seem secure, and every prospect seem to be pleasant, until about the time of equinoctial disturbances appear, as they do upon the approach of our Annual Conference, when preachers and people are brought face to face with the several responsibilities resting upon them, many of which have been poorly discharged or neglected. I have been told that sometimes under such circumstances a preacher voluntarily unties his ropes, and folds his tent, and notifies his church that he is ready to go. And, again, the people sometimes deliberately loosen the ropes for the same reason. It has been whispered that occasionally somebody—no one knows who—while the preacher is at Conference, goes quietly round and liberates the strained cords, lest something should break and the good brother suffer great loss.

Now, if the Bishop will pardon us for extending his figure, we will propose that we all look after our ropes, as we think his advice embraced this idea. May we not see to it that we so fully grasp the situation in whatever place we have been located as to be able to attach ourselves firmly to all the work necessary to be done, that to remove us would be detrimental to the interests of the church? Where this is the case no cabinet may "dare to molest or make us afraid." If anyone knows a better thing to do, let us have it in due time, for some of us are anxious to at least "make here" one "tabernacle," which shall remain more than one year.

Booneville, Miss.

Brother Green, of the Midland Methodist, tells of the service for "men only," held by Dr. Mathews at "Old McKendree." He says the Doctor "wanted more space to accommodate the greater number." The cabalism, "G. O. P., Dr. Mathews," we do not understand, unless it signifies "The Grand Old Patriarch." We are sure the Doctor will decline the title. He looks as little like a patriarch as any old man we ever saw.

Christian Advocate.

DEACONESSES NOT NEEDED.

BY A WOMAN.

MR EDITOR: I read your editorial on deaconesses, and most heartily did my mind echo each sentiment you expressed. Indeed, it seems high time in our Methodism to pause and enquire, Whither are we tending? Much has been said and written of woman's place in the church and world, and oceans of absurdities have rolled away; yet mountains remain to be removed. There are as great variety of minds among women as among men, but Solomon, who was well acquainted with all kinds of women, awarded the meed of praise to the truly virtuous and industrious; to her who makes the domestic circle her home. "Wife" and "mother" are holy words, and to her the greatest and grandest of all possibilities is to create a true home, where she can reign in the hearts of husband and children as queen. Here she trains souls for time and eternity, and from this center of love and influence emanates power that will reach all classes and enter every station in life. The true wife and mother in the home does more for our common humanity, and to save souls, than she could possibly do in any other way. Susannah Wesley is an important figure in our church history, and did more for Methodism than, perhaps, any other. Did she not train John and Charles Wesley and the others for usefulness in the church and the world? Had she been ordained and sent out as a deaconess, I'm sure she could never have done as much. In these latter days, with the progress of Christianity, woman has continued to unfold until her power for good is only limited by opportunity and self-culture. Her sphere is distinct from man's, and is chiefly, and from necessity, the home. She has no time for, nor right to, the rostrum, the pulpit, or other places peculiar to men. She should be prepared by thorough education to cope with the mighty issues of time and eternity; but when she begins to reach out after places peculiar to men, she loses influence. In the peace and quiet of domestic life, the gentleness of her love, and holiness of her piety, does womanly virtues shine with greatest radiance. Who shall recount the multitudes redeemed from misery by women? Who shall reckon the souls they conquered to heaven? Many, like Mary and Martha, have received the Divine Savior beneath their roof, and labored in his service with zealous love, and found in this, their glory, live among us still. We are taking on too much machinery; it confuses rather than helps.

The W. F. M. Society and H. M. Society seem unwilling to let well enough alone. The former now requires so much to keep the machinery going at home, that they have less to send abroad. Now the H. M. Society wants deaconesses. What next?

Some tell me I am not up with the advanced line of thought, and I confess that any line that takes woman out of her place in the home by man's side—his equal and beloved companion, his second and better self—to share his sorrows and increase his pleasures, to be his partner in all the affairs of life, and in the battle for an incorruptible crown and a home in heaven, seems terribly at variance with the divine arrangement of things. Women have as good minds as men, and are just as capable of understanding and enjoying discussions on vital subjects. But, for all that, what does she want with a place as a member of large representative bodies, such as a General Conference, or even an Annual Conference? It seems to me her natural modesty would make her shrink from a place among men that belongs exclusively to men. It is unsuited to womanly delicacy. Should any woman seek prominence by asking ordination at the hands of a Bishop, she would find herself ennobled by conquering such ambition. Her character would be beautified in her place as the shade and shower are to the rose—confirming its beauty and increasing its fragrance.

The Southern Methodist Church needs not deaconesses, nor women preachers. When the men fail utterly, it will be time enough.

Conference Brotherhood.

To the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood:

DEAR BRETHREN: Two of our members have died since Conference, viz.: Rev. R. J. Jones and Rev. J. P. Drake. Let us all respond promptly to the call for Assessments No. 27 and No. 28. And let us make this the occasion, if possible, of extending our membership among the laity of our several charges. No doubt many of them, if applied to, would join as honorary members, paying $1 on each death.

STATE PROHIBITION—WHY?

BY MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.

It is sometimes stated by advocates of State prohibition that local option is a failure. Such a statement will not bear analysis, for local option has been, first of all, an educative measure, training our people to think clearly, and to test their conclusions practically concerning the restraining of the liquor traffic. Further, it has driven the open saloon out of about seven-eighths of our area, and has encouraged the hopes of temperance people for a final victory. During the more than twenty years since the first county in Mississippi voted itself "dry," all grades of temperance sentiment have thrown themselves heartily into local-option contests. Even those who have believed that during the last decade we could have had a stronger law from our Legislature, if it had been asked, have pulled unitedly with local optionists to secure such good as was possible from what we had.

The present movement for State prohibition is not because its advocates denounce local option as a failure. We take note of such strictures as the worthless ammunition of the liquor traffic. But the friends of the bill for the more drastic measure now in the Legislature are pushing it because they are convinced:

First. That local option has about lived its day of permanent use to Mississippi. It has matured as a relief measure, and what is left is a decay more or less slow.

Second. It has little by little driven liquor traffic into. . . .—the western river and the— . . . [We are obliged to omit parts of two lines. There was no copy to follow, the typewriter having failed to do its work.—ED.] we despair of ever driving the saloon by local option, because their people, in the main, do not wish an educated public sentiment on the temperance question. There are now held in Mississippi by liquor men 398 United States licenses; 294 of these are in the twelve "wet," 104 in the sixty-three "dry" counties. Warren county holds 81 of these licenses, Washington 62 Adams 35, Madison 27, Harrison 20, Issaquena 18, Tunica 16 Jackson 11, Hancock 10, Wilkinson 6, Jefferson and Quitman each 4. These figures furnish data for reflection.

Third. These twelve "wet" counties contain the great bulk of our negro population, and the black element constitutes the large part of the drink traffic in those counties. Their populations are as follows: Total whites, 42,926; total colored, 229,254. Washington county has 4 838 whites, 35 576 colored; Warren, 8,903 whites, 25,361 colored; Issaquena, 736 whites, 11 582 colored; Jefferson, 3,389 whites, 15,358 colored; Tunica, 1,259 whites and 10,898 colored; Adams has 6,128 whites and 19 903 colored; Madison, 6,031 whites, 21,290 colored. These facts make our race problem more complex and dangerous, are a standing menace to law and order, and ought to make any white man, good or bad, halt with fear and trembling as he stands on the threshold of our future.

Fourth. Local option is founded on the good old Democratic doctrine of the rule of majorities. We declare this principle is over-ridden to-day in our State. Sixty-three—about seven-eighths—of our counties have driven out the open saloon; yet twelve—one-eighth—liquor dealing counties defy that great majority by their jug trade and the blind-tiger, by the flood of outlawed liquor this minority of twelve pours into this vast "dry" area. The majority in Mississippi has declared its will about the open saloon, and it seems a weakness to longer hesitate to sweep from our territory every remnant of the licensed liquor traffic in those counties, which in twenty years have not been able to recieve an education on the temperance question.

Fifth. Last of all, as a Christian people, we will, by State prohibition, sever all complicity with the licensing of the liquor traffic for any cause. We will place ourselves among the leaders of Christian thought on the basis of full liberty in all things harmless and helpful, and prohibition of all things hurtful, among which the liquor traffic, with its vast criminal brood, ranks chief.

Let us build for a true Christian commonwealth and the higher Christian civilization which begins to gleam through the opening vista of the new century. Mississippi organized the third temperance society in the United States in 1828 at Natchez, and sent out an organizer. Let us not lag, but lead in the great procession of prohibition States which will follow on as the century grows older.

DANCING.

BY REV. J. F. GOURLOOK.

Among the prolific evils which confront the Christian church of this day, scarcely any other excels dancing in its insinuating and far-reaching power to prostrate and humble it in its glorious work of saving souls. We, therefore, purpose to point out some of them, with a permanent remedy for their consequences.

1. "It is a healthful recreation, and all young people should have it." We admit that they must have recreation. Their youthfulness, peculiar turn of mind, and vivacity of spirit, demand it. And we are as ready to advocate their claims as they are to demand them. But dancing is not the exclusive recreation which they may have access to, for others in endless variety are to be found at every stage in the journey of life. What are riding, walking, fishing, hunting, and traveling over hill and dale in the cars, but recreations, and equally as healthful and pleasant as tripping the fantastic toe. This demand is persistently made for them in the face of experience, observation, and the effects which follow its practice, with little or no consideration as to the moral character of it. The way this is put we are forced to this conclusion: that they are shut up to this amusement alone, and that they have none other to which they can resort. What foolish reasoning!

2. "It teaches grace of movement." It becomes, therefore, a matter of education. This is assuming a great deal; much more than the premises will allow. It assumes that what is not inherited by birth must be acquired by instruction, and that this is to be taught by a teacher. Who is to do the teaching? The dancing-master. A man or a woman with little social standing, whose intelligence does not measure up to many whom they teach, and whose moral character is very questionable. It is not saying too much to affirm that those who submit to be taught by such parties are greatly wanting in self-respect. They do not place that estimate on themselves which they should. This kind of education is for the heels, and not for the head and heart. Educating the pedal extremities is placing the inferior part of the person above the highest and noblest part of his nature. But who wants that kind of grace in movement rarely or never needed, and which can be acquired with as much correctness as to be taught it? Grace of movement is more a question of task than anything else, and that can be taught to children at home with as much propriety by the parents as it can be acquired elsewhere. What fustian!

3. "It is no harm to dance." This has been repeated, by everyone who loves this exercise, from time immemorial until the present hour. I have yet the first one to see who does not repeat it with the greatest complacency, and with an assumed air of triumph, which he thinks will carry with it the weight of a crushing conviction. But we are not to do anything because there is no harm in it, but because there is good. This is the Bible rule, and it is the only safe one; indeed, it is the only one that will bear the test of a trial. This is the great fact of the gospel, and the only one which actuated Christ Jesus in his mission of saving lost sinners. This statement may be fully answered by asking who will show us any good in dancing. Has anyone ever found any good in such an employment? If so, point it out, and we will acknowledge our error and abandon the argument. If there is no harm in it, why are we constantly warned against it, and urged to avoid it, and urged faithfully to avoid it, or, if indulging in it, to abandon it forever? If there is no harm in it, why do people, when converted from sin, separate themselves from its enticements? When converted, they not only receive a change of heart, but a change of mind as well. If there is no harm in it, how do we account for so many who have lost their character, and are now outcasts from society? A very large proportion of fallen women must attribute the serpent's trail to the dance.

4. No one would ever send to the ball-room for some one to tell him how to die. No one who has the spirit of Christ ever goes in quest of happiness on the devil's ground; so he is never found there. He would not send to such a place for an instructor, because those who attend the dance do not know how themselves. If the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch. Besides, he has no confidence in those who profess religion who are found at such a place; and his suspicions are well founded, and on them he acts wisely. He would send for the poorest peasant, or for the most ignorant negro, to lead him to Christ, who, if truly pious, would tell him how to believe, and that that trust would bring him into the kingdom of God, and this would finally open the gate to heaven. In such a case as this a dying sinner wants to be certain of the way; he does not want to make any mistake, for that would be most fatal to all his hopes.

5. The attitude of the church toward it. It is opposed to it. This can not be said of all the branches of the church of God. Some of them advocate it, prepare the way for it, and then praise the performance. Every spiritual church will not only condemn it, but use its influence to keep the members from it. The General Rules, the legislation with regard to it, and the pastoral addresses, all show where it stands on this subject. In one pastoral address of our Bishops they lay special stress on "taking such diversions as can not be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." Dancing is of that kind that it can not be used in the name of the Lord Jesus. The name of Christ can not be associated with it, nor his blessing invoked upon it. Who would think of asking his blessing to rest upon it? Such a person is not to be found. The value of church membership, on the account of it, is greatly discounted; indeed, they weigh but little in the scale of moral being who are in the habit of dancing. The church, true to its vows, never expects any positive or useful aid from them. They become a burden to be carried, and this impedes the progress of the work. The offense is of such magnitude that it can be made the ground of trial and expulsion.

6. It keeps people from joining the church, and when in it, it leads them to sever their connection with it. Anything which takes and holds the heart from God is a sin. If it be riches, worldly pleasure, or any kind of vice, which reigns supreme in the heart, God is rejected, and to reject him is a sin which will destroy both soul and body in hell. When already a member of the church, it rarely fails to lead them back to the world. At a District Conference several young people joined the M. E. Church, South, but in a few years after the writer of this article became pastor of the church where it was held, and most, if not all, had gone out through the love and influence of dancing.

7. Christianity has but one rule for preacher and member. A young lady of high social standing, of refinement and intelligence, was converted at a meeting held by her pastor. She wished to join the church, but remarked that she could not give up dancing, as she dearly loved it. "Suppose," said the minister, "you attend a ball, and reach there rather late, and should see me out on the floor making up a set, what would you think of my act?" "Oh," she said, 'I think that would be wrong." Said he, "God does not make two rules—one for the preacher and the other for the member." Said she, "I never saw it in that light before; I will never dance again." She became an exemplary member, and active in all her pious work. The advocates will allow members to dance, but claim that it is wrong for the preacher. If it is wrong in the one instance, it is wrong in the other. Happy is the man who condemns not himself in that which he alloweth.

8. Does the Bible teach it? I heard a young lady say that it neither approved nor disapproved it. I heard another lady say that the Bible taught it. I asked for the proofs of the latter. But anyone is hard pushed for a defense of what they claim for it to make such statements with reference to the Word of God. The simple statement of facts concerning dancing does not commit itself to its approval of it. The whole tenor and spirit of the Word of God is against it, to which may be added the express declarations of the gospel, which are clear and unmistakable in their meaning. Whoever appeals to the Scriptures will neither find any support or comfort.

9. What if Christ had danced? Would this have been in accord with his nature and character? Would it have been in accord with his acts? Would it have been in accord with his divine mission in saving souls? Suppose he had danced, who would have any respect for him? And who would he have won to his standard? Had he danced, he would have brought himself under the contempt and condemnation of all. How absurd to suppose such a thing! If dancing is right, he could have danced with all propriety. Let dancers ponder the extremes of their logic.

The remedy, and the only one, is to abandon such places, to seek the company of godly people, to attend the house of worship, to read the Word of God, and to pray earnestly for the guidance of the Holy Spirit. If these suggestions are strictly adhered to, the cure for this evil will not only be immediate, but permanent.

REV. MARCUS C. MANLY.

From his home in Rayne, La., at 5 A. M., Dec. 31, 1901, the Rev. Marcus C. Manly, of the Louisiana Conference, who was born in Dinwidde county, Va., Aug. 29, 1829, opened his long-closed eyes on the beautiful city of God. For nearly fifty-four years he had been obedient to the heavenly vision in preaching the glad tidings of a free and full salvation to a lost race. His parents moved to Fayette county, Tenn., when he was four years of age, and at seven he was soundly converted. His parents being faithful Christians, endeavored to train their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and had the satisfaction of seeing their first-born son enter the ministry in his eighteenth year. He was licensed to preach by Wm. Moores in Camden, Ark. His first appointment was as junior preacher under L. P. Lively on the Eldorado circuit. Later he traveled the Washington circuit; then for a short time the Ouachita circuit. In 1849, with J. H. Blakely, he held a series of protracted meetings, in which many sinners were converted. In reaching the first Annual Conference he attended, at Fayetteville, Ark., he had a horse-back ride of near three hundred miles, through a sparsely settled, mountainous section, taking in a camp meeting on the way. The eight preachers "enlivened the long, tedious, lonesome journey with anecdotes, discussing some theological subject, criticising some literary product, or in relating amusing occurences of the year." Bro. Manly was appointed to Fayetteville.

In November, 1858, the Conference met in Arkadelphia. Bro. Manly was read out to that place, and organized it as a station. Here, on April 5, 1859, he was happily married to Miss Martha Amis, who proved a faithful companion in his pastoral work for many years, assisting him in his studies, and in many ways supplementing his rapidly failing eye-sight. He served works as follows: 1860, Des Arc; '61, Little Rock; 63 and '4 Eldorado; '65 and '6, Lapeal; '67, Warren; '68 and '9, Hampton. In the Louisiana Conference: 1870 and '71, Mansfield; '72, '3, '4 Bastrop; '75 and '6, Minden; '77 and '8 New Iberia; '79 and '80, Opelousas; '81 and '2, Washington; '83, Lake Charles; '84 and '5, Rayne; '86, Abbeville; '87 and '8, Lafayette; '89, Algiers; '90 to '93, superannuated; '94 and '5, Washington; '96, Rayne; 1897, superannuated.

He was married to Miss Lima Amis, Jan. 1, 1890. She felt called of God to take her sister's place in caring for him in his blindness and in his declining years, and how faithfully she has fulfilled the trust, only those who were intimately acquainted with their family life can ever know. She weeps for him as for one whom she will soon meet where weeping will be no more.

Bro. Manly was in many respects a remarkable man. True to his convictions as to truth or duty, it was no trouble always to locate him. God's own commendation of Job, "That he had spoken of Him the thing that was right" (Job xlii, 8), and his confidence in what Abraham would do (Gen. xviii, 19) could be predicted of M. C. Manly. He always stood for the truth at all hazards. He did the thing he believed to be right, let consequences be what they might; results he left with God. He was well versed in Methodist theology. He was familiar with the Word of God. He thought in chunks, and his words were calculated to hurl—in the same way—his ideas at the heads and hearts of his audience. His last prayer—away from home—was offered by the sick-bed of Ed. Wimberly. Heaven seemed to fill the room as he wrestled with God. In his last sermon he told the congregation that "the family chariot might come for him before he would see them again; he was waiting for it." His sufferings were great during his last illness, but in the intervals he would shout the praises of God, and rejoice in confident hope of soon seeing the fellow-soldiers gone before. Rev. Cadesman Pope—until recently president of a Kentucky Female College—writes: "A pure-souled, zealous man has left us; always ready, at the Master's bidding, to carry forward the standard of the cross, and plant it upon the ramparts of the enemy. He was one of three men in our Conference (the Little Rock) who claimed to have attained to perfect love, when I came to it. They were W. P. Ratcliff, J. E. Cobb, and M. C. Manly." He stood true to this testimony and experience to the last. A few minutes before he left us a bright smile illuminated his features, his eyes both flew wide open, and he—looking apparently right into heaven—breathed his last as quietly as an infant falling asleep in the arms of its mother. I am glad that, having known him, to love him for thirty-four years. I had the privilege of watching his expiring breath. "Soldier of Christ, well done! Rest from thy loved employ."

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

The Evangelical body ever sought in earlier days to witness to the necessity of the work of the Holy Ghost. That witness was even more clearly given and insisted upon with greater emphasis forty years ago than it has been at certain times since. But to-day God is bringing us back to the old position. If there is one thing more than another which seems to be God's message to the church to-day, it is this, "Without the fires of Pentecost, without the presence of the Comforter, without the fullness of the Holy Ghost, ye can do nothing."—Canon Hay Aitken.

Yes, we must be watchful, especially in the beginning of the temptation, for the enemy is then more easily overcome if he be not suffered to enter the door of our hearts, but be resisted at the very gate on his first knocking.—Thomas a' Kempis.

Let it be our happiness this day to add to the happiness of those around us, to comfort some sorrow, to relieve some want, to add some strength to our neighbor's virtue.—Channing.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healtliy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazeo City, Miss.

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.

Study Course.

The books of the first year of the Study Conree have been sent out, and we presnme the teachers have begnn their study. They are small volnmes of abont 150 pages, convenient in size, neatly printed, and nicely bound. They are condensed, yet thorongh and to the point. After an examination, we are convinced that Dr. Atkins and Prof. Hamill have done their work well.

The book on the "Sunday-school and Its Management," by Dr. Cnnnyngham, gives a history of the Snnday-school movement, beginning with the ancient Bible school, and snrveys the Snnday-school work of the last century. It is condensed from Dr. Cnnnyngham's larger work, but gives all the facts that are necessary for a well-informed teacher. It also gives the Sunday school statistics of the world, and presents the best methods of management of the modern school.

"The Snnday-school Teacher," by Prof. Hamill, is thoronghly adapted to the wants of the teachers in managing their classes, both in and out of the Snnday-school room. It gives the principles of teaching, the art of questioning, and methods of preparing the lesson.

"Bible Sindies," by Dr. Dunning, is an exhanstive little work on the Bible, its teachings, doctrines, and methods of stndying it.

We rejoice in the fact that the conrse is meeting with hearty approval from all sonrces, and that thonsands of officers and teachers will become members of the Circle. It is a prononnced success, both as to the merits of the books and the nnmbers engaging in their stndy, and will do incalculable good.

Prof. Hamill is making out a schednle of his eppointmenie for Institute work for the coming six months. The first half of each month he will remain in his office at Nashville, superintending the Study Circle, and the latter half of each month he will devote to Institnte work. There is a great demand for his services, and his slate is nearly made up until July 1.

The Kentucky Conference held a mid-year missionary rally on Jan. 7, and we quote the following from the report of a committee: "Methods of getting our Sunday-schools interested in missionary contributions were discussed. It developed that only half of the Sunday-schools in our Conference are contributing anything to missions. A contribntion of only one cent a month from each Snnday-school scholar reported in our Minutes would give ns $1,577 for missions from our Snnday-schools, whereas the past year we realized only $286. If every Sunday-school superintendent would faithfully nrge this matter npon the children, we would see this amount raised. The General Conference of our church has made it the dnty of our Snnday-schools to contribnte to missions, and a faithful compliance would solve the financial problem of missions."

Organize a Home Department in your school dnring the early months of this year. It will be a great help to your school and your community. Organize it if you only have two members—superintendent and a victor. Two are a majority when they have God on their side.

In bnsiness three things are essential—knowledge, temper, and time. Surely in our Father's bnsiness—leading the yonng to Jesns—these three are also essential.—Evangel.

The Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative says: "The Snnday-school of our church at Carrollton has begnn the stndy by charts of a series of lessons in church history, polity and doctrine. The first lesson aroused quite a good deal of interest. The series will rnn throngh the entire year. Five minutes' time each Sunday will be given to these lessons. The superintendent nrges a prompt attendance every Snnday. Books have been ordered for the 'Stndy Circle,' and the stndy will begin as soon as the books arrive."

Prevalency of Kidney Trouble.

So prevalent and deceptive is kidney trouble that it very often becomes well advanced before it is even snspected, therefore, it behooves all to be on the lookont. Shonld you be ill, or not feeling well, it wonld be wise to first pay attention to the kidneys and ascertain if they are the cause of your tronble.

A simple method of finding ont if your kidneys are at fault has often been called to the attention of our readers throngh Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root advertising in the columns of this paper, and it is now repeated for the benefit of those who may be interested. Viz: "Fill a bottle with urine and set aside for twenty-four hours or so, and if it shows a brick-dust sediment or cloudy appearance, or if the urine is scanty or profuse, or if it is found necessary to go often throngh the day, or get np many times during the night, you may be snre your kidneys need attention."

After careful inquiry we find Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is remarkably successful in the quick relief and cure of the diseases for which it is recommended. There is hardly a drug store in the land that does not keep and highly recommend this celebrated preparation for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

By special arrangement every reader of the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" may have a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root by mail, free, (if they have not already had one), by sending their address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

GREENSBURG, LA.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: We are at work in our new field. Interests of pastor and family are being looked after. Ladies' Aid elected new officers last Wednesday evening, and all seem to be interested in repairing and refurnishing the parsonage. I arrived the second of January. Have filled three appointments, visited several families, and did not forget the dear old ADVOCATE, for here is $2 collected for a new snbscriber.

Yours fraternally,

R. A. DAVIS.

Jan. 16, 1902.

GIBSLAND, LA.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: I ask space in the dear old ADVOCATE for a few lines as to our work. We have been very kindly received by our people for a third term. And I hope to make this the best year of my ministry. This is a very kindly and generous people. This circuit leads all others in the district in its contributions per member, paying last year for all purposes over six dollars per member. This beautiful weather has given this scribe a nice chance, which he has utilized, to exercise himself, and the result is a nice lot of wood—enough for the year. I expect to do a good deal of improvement on the parsonage now soon, and send in some snbscribers for the ADVOCATE. Come to see us, Doctor. It is seldom that any of the greater dignitaries get out up here "in the ticks." We want to see you at our District Conference, and will show you how well we can listen to you. Fraternally,

W. E. AKIN.

WEST POINT.

Rev. R. A. Meek writes: "We have been in place at West Point since the eighteenth of December. Have been graciously and generously 'pounded' by the people, and are now hard at work in our new field. Our church here has 386 members, and is characterized by a commendable spirit of harmony. The Snnday-school is not as large as it should be, but we have a wide-awake superintendent and a most efficient corps of teachers. The order and system are well-nigh perfect, and admirable work is being done. We have two Leagues, which meet regularly, and a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society, both of which are active. Altogether, we think the field here is an inviting one. It furnishes a good parsonage, a competent salary, and plenty of work to do, and what more, except the presence of the Lord in saving power, should a Methodist preacher want? The praise of Brother and Sister Wyatt is in everybody's mouth. They wrought well here, and left behind a host of admiring friends.

"The Southern Female College, a Cumberland Presbyterian school, is located here. There are more than forty Methodist girls attending this institution, to whom I have the honor of preaching every Snnday morning. I have been haranging the A and M. boys for the past three years, and it is a pleasant change to be allowed to speak to the girls awhile. They are more attractive auditors to look npon, whether they are more attentive or not.

"Come to see ns, Mr. Editor. We should be delighted to have you preach for ns, and represent your paper."

COCKRUM, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I am moving along well for me. I have a pleasant work and would like to stay four years. Bnt just how to enitivate the four-year system, I must confess I do not know. I have stayed four years twice since I joined Conference, and five years on one of these circuits. If I have changed, I am not aware of it. I know I have wanted to stay on other circuits, and the people said they wanted me, but I moved all the same. Moving has cost me in the last five years about $300, and I would like to enitivate the four-years' stay if I can. I have been lucky for the last month—$17.50 for marrying people. So you see the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. I will start a canvass for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE next Sunday, and give it a full round.

Wishing you a Happy New Year, I close this epistle.

Yours in Christ, R. P. GOAR.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

VIMVILLE, MISS.

DR. BOSWELL: We are moving off very nicely, I think, on the Vimville charge. We have begun one new church since Conference. Our church at Marion is in a dilapidated condition, and the people decided to build a new house. We hope to complete it this year, and also finish the repairs on one other, ceiling and weather boarding. Much success to the ADVOCATE. JAS. L. REID.

PISO'S CURE FOR — CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. — CONSUMPTION — 25 CTS. 25 CTS.

Few people can understand the feelings of the pugilist as he is being counted out. He hears the seconds ticked off. He struggles to rise, but struggles in vain. He has lost the fight.

There are some who are making a losing fight for life that can appreciate this; those whose lungs are diseased. With every tick of the watch, they know that they are being counted out.

The great question is how can a quick rally be made to continue the fight against disease? Many who have asked that question have found a satisfactory answer in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures bronchitis, obstinate, deep-seated coughs, hemorrhage, night-sweats, emaciation, and other conditions which if neglected or unskilfully treated may find a fatal termination in consumption.

"When I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. John T. Reed, of Jefferson, Jefferson Co., Ark., "I was very low with a cough, and would at times spit up blood. I was not able to do any work at all, was weak and my head was dizzy. The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it and continued until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I do not look like nor feel like the same man as I was a year ago. People were astonished and said they did not think I could live. I can thankfully say that I am entirely cured of a disease from which had it not been for your wonderful Discovery I would have died."

There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which no "just as good" medicine can show.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

ANOTHER NOTICE.

Requests for special copies of the ADVOCATE come to us so often that they are burdensome, and we again remind our friends that in making such requests they must send FOUR CENTS for each copy. We can not afford to "send bill," as we are sometimes asked to do. Please, friends, bear these things in mind.

It is to be hoped that when the preacher gets through his series of sermons on Charles Dickens, Prophet of Humanism; Robert Burns, Prophet of Fraternalism; Count Tolstoi, Prophet of Socialism; Lord Byron, Prophet of Cynicism; George Eliot, Prophet of Fatalism; and John Ruskin, Prophet of Idealism, that he will take Christ, Prophet of God, and ever thereafter stick to his text.

It seems to have been recently discovered that if Rev. W. R. Peebles, of the Tennessee Conference, remained on the Columbia district as presiding elder until the next session of that body, he would have been on the district about four years and eight months. To prevent this, and to keep from raising a question of law, the Bishop in charge has placed Brother Peebles on the Nashville district, and Dr. D. C. Kelley on the Columbia. We have always heard that "it is dangerous to swap horses while crossing a stream."

The habit some Christians have of spending the early hours of Sunday in bed is not to be commended. They lose the best time of the day for study and preparation for worship. To stay abed and doze and dream is neither healthful to the soul, nor restful to the body. It is a sin to take the Lord's time for "self-indulgence," simply because conscience and the law of the land will not allow one to be at his daily labor. Sunday is a day for rest and worship; not for lounging under pretense of being worn out. Some of us need reforming.

A few weeks since we wrote an article on "Bishop Candler and Tobacco," in which we joined issue with Dr. Palmore and his contributors, who so unjustly and severely censured the Bishop. Brother Palmore, or some one on the editorial staff of the St. Louis Advocate, saw the article, and quoted one single sentence, viz.: "We stand squarely with Brother Palmore in personal enmity to tobacco." Why did Brother Palmore snatch that out of its connection and give it to his readers? Those who never see the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will conclude that we endorse Brother Palmore on all the ground. He has treated us unfairly.

PROVING THE LORD.

We are authorized, as intelligent beings, to prove the Lord. God himself makes the challenge. He does not, however, authorize us to determine our own methods of proof. Unlimited authority in that direction would multiply demands upon the Lord, and in so many ways, that tests would become common, and often childish. And yet we read of instances in the Scriptures in which it seems that the interested parties devised their own means of testing the word and power of God. Gideon proved the Lord in a peculiar and original way. God called him to deliver Israel out of the hands of the Midianites and others. To make sure of the divine call, Gideon said to the Lord: "I will put a fleece of wool in the floor, and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth besides, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said. And it was so; for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water." The next night he said: "Let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece: let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew." And it was so. The proof was satisfactory, and Gideon obeyed the word of God. Elijah's test on Mount Carmel is familiar to all. His proclamation to the prophets of Baal was, "Call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord; and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God." To this the idolatrous prophets all agreed, saying, "It is well spoken." The demonstration was complete.

We have no need for such tests under the dispensation of the Spirit. We think our Lord gives us a strong intimation of this in quoting the words of Abraham to the rich man in hell, who desired him to send one from the dead to warn his wicked brethren, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." We prove God now by obedience to his Word and Spirit. We may do this even in temporal things by the proper use of our earthly substance. Said the Lord to Israel, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Complying with the condition, God not only grants fruitful fields, but a delightsome land, and the benediction of the nations. "All nations shall call you blessed."

We prove God by faith; not by faith that is simply the intellectual assent to the truth. That sort of belief may be reached by a process of reasoning. Multitudes believe in that sense who really know not God. We gather a correct idea of proving God by faith from the teachings of the New Testament. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." This, said St. Paul, is "the word of faith which we preach." The passing from death unto life, which is a conscious experience of every penitent believer, is proof sufficient to him that "God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

But the Christian relies not alone on the testimony of his own spirit, that is good as far as it goes, but it is not altogether satisfactory. There comes to his relief the Holy Spirit, who bears witness with his spirit that he is a child of God. "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." The testimony of experience is not only satisfactory, but irresistible and incontrovertible. The blind man (John ix), to whom sight was given, could not begin to cope with the adversaries in an argument, nor did he undertake it, but all their arguments and denunciations amounted to nothing in face of the fact that Jesus had proved his power and goodness by giving him sight. Arguments have no effect on one who has "passed from death unto life." He knows him in whom he has believed. All of us may prove God in the same way.

A NEW VERSION.

The Twentieth Century New Testament is a new version. It is a translation of the Greek into modern English. We have heretofore looked on the book as a passing sensation. But it seems to have been taken seriously, and has met with unqualified endorsement in high places. "A very eminent professor of New Testament Greek"—in a Southern institution, we suppose—now reads "nothing but the Greek and the Twentieth Century version." Dr. Tigert, our Book Editor, also endorses it. This translation commends itself to the Doctor on account of its "simplicity and faithfulness." The translators evince "not only exact and delicate Greek scholarship, but a perfect mastery of living English, and a positive genius for translation." We infer that the original has never before been correctly translated into English.

We do not presume to deny what Dr. Tigert says, but we venture to affirm that, after giving these faithful translators due credit for substituting obsolete words with words commonly understood, they have in many places failed to give us better English than we find in the authorized version. It is not any better than the English of the revised version. In some places they seem to have played the part of tinkers.

The book is presented to the public as something entirely new and unique. Such is not the case. The Emphatic Diaglott, copyrighted as far back as 1864, though showing a sectarian bias, is something of like character, quite as good in its "modern English," frequently with whole verses identical in translation, and without any effort at simplicity; perhaps it would be better to say, without any effort at condescension.

Let us look at a few examples of the modern English given us in this faithful translation. Take Matt. v, 14, "A city that is set on a hill can not be hid." The modern English is, "It is impossible for a town that stands on a hill to escape notice." That is equal to the English of a Boston man, who, instead of saying the people of a certain place rode him on a rail, declared that he "had the misfortune to be elevated on the sharp edge of a large piece of timber and conveyed out of town." Matt. v, 22 (A. V.), reads, "Whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire." In modern English it is, "If any one says, 'You scoundrel,' he will be liable to be sent to the fiery Pit."

In Matt. ix, 20 (A. V.) we read of a diseased woman who came up behind Jesus, and "touched the hem of his garment." In Luke viii, 44, it reads, "Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment." The Twentieth Century New Testament reads in both places, "touched the tassel of his cloak."

Hebrews xii is one of the finest chapters in the New Testament. Will the readers please turn to the chapter and compare verses five and six with the modern English, "And you have forgotten the encouraging words which are addressed to you as God's children—

> 'My child, think not lightly of the Lord's discipline,
> Do not despond when he rebukes you;
> For it is those whom he loves that he disciplines,
> And he chastises every child whom he acknowledges.'"

Verse second in the Modern English reads, "Our eyes fixed upon Jesus, who is our Guide, and our perfect Example of faith." We respectfully ask Dr. Tigert if that is a faithful translation of the original? If so, then Unitarianism has firmer ground in the New Testament than we supposed. The same leaning occurs in Ephesians ii, 18, which reads, "It is through him that we, the Jews and the heathen, united in spirit, are now able to approach the Father." Compare this reading with the same verse in the old book.

In I. John v, verse 7 is omitted entirely. True, the verse is regarded as spurious, but why did not these faithful translators say so, that ordinary readers might know why the passage is omitted! There are other slips of the same kind.

The term "elders" is frequently used in the Revelation. (See chapters iv, 4; v, 5, 6, 8, 14; vii, 11, 13, and xiv, 3.) The Twentieth Century New Testament reads "senators" in every place. Why these faithful translators gave us this term in Revelation, and adhered to the old term "elder" in the epistles, we do not know. Possibly they discovered that John was talking about things of State, instead of things pertaining to the Church. If they were after modern English, they missed it. The term "elder" is just as modern as "senator," and much more familiar to church people and Bible readers. We might name many other passages that have nothing to recommend them to the average English reader.

This Twentieth Century New Testament, a translation into modern English, made from the original Greek, we take it, is the forerunner of other versions. We will not be surprised if some publisher soon announces the New Testament in the "Dialect of the Fans," then one in the Dialect of the Race Course, and one in the Dialect of the Slums. Anything to make money! And anything that will catch the eyes of those who are looking for something new will do that. Fads and far-fetched ideas please some folks.

THE POPE AND HOLY SCRIPTURE.

The Pope of Rome has recently appointed a commission to inquire into the tenets of the three exegetic schools of the Roman Catholic Church. Viewed from the standpoint of Romanism, this is all right. The Pope is the head of the church, the guardian of the faith, and, as such, must, of necessity, feel more or less anxiety over any tendency in the schools or in the priesthood to break the unity of the faith. Anything of the kind coming to his knowledge must be checked. In other words, if unrestricted investigation leads to heresy, then those who are guilty must recant, or be put under ban of the church.

But what puzzles us is the fact that the commission is authorized to determine "what parts of the Holy Scripture must be placed beyond discussion, and what left open to private opinion." True, the commission "is to be guided by the writings of the fathers of the church" in reaching a conclusion. But who authorized the fathers of the church to exercise censorship over the Holy Scriptures, even so far as to say what portions are beyond criticism, and what may be privately interpreted? One portion of inspiration is of as much authority as another, and no man, Pope or potentate, has a right to put one portion beyond discussion, and leave others to be fought over in the schools. The critics may sift and separate the additions and interpolations, but what is God's Word must be received. Notwithstanding this, it is an open book, to be studied and obeyed according to the understanding of those who read. Protestantism long since won the fight on this point, and while Rome may keep her sons and daughters from interpreting the forbidden parts of the Word, she can never fasten the chains on the people again. And occasionally some in her own fold will think aloud.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Millsaps College ranks high among the institutions of the South for the education of our boys. There is no reason why any Methodist boy in Mississippi should go outside the State for college instruction. Our Methodist fathers should sustain the school, and all our preachers should recommend the school wherever they go. The following paragraph we clip from a a letter received a few days ago. It was written by a Methodist—one who is a scholar, and knows what he is talking about. Would that all our people in Mississippi shared his sentiments and his enthusiasm in the cause of Christian education.

The realization of what a prize they have in Millsaps College is growing among the citizens of Mississippi. No school in the State offers better facilities or better moral conditions. Board can be had very inexpensively—surprisingly so in some instances—and the general cost of living is very low. There are no temptations whatever to extravagances of any kind in the way of expenditure. Its faculty is composed of men who possess not only the technical scholarship, but also the well-rounded character that is not always found among specialists. Let us hope that the new decade of its history will see a growth along all lines similar to that of the decade which it will close in June.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

WHAT SOME ARE THINKING.

As the General Conference approaches the brethren will think, and some of them will talk. Much of what is said and thought will never come to pass. Now and then suggestions are made which, though they may never be enacted into law, are, nevertheless, practicable, and in the interest of economy. Take as an example the following paragraph from a secular paper, the editor of which recently interviewed one of our General Conference delegates. In conversation with a representative of that paper this delegate, a man of fine judgment, "expressed himself as favoring a consolidation of kindred interests of the church now working under separate organizations."

For instance, a closer union of home missions and foreign missions. The consolidation of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society and the Woman's Home Mission Society, of the Juvenile Missionary Society and the Junior Epworth League. And a close and vital union of the Sunday-school and the Epworth League. Also the consolidation of the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Our Homes, and of the Sunday-school Visitor and Epworth Era. As the editor of a secular paper, we do not claim to understand these matters, but from a general knowledge and observation of a multiplicity of organizations and publications, the above measures strike us as being very wise and desirable.

PERSONAL.

Rev. M. F. Johnson, of Carrollton Avenue, pleases his people well. He is making a fine start. He is a studious preacher, and looks well after his flock.

A note from Rev. J. R. Robertson informs us that he has moved from Pontotoc, Miss., to Victoria, and will take charge of Red Banks circuit, in the Holly Springs district.

We have had the pleasure of meeting Dr. S. S. Keener several times since he entered upon his work on Baton Rouge district. He is busy, cheerful, and speaks hopefully.

We acknowledge receipt of invitation to the marriage of Miss Sallie Smylie, daughter of Mrs. Sarah E. Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., to Mr. Norman Ferguson, Wednesday, Feb. 5. May blessings from the Father be upon them.

We deeply sympathize with our dear brother, Rev. C. M. Crossley, of the Mississippi Conference, who has been called to mourn the death of his beloved wife. She passed away Jan. 23, at Walnut Grove, Miss. We ask the prayers of the church in behalf of our afflicted brother and family.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor of Dryades Street, has taken hold of his work with energy and is endeavoring to enlist the young people, having organized "a Catechism and Bible Instruction Class," which meets every Friday evening at the church. This service bids fair to become popular and useful.

Dr. E. B. Chappell, of West End, Nashville, is interesting the young people of his church, and is drawing them in large numbers. Occasionally he sets apart a Sunday for them, and calls it 'Young People's Day." The secret of his success ought to be generally known. Not every church has a suitable Chappell.

Rev. L. F. Alford, pastor of Tchonpitoulas and Gretna, has not been in good health since coming to the city, but he keeps up and at work, and is hopeful of success. Prospects are fair, especially at Gonidsboro, one of his appointments across the river. We trust that with the advance of Spring he may entirely recover his health.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Jr., of Ruston, La., is just now enjoying a revival. Large congregations attend the services; Christians are being stirred to a more active life. At last account many sinners had been converted, and forty applied for membership. Rev. C. B. Stronse is assisting. Brother Singleton promises a full account when the extra services close.

We have a pleasant note from Rev. T. W. Dye, presiding elder of the Greenville district. He is well pleased, and doing his best. Brother Dye says: "This is a great country, and will, some day, be the garden-spot of the South, if not of the world. Our Methodism is well to the front in this Delta, and, doubtless, will hold her own, as she generally does, when she has a mind to emphasize doctrine and polity. Our preachers are in earnest in the work. They are capital co-workers."

We reprint the following complimentary notice, as copied in the Texas Christian Advocate, from the local paper of Kosse, Texas: "Rev. R. A. Burroughs, the new Methodist pastor, is pronounced by all who have heard him as being one of the most able ministers ever sent here by the Conference, and is regarded by many as being one of the strongest in the Texas Conference." We are glad to note this good account of our ex-Mississippi preacher. When the Texans know him as we do, they will esteem him for his ability and sound judgment, and love him as a brother.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

On Sunday evening, Jan. 19, the South Side (Meridian) Epworth League celebrated its sixth anniversary by using the programme prepared by the Board for Epworth League Day (Jan. 12). The occasion was an interesting one as well as profitable. Besides the rendering of the regular programme, as above stated, the officers for the present year were installed, a reading circle of some fifteen or more was organized, and in a short while will begin the course of study provided by the Epworth League Board.

The League Chapter of South Side is in a flourishing condition, as was demonstrated on the night of its anniversary. The officers are wide-awake, and every department is well looked after. The prospects for the future growth of this chapter are very encouraging indeed, and the pastor is expecting a great deal from this organization of young people.

A large audience attended the services on the above mentioned occasion, and all seemed to be pleased with the exercises, and some expressed themselves as being profited thereby. After the benediction was pronounced one young man volunteered to join the League at its next business meeting. The young people of South Side are true to their church and their Lord, and I have never had the privilege of meeting a better class of young people than we have here.

W. D. Hawkins, the president of the League, is a born Leagner, and the chapter has shown its appreciation of his most efficient services by re-electing him their leader for the current year.

May God bless the League work everywhere!

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

In accordance with the action of the New Orleans Union Epworth League at the last meeting, I hereby appoint an Executive Committee, consisting of five members, to make arrangements and to appoint subcommittees for the State Epworth League Conference, which will meet in this city in April. They are as follows: Eugene T. Woods (chairman), Louisiana Avenue; M. D DePass, Burgundy; John Meyer, Franklin; Walter L. Bardet, Parker Memorial; Mrs. J. Cohen, Carrollton.

NOTICE.

While on the stocks undergoing repairs, I will discharge a duty laid upon me by the last District Conference. That Conference authorized the presiding elder to appoint a Committee of Five to select a place for the location of the district parsonage. I hereby appoint on that committee: Capt. Jno. N. Pharr, of Berwick; Hon. Crow Girard, of Lafayette; Hon. W. L. Doss, of Gueydan; Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Lake Charles; Rev. F. S. Parker, of Crowley.

I suggest that these brethren get together as soon as convenient.

MAGAZINES.

Scribner's Magazine, for February, contains discussions of questions of the greatest national importance; short fiction by clever writers, beautifully illustrated; several art articles; and other matter, useful and entertaining.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews, for the coming month, is as usual filled with "Fun, Fact, and Philosophy." It occupies a place all its own in current literature. A student of the times can not well dispense with this monthly. The editorial department, The Progress of the World, The Record of Current Events, and the cartoon department, are largely concerned with live topics of international interest.

The February Century is to contain two articles, with illustrations, on the new scheme for beautifying the City of Washington; and another important feature in the same issue is A Visit to Mount Vernon a Century Ago, containing conversations with General Washington as recorded in the diary of a Polish poet attached in this country to the suit of Kosciuszko. The Century is one of the best magazines of the day. The February number will prove of exceptional interest.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies; a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

Werlein Piano Club No. 2

INTRODUCING AND ADVERTISING

THE WERLEIN PIANOS

In placing the WERLEIN PIANO on the market, one month ago, in order to introduce and advertise it, we set aside 100 for that purpose—forming the WERLEIN PIANO CLUB; in other words, to advertise the Werlein Piano, we

Furnished Club Members $350 to $400 Pianos for Only $262.

No piano ever had such a reception, and we have found where WERLEIN Pianos have been used in a home they brought in other orders. In forming the Werlein Piano club we did not take into consideration the wide scope that could be reached from this city through the daily papers, and the Werlein Piano was put on the market by advertising, with the reputation of the WERLEIN HOUSE back of it.

We find in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi there are 249 towns with a population of 1000, 115 with a population of 2000, 45 towns have a population of 5000, and 21 with a population of over 10,000. In fact, in above towns there are over one million people, not counting the country and smaller places. All these people should know what the Werlein Piano is. Orders come pouring in for WERLEIN'S under the club plan, and at present writing about sixteen or seventeen members have subscribed over the 100. AT A MEETING of the PHILIP WERLEIN, LTD., yesterday it was decided to offer to the public in general, and ESPECIALLY towns not represented in Werlein Piano Club No. 1

Werlein Piano Club No. 2,

Of 100 Werlein Pianos for 100 Club Members at Only $262.

To introduce and advertise the Werlein Piano we saved in clean cash for members of Werlein Piano Club No. 1, $13,800, as follows:

100 Werlein Pianos, regular price	$400 each	$40,000
100 Club Members secured them at	$262 each	$26,200
Net Saving to Club Members	$138 each, or	$13,800

AND EVERY MEMBER IS SATISFIED. Many have written in the interest of friends to secure instruments under the club plan. For and on account of above reasons the company decided to offer Werlein Piano Club Number Two, and in doing so will state plainly that the factory can only furnish one carload per week—about fifteen pianos. Orders will be filled as booked, and shipped or delivered in the city as promptly as possible. The terms under the club plan for $350 to $400 Werlein Pianos are

Cash or on payments of Twenty Dollars Cash and $1.50 per week (monthly if desired), 6 per cent interest. No discount for cash, except saving of interest. The only piano ever sold in the South at

ABSOLUTELY ONE PRICE.

We sincerely thank the public in general, and all members of WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER ONE for their confidence in the piano that bears our name. We will carry out every statement made in our announcements, and the WERLEIN PIANO will bear us out in every promise made in our endeavor to give you the most value for the money.

The books are now open for subscription in WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER TWO. Kindly place orders as quickly as possible, and make first and second choice as to woods—mahogany, walnut or oak—remit first payment, and order will be filled as promptly as possible.

ANOTHER NOTICE.

Requests for special copies of the ADVOCATE come to us so often that they are burdensome, and we again remind our friends that in making such requests they must send FOUR CENTS for each copy. We can not afford to "send bill," as we are sometimes asked to do. Please, friends, bear these things in mind.

It is to be hoped that when the preacher gets through his series of sermons on Charles Dickens, Prophet of Humanism; Robert Burns, Prophet of Fraternalism; Count Tolstoi, Prophet of Socialism; Lord Byron, Prophet of Cynicism; George Eliot, Prophet of Fatalism; and John Ruskin, Prophet of Idealism, that he will take Christ, Prophet of God, and ever thereafter stick to his text.

It seems to have been recently discovered that if Rev. W. R. Peebles, of the Tennessee Conference, remained on the Columbia district as presiding elder until the next session of that body, he would have been on the district about four years and eight months. To prevent this, and to keep from raising a question of law, the Bishop in charge has placed Brother Peebles on the Nashville district, and Dr. D. C. Kelley on the Columbia. We have always heard that "it is dangerous to swap horses while crossing a stream."

The habit some Christians have of spending the early hours of Sunday in bed is not to be commended. They lose the best time of the day for study and preparation for worship. To stay abed and doze and dream is neither healthful to the soul, nor restful to the body. It is a sin to take the Lord's time for "self-indulgence," simply because conscience and the law of the land will not allow one to be at his daily labor. Sunday is a day for rest and worship; not for lounging under pretense of being worn out. Some of us need reforming.

A few weeks since we wrote an article on "Bishop Candler and Tobacco," in which we joined issue with Dr. Palmore and his contributors, who so unjustly and severely censured the Bishop. Brother Palmore, or some one on the editorial staff of the St. Louis Advocate, saw the article, and quoted one single sentence, viz.: "We stand squarely with Brother Palmore in personal enmity to tobacco." Why did Brother Palmore snatch that out of its connection and give it to his readers? Those who never see the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will conclude that we endorse Brother Palmore on all the ground. He has treated us unfairly.

PROVING THE LORD.

We are authorized, as intelligent beings, to prove the Lord. God himself makes the challenge. He does not, however, authorize us to determine our own methods of proof. Unlimited authority in that direction would multiply demands upon the Lord, and in so many ways, that tests would become common, and often childish. And yet we read of instances in the Scriptures in which it seems that the interested parties devised their own means of testing the word and power of God. Gideon proved the Lord in a peculiar and original way. God called him to deliver Israel out of the hands of the Midianites and others. To make sure of the divine call, Gideon said to the Lord: "I will put a fleece of wool in the floor, and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth besides, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said. And it was so; for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water." The next night he said: "Let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece: let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew." And it was so. The proof was satisfactory, and Gideon obeyed the word of God. Elijah's test on Mount Carmel is familiar to all. His proclamation to the prophets of Baal was, "Call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord; and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God." To this the idolatrous prophets all agreed, saying, "It is well spoken." The demonstration was complete.

We have no need for such tests under the dispensation of the Spirit. We think our Lord gives us a strong intimation of this in quoting the words of Abraham to the rich man in hell, who desired him to send one from the dead to warn his wicked brethren, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." We prove God now by obedience to his Word and Spirit. We may do this even in temporal things by the proper use of our earthly substance. Said the Lord to Israel, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Complying with the condition, God not only grants fruitful fields, but a delightsome land, and the benediction of the nations. "All nations shall call you blessed."

We prove God by faith; not by faith that is simply the intellectual assent to the truth. That sort of belief may be reached by a process of reasoning. Multitudes believe in that sense who really know not God. We gather a correct idea of proving God by faith from the teachings of the New Testament. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." This, said St. Paul, is "the word of faith which we preach." The passing from death unto life, which is a conscious experience of every penitent believer, is proof sufficient to him that "God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

But the Christian relies not alone on the testimony of his own spirit, that is good as far as it goes, but it is not altogether satisfactory. There comes to his relief the Holy Spirit, who bears witness with his spirit that he is a child of God. "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." The testimony of experience is not only satisfactory, but irresistible and incontrovertible. The blind man (John ix), to whom sight was given, could not begin to cope with the adversaries in an argument, nor did he undertake it, but all their arguments and denunciations amounted to nothing in face of the fact that Jesus had proved his power and goodness by giving him sight. Arguments have no effect on one who has "passed from death unto life." He knows him in whom he has believed. All of us may prove God in the same way.

A NEW VERSION.

The Twentieth Century New Testament is a new version. It is a translation of the Greek into modern English. We have heretofore looked on the book as a passing sensation. But it seems to have been taken seriously, and has met with unqualified endorsement in high places. "A very eminent professor of New Testament Greek"—in a Southern institution, we suppose—now reads "nothing but the Greek and the Twentieth Century version." Dr. Tigert, our Book Editor, also endorses it. This translation commends itself to the Doctor on account of its "simplicity and faithfulness." The translators evince "not only exact and delicate Greek scholarship, but a perfect mastery of living English, and a positive genius for translation." We infer that the original has never before been correctly translated into English.

We do not presume to deny what Dr. Tigert says, but we venture to affirm that, after giving these faithful translators due credit for substituting obsolete words with words commonly understood, they have in many places failed to give us better English than we find in the authorized version. It is not any better than the English of the revised version. In some places they seem to have played the part of tinkers.

The book is presented to the public as something entirely new and unique. Such is not the case. The Emphatic Diaglott, copyrighted as far back as 1864, though showing a sectarian bias, is something of like character, quite as good in its "modern English," frequently with whole verses identical in translation, and without any effort at simplicity; perhaps it would be better to say, without any effort at condescension.

Let us look at a few examples of the modern English given us in this faithful translation. Take Matt. v, 14, "A city that is set on a hill can not be hid." The modern English is, "It is impossible for a town that stands on a hill to escape notice." That is equal to the English of a Boston man, who, instead of saying the people of a certain place rode him on a rail, declared that he "had the misfortune to be elevated on the sharp edge of a large piece of timber and conveyed out of town." Matt. v, 22 (A. V.), reads, "Whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire." In modern English it is, "If any one says, 'You scoundrel,' he will be liable to be sent to the fiery Pit."

In Matt. ix, 20 (A. V.) we read of a diseased woman who came up behind Jesus, and "touched the hem of his garment." In Luke viii, 44, it reads, "Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment." The Twentieth Century New Testament reads in both places, "touched the tassel of his cloak."

Hebrews xii is one of the finest chapters in the New Testament. Will the readers please turn to the chapter and compare verses five and six with the modern English, "And you have forgotten the encouraging words which are addressed to you as God's children—

> 'My child, think not lightly of the Lord's discipline,
> Do not despond when he rebukes you;
> For it is those whom he loves that he disciplines,
> And he chastises every child whom he acknowledges.'"

Verse second in the Modern English reads, "Our eyes fixed upon Jesus, who is our Guide, and our perfect Example of faith." We respectfully ask Dr. Tigert if that is a faithful translation of the original? If so, then Unitarianism has firmer ground in the New Testament than we supposed. The same leaning occurs in Ephesians ii, 18, which reads, "It is through him that we, the Jews and the heathen, united in spirit, are now able to approach the Father." Compare this reading with the same verse in the old book.

In I. John v, verse 7 is omitted entirely. True, the verse is regarded as spurious, but why did not these faithful translators say so, that ordinary readers might know why the passage is omitted! There are other slips of the same kind.

The term "elders" is frequently used in the Revelation. (See chapters iv, 4; v, 5, 6, 8, 14; vii, 11, 13, and xiv, 3.) The Twentieth Century New Testament reads "senators" in every place. Why these faithful translators gave us this term in Revelation, and adhered to the old term "elder" in the epistles, we do not know. Possibly they discovered that John was talking about things of State, instead of things pertaining to the Church. If they were after modern English, they missed it. The term "elder" is just as modern as "senator," and much more familiar to church people and Bible readers. We might name many other passages that have nothing to recommend them to the average English reader.

This Twentieth Century New Testament, a translation into modern English, made from the original Greek, we take it, is the forerunner of other versions. We will not be surprised if some publisher soon announces the New Testament in the "Dialect of the Fans," then one in the Dialect of the Race Course, and one in the Dialect of the Slums. Anything to make money! And anything that will catch the eyes of those who are looking for something new will do that. Fads and far-fetched ideas please some folks.

THE POPE AND HOLY SCRIPTURE.

The Pope of Rome has recently appointed a commission to inquire into the tenets of the three exegetic schools of the Roman Catholic Church. Viewed from the standpoint of Romanism, this is all right. The Pope is the head of the church, the guardian of the faith, and, as such, must, of necessity, feel more or less anxiety over any tendency in the schools or in the priesthood to break the unity of the faith. Anything of the kind coming to his knowledge must be checked. In other words, if unrestricted investigation leads to heresy, then those who are guilty must recant, or be put under ban of the church.

But what puzzles us is the fact that the commission is authorized to determine "what parts of the Holy Scripture must be placed beyond discussion, and what left open to private opinion." True, the commission "is to be guided by the writings of the fathers of the church" in reaching a conclusion. But who authorized the fathers of the church to exercise censorship over the Holy Scriptures, even so far as to say what portions are beyond criticism, and what may be privately interpreted? One portion of inspiration is of as much authority as another, and no man, Pope or potentate, has a right to put one portion beyond discussion, and leave others to be fought over in the schools. The critics may sift and separate the additions and interpolations, but what is God's Word must be received. Notwithstanding this, it is an open book, to be studied and obeyed according to the understanding of those who read. Protestantism long since won the fight on this point, and while Rome may keep her sons and daughters from interpreting the forbidden parts of the Word, she can never fasten the chains on the people again. And occasionally some in her own fold will think aloud.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Millsaps College ranks high among the institutions of the South for the education of our boys. There is no reason why any Methodist boy in Mississippi should go outside the State for college instruction. Our Methodist fathers should sustain the school, and all our preachers should recommend the school wherever they go. The following paragraph we clip from a letter received a few days ago. It was written by a Methodist—one who is a scholar, and knows what he is talking about. Would that all our people in Mississippi shared his sentiments and his enthusiasm in the cause of Christian education.

The realization of what a prize they have in Millsaps College is growing among the citizens of Mississippi. No school in the State offers better facilities or better moral conditions. Board can be had very inexpensively—surprisingly so in some instances—and the general cost of living is very low. There are no temptations whatever to extravagances of any kind in the way of expenditure. Its faculty is composed of men who possess not only the technical scholarship, but also the well-rounded character that is not always found among specialists. Let us hope that the new decade of its history will see a growth along all lines similar to that of the decade which it will close in June.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

WHAT SOME ARE THINKING.

As the General Conference approaches the brethren will think, and some of them will talk. Much of what is said and thought will never come to pass. Now and then suggestions are made which, though they may never be enacted into law, are, nevertheless, practicable, and in the interest of economy. Take as an example the following paragraph from a secular paper, the editor of which recently interviewed one of our General Conference delegates. In conversation with a representative of that paper this delegate, a man of fine judgment, "expressed himself as favoring a consolidation of kindred interests of the church now working under separate organizations."

For instance, a closer union of home missions and foreign missions. The consolidation of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society and the Woman's Home Mission Society, of the Juvenile Missionary Society and the Junior Epworth League. And a close and vital union of the Sunday-school and the Epworth League. Also the consolidation of the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Our Homes, and of the Sunday-school Visitor and Epworth Era. As the editor of a secular paper, we do not claim to understand these matters, but from a general knowledge and observation of a multiplicity of organizations and publications, the above measures strike us as being very wise and desirable.

PERSONAL.

Rev. M. F. Johnson, of Carrollton Avenue, pleases his people well. He is making a fine start. He is a studious preacher, and looks well after his flock.

A note from Rev. J. R. Robertson informs us that he has moved from Pontotoc, Miss., to Victoria, and will take charge of Red Banks circuit, in the Holly Springs district.

We have had the pleasure of meeting Dr. S. S. Keener several times since he entered upon his work on Baton Rouge district. He is busy, cheerful, and speaks hopefully.

We acknowledge receipt of invitation to the marriage of Miss Sallie Smylie, daughter of Mrs. Sarah E. Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., to Mr. Norman Ferguson, Wednesday, Feb. 5. May blessings from the Father be upon them.

We deeply sympathize with our dear brother, Rev. C. M. Crossley, of the Mississippi Conference, who has been called to mourn the death of his beloved wife. She passed away Jan. 23, at Walnut Grove, Miss. We ask the prayers of the church in behalf of our afflicted brother and family.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor of Dryades Street, has taken hold of his work with energy and is endeavoring to enlist the young people, having organized "a Catechism and Bible Instruction Class," which meets every Friday evening at the church. This service bids fair to become popular and useful.

Dr. E. B. Chappell, of West End, Nashville, is interesting the young people of his church, and is drawing them in large numbers. Occasionally he sets apart a Sunday for them, and calls it 'Young People's Day." The secret of his success ought to be generally known. Not every church has a suitable Chappell.

Rev. L. F. Alford, pastor of Tchoupitoulas and Gretna, has not been in good health since coming to the city, but he keeps up and at work, and is hopeful of success. Prospects are fair, especially at Gonldsboro, one of his appointments across the river. We trust that with the advance of Spring he may entirely recover his health.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Jr., of Ruston, La., is just now enjoying a revival. Large congregations attend the services; Christians are being stirred to a more active life. At last account many sinners had been converted, and forty applied for membership. Rev. C. B. Strouse is assisting. Brother Singleton promises a full account when the extra services close.

We have a pleasant note from Rev. T. W. Dye, presiding elder of the Greenville district. He is well pleased, and doing his best. Brother Dye says: "This is a great country, and will, some day, be the garden-spot of the South, if not of the world. Our Methodism is well to the front in this Delta, and, doubtless, will hold her own, as she generally does, when she has a mind to emphasize doctrine and polity. Our preachers are in earnest in the work. They are capital co-workers."

We reprint the following complimentary notice, as copied in the Texas Christian Advocate, from the local paper of Kosse, Texas: "Rev. R. A. Burroughs, the new Methodist pastor, is pronounced by all who have heard him as being one of the most able ministers ever sent here by the Conference, and is regarded by many as being one of the strongest in the Texas Conference." We are glad to note this good account of our ex-Mississippi preacher. When the Texans know him as we do, they will esteem him for his ability and sound judgment, and love him as a brother.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

On Sunday evening, Jan. 19, the South Side (Meridian) Epworth League celebrated its sixth anniversary by using the programme prepared by the Board for Epworth League Day (Jan. 12). The session was an interesting one as well as profitable. Besides the rendering of the regular programme, as above stated, the officers for the present year were installed, a reading circle of some fifteen or more was organized, and in a short while will begin the course of study provided by the Epworth League Board.

The League Chapter of South Side is in a flourishing condition, as was demonstrated on the night of its anniversary. The officers are wide-awake, and every department is well looked after. The prospects for the future growth of this chapter are very encouraging indeed, and the pastor is expecting a great deal from this organization of young people.

A large audience attended the services on the above mentioned occasion, and all seemed to be pleased with the exercises, and some expressed themselves as being profited thereby. After the benediction was pronounced one young man volunteered to join the League at its next business meeting. The young people of South Side are true to their church and their Lord, and I have never had the privilege of meeting a better class of young people than we have here.

W. D. Hawkins, the president of the League, is a born Leaguer, and the chapter has shown its appreciation of his most efficient services by re-electing him their leader for the current year.

May God bless the League work everywhere!

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

In accordance with the action of the New Orleans Union Epworth League at the last meeting, I hereby appoint an Executive Committee, consisting of five members, to make arrangements and to appoint subcommittees for the State Epworth League Conference, which will meet in this city in April. They are as follows: Eugene T. Woods (chairman), Louisiana Avenue; M. D. De-Pass, Burgundy; John Meyer, Franklin; Walter L. Burdet, Parker Memorial; Mrs. J. Cohen, Carrollton.

Crowley District.

NOTICE.

While on the stocks undergoing repairs, I will discharge a duty laid upon me by the last District Conference. That Conference authorized the presiding elder to appoint a Committee of Five to select a place for the location of the district parsonage. I hereby appoint on that committee: Capt. Jno. N. Pharr, of Berwick; Hon. Crow Girard, of Lafayette; Hon. W. L. Doss, of Gaeydan; Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Lake Charles; Rev. F. S. Parker, of Crowley.

I suggest that these brethren get together as soon as convenient.

MAGAZINES.

Scribner's Magazine, for February, contains discussions of questions of the greatest national importance; short fiction by clever writers, beautifully illustrated; several art articles; and other matter, useful and entertaining.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews, for the coming month, is as usual filled with "Fun, Fact, and Philosophy." It occupies a place all its own in current literature. A student of the times can not well dispense with this monthly. The editorial department, The Progress of the World, The Record of Current Events, and the cartoon department, are largely concerned with live topics of international interest.

The February Century is to contain two articles, with illustrations, on the new scheme for beautifying the City of Washington; and another important feature in the same issue is A Visit to Mount Vernon a Century Ago, containing conversations with General Washington as recorded in the diary of a Polish poet attached in this country to the suit of Kossiuzko. The Century is one of the best magazines of the day. The February number will prove of exceptional interest.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies; a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Werlein Piano Club No. 2

INTRODUCING AND ADVERTISING

THE WERLEIN PIANOS

In placing the WERLEIN PIANO on the market, one month ago, in order to introduce and advertise it, we set aside 100 for that purpose—forming the WERLEIN PIANO CLUB; in other words, to advertise the Werlein Piano, we

Furnished Club Members $350 to $400 Pianos for Only $262.

No piano ever had such a reception, and we have found where WERLEIN Pianos have been used in a home they brought in other orders. In forming the Werlein Piano club we did not take into consideration the wide scope that could be reached from this city through the daily papers, and the Werlein Piano was put on the market by advertising, with the reputation of the WERLEIN HOUSE back of it.

We find in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi there are 249 towns with a population of 1000, 115 with a population of 2000, 45 towns have a population of 5000, and 21 with a population of over 10,000. In fact, in above towns there are over one million people, not counting the country and smaller places. All these people should know what the Werlein Piano is. Orders come pouring in for WERLEIN'S under the club plan, and at present writing about sixteen or seventeen members have subscribed over the 100. AT A MEETING of the PHILIP WERLEIN, LTD., yesterday it was decided to offer to the public in general, and ESPECIALLY to those not represented in Werlein Piano Club No. 1

Werlein Piano Club No. 2,

Of 100 Werlein Pianos for 100 Club Members at Only $262.

To introduce and advertise the Werlein Piano we saved in clean cash for members of Werlein Piano Club No. 1, $13,800, as follows:

100 Werlein Pianos, regular price	$400 each	$40,000
100 Club Members secured them at	$262 each	$26,200
Net Saving to Club Members	$138 each, or	$13,800

AND EVERY MEMBER IS SATISFIED. Many have written in the interest of friends to secure instruments under the club plan. For and on account of above reasons the company decided to offer Werlein Piano Club Number Two, and in doing so will state plainly that the factory can only furnish one carload per week—about fifteen pianos. Orders will be filled as booked, and shipped or delivered in the city as promptly as possible. The terms under the club plan for $350 to $400 Werlein Pianos are:

Cash or on payments of Twenty Dollars Cash and $1.50 per week (monthly if desired), 6 per cent interest. No discount for cash, except saving of interest. The only piano ever sold in the South at

ABSOLUTELY ONE PRICE.

We sincerely thank the public in general, and all members of WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER ONE for their confidence in the piano that bears our name. We will carry out every statement made in our announcements, and the WERLEIN PIANO will bear us out in every promise made in our endeavor to give you the most value for the money.

The books are now open for subscription in WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER TWO. Kindly place orders as quickly as possible, and make first and second choice as to woods—mahogany, walnut or oak—remit first payment, and order will be filled as promptly as possible.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

HAVE YOU RHEUMATISM? DO YOU HAVE BLADDER OR URIC ACID TROUBLE?

Pain or dull ache in the back is unmistakable evidence of kidney trouble. It is Nature's timely warning to show you that the track of health is not clear.

If these danger signals are unheeded, more serious results are sure to follow; Bright's disease which is the worst form of kidney trouble may steal upon you.

The mild and the extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle free, by mail.

Backache and Urinary Trouble

Among the many famous investigated cures of Swamp-Root the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speaks in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

DR. KILMER & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—When I wrote you last March for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, my wife was a great sufferer from backache, rheumatism and urinary trouble. After trying the sample bottle, she bought a large bottle here at the drug store. That did her so much good she bought more. The effect of Swamp-Root was wonderful and almost immediate. She has felt no return of the old trouble since.

Oct. 1901. F. THOMAS.
417 Best St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Lame back is only one symptom of kidney trouble—one of many. Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root are obliged to pass water often during the day and to get up many times at night, inability to hold your urine, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, catarrh of the bladder, uric acid, constant headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, irregular heart-beating, rheumatism, bloating, irritability, worn-out feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion.

If your water when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty four hours forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Swamp-Root is the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist. Hospitals use it with wonderful success in both slight and severe cases. Doctors recommend it to their patients and use it in their own families, because they recognize in Swamp-Root the greatest and most successful remedy.

To Prove What SWAMP-ROOT, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, Will do for YOU, Every Reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" May Have a Sample Bottle Absolutely Free by Mail.

If you have the slightest symptom of kidney or bladder trouble, or if there is a trace of it in your family history, send at once to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., who will gladly send you free by mail, immediately, without cost to you, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book of wonderful Swamp Root testimonials. Be sure to say that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

He Feared the Gate.

Late one stormy evening the old doctor was summoned to see a man who had been attacked with sudden illness. The patient proved to be Squire Joyce, whom the doctor slightly knew. He examined him carefully, and gave him medicines. Then he rose to go, smiling cheerfully down at the anxious face of the sufferer.

"You will find yourself better in the morning, I hope," he said.

"Yes. Stay a minute, doctor. I want you to be honest with me. I have had seizures like this before. Shall I have them again."

"It is probable."

"I want the truth—all of it."

"Yes, they will return."

"I may die in one of them—to-morrow?"

"Yes. Or, it may be, not for years. It is uncertain. Do not waste your life in anticipating them. We all must go through the same gate some day."

"The gate—yes! But beyond the gate—what is there?"

His eyes were on the doctor's face, full of doubt, almost of pain.

The two men were silent a moment. "What is there?" Joyce repeated, harshly. "You are a member of a church—a Christian. I have no religious belief. Tell me, for the love of God, what is there beyond! If I may go to-morrow, what shall I find?"

"I do not know."

Joyce did not speak for a while, and then gave a forced laugh. "I need your help more for this than for my disease. I'd rather talk to you than to a clergyman. You are a shrewd man of the world, and a good man. Sometimes I am greatly depressed, thinking of this darkness into which I am going. For thousands of years men have gone out into it, leaving loved ones behind, and not one has sent back a word as to how it fares with him—not one."

In the silence that followed the rain beat against the windows. There came a slight whimpering cry from without.

"You are an old man, doctor," said Joyce, turning on him. "You are not far from the gate yourself. Are you not afraid of what may be beyond?"

"No," said the doctor. "No, I am not afraid. Look here." He rose and opened the door. Outside, in the dark hall, lay a little fox-terrier, drenched with rain. He was crouched on the floor, his eyes fixed on the closed door.

"This is my dog. He has followed me through the storm, and has been lying outside the door, knowing that I was in this chamber. He never was here before. He did not know what was in this room. He did not care to know. I was in it, his master, whom he loves. He was not afraid."

Joyce looked at the doctor keenly a moment before he spoke.

"You mean—"

"I mean that I am like poor Punch. I am not afraid of the dark room to which I am going. I do not ask to know what is there. My Lord and Master is there. All these years he cared for me. I have been assured that in my hours of trial he has never failed me here. I sincerely believe he will not fail me yonder."

"But I—I do not know Him.'

"He knows you. I am authorized by the declarations of the Bible to say that his hand is stretched out to you. I reverently ask you to take it. You can accept him as your Guide and Teacher if you will. That done in sincerity, you will not fear the gate nor all that lies beyond."—Youth's Companion.

The Old-Age Habit

"For why should I look old, darling? Answer me that, now!" Mrs. Mullaly demanded. She had been Honora Costigan formerly. Mrs. Morris's loving and faithful house-girl; but that was twenty years earlier. Mistress and maid had been at opposite ends of the earth in the meantime, and the mistress, who had noticeably aged, felt almost a shock of resentment at sight of the plump and buxom Nora she used to know.

"Sure, I've had me bad times and me good times, like the rest of the world," Mrs. Mullaly went on, reflectively. "But, glory be! before the bad times quite finished me the good times always came again—me always leaving the door ajar to let them in, d'ye mind?

"I am older; I feel it sometimes in me poor back; but I'm not old. Whisper, darling, it ain't the years that go over; it's the heart that's inside that changes the faces of us.

"'Twas a consin of mine that teached me the truth of it, this long ago. She began to be old the day she was born, did Katie, and when she was fourteen, looking and acting twenty, 'twas a great help to her. But when she was twenty, 'I'm gettin' on!' says she. When she was twenty-five, 'No,' says she to Johnny Walsh, that came a-courting. 'I'm too old and settled in me habits to be marrying.' Then when she was thirty nothing would do her but to get wid the old women and talk of the times when she and they was young.

"So the heart of her went into the face of her. It did so! I mind when she was thirty about and me over twenty, we went together one day to a big new hotel to get work. A good worker was Katie. But the boss he looked us up and looked us down and asked his questions, and then says he, 'I'll give you a trial, my girl,' says he to me. 'But as for you,' he says to Katie, 'it's young, strong, lively women we want,' says he, 'and I'm thinking you're after mistaking this for the Old Ladies' Home, which,' says he, 'is in the next block.'

"'O-ho!' says I to myself at that. 'Am I going out to hunt for wrinkles and rheumatism before me own mother gets gray in her hair? No,' says I, and 'twas then I begun to toss me birthdays over me shoulder as fast as they came. They're all behind me, glory be! where I can't fall over thim.

"Whisper, darling," Mrs. Mullaly added, impressively, "old age is a bad habit, like drinking, and if ye give way to it ye won't so easy break it off. Sure, there's a new year every twelve months, but that can't make ye an old woman—never, darling, until ye're willin' to be!"—Youth's Companion.

Burning Books.

"How can you afford all these books?" asked a young man calling upon a friend; "I can't even seem to find spare change for even the leading magazines."

"Oh, that library is only my 'one cigar a day,'" was the reply.

"What do you mean?" inquired the visitor.

"Mean? Just this: When you advised me to indulge in an occasional cigar, several years ago, I had been reading about a young fellow who bought books with money which others would have burned in cigars, and I thought I would try to do the same. You may remember that I said I should allow myself one cigar a day?"

"Yes, I recall the conversation, but don't quite see the connection."

"Well, I never smoked, but I put by the price of a five-cent cigar every day; and, as the money accumulated, I bought books—the very books you see."

"You don't mean to say that your books cost no more than that! Why, there is dollars' worth of them."

"Yes, I know there is. I had six years more of my apprenticeship to serve when you advised me 'to be a man.' I put by the money, which, at five cents a day, amounted to $18 25 a year, or $109.50 in six years. I keep those books by themselves as a result of my apprenticeship cigar money; and, if you'd done as I did, you would by this time have saved many more dollars than I have, and would have been better off in health and self-respect besides."—Facts.

Heredity

A woman once visited an institution where homeless and friendless children found a home. Among the little inmates, she came to one to whom her heart went out, and she said: "This child I want for my own." "He is not for adoption," said the person in charge. The woman looked around, but saw no other child who attracted as this little one had, and she went away sorrowful. In a few days she came again to visit the child. One day she came with tears in her eyes, and said: "Why can not I have the child I want?" They told her then the story of the baby, and the utter depravity of its parents. There was bad blood in the child, and it would be a terrible risk to take it. The woman went away again sorrowful, but after three or four days returned, saying: "I have come for my baby. If you think he will be more likely to be a good boy and man, with my mother-love, and brought up in a Christian home, give him to me. God will take care of the rest." Her love prevailed. They gave the ill-born waif into her hands; she took him to her heart. Years have passed since then. Love has prevailed and conquered, and the little helpless waif has grown up to a faithful, honored Christian manhood.

There is a mighty power in love; the love of man can subdue and sway and rule a life; the love of a woman can ennoble and uplift a soul; and greater than these is the love of Christ.—Sel.

Towser's Failing.

"The poor dog is tired out," said Mary, as the wagon drove into the yard, and Towser, covered with the dust of the road, dropped lolling and panting upon the grass.

"'Tisn't the journey he had to take that's tired him," laughed the farmer. "He's used himself up by zigzagging from one side of the road to the other, and tendin' to everything that didn't concern him. He couldn't pass a gate without runnin' through it to see what was on the other side, nor see a hen anywhere along the road without feelin' called on to chase her. Every dog that barked started him to barkin', and everything that moved took him out of his way to find out what it was and where it was goin'. No wonder he's tired! But you'll find plenty of human bein's that are travelin' their lives through in just that same way. They ain't satisfied with the bit of road that's marked out for their neighbor's goin's and doin's, and take charge of no end of things that they can't either help or hinder. They're like old Towser; it wears 'em out. If they'd follow straight after the Master, and not invent so many extra cares for themselves, the road wouldn't be nigh so long nor hard."—Selected.

A good mother, when her only son was leaving the home of his childhood and going out into the great world, knowing that he was ambitious, gave him this parting injunction: "My son, remember that, though it is a good thing to be a great man, it is a greater thing to be a good man."

He who is rich for himself, laying up treasure for himself, is by so much robbing his real inward life, his life in and toward God, of its resources.—Henry Alford.

Rev. J. F. ROBINSON, L. E., was born April 23 1839, in Choctaw county, Ala. He joined the M. E Church, South, at nine years of age, and was converted in his thirteenth year. On Dec. 24, 1865, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, of Kemper county, Miss. This was a happy marriage, from which thirteen children were born, three of whom preceded their father to a brighter clime than this. In 1872 he was licensed to exhort, and in 1873 he was licensed to preach in Kemper county. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh in 1879, and in 1889 he was ordained elder by Bishop Galloway. In both these instances he was local. He supplied Philadelphia circuit in 1874 with great acceptability, both in the pulpit and in the homes of the people. In January, 1885, with his family, he moved to Rankin county, Miss., where he resided the remainder of his life. In 1889, '90, '91 and '92 he served Marvin circuit, known up to the recent session of the Mississippi Conference for a number of years as Steen's Creek circuit. While serving this charge he greatly endeared himself to the people of the various denominations in the bounds of the same, because of his fidelity to the church in all its interests. At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Port Gibson Female College, at the close of the session of 1892-93, Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor of Brandon station, was elected to the presidency of the college, and in July of the same year Bro. Robinson was appointed by the presiding elder to supply the unexpired term, which he did with acceptability. In keeping with his former record as pastor, he was diligent in all the duties pertaining thereto. Notwithstanding he was a member of this church, the people were glad to have him in the pulpit and in their homes as a pastor, ministering to them in spiritual things. In connection with his farming interests for more than twenty years Bro. Robinson had regular appointments, and in this it was his purpose to work in harmony with his pastor. He loved the church, and he gave evidence of this fact by his devotion to it at all times. He served in the capacity of steward and superintendent of the Sunday-school, and in these smaller, yet important, offices he was found faithful. It was my fortune to know Bro. Robinson twelve months, and in this time I learned to appreciate him for his real value to the church and community as a citizen and a Christian. He believed in the church going forward, and he was ready to put his time and means at the call of its demands. He was a noble man because he was god-like in his character. He will be greatly missed by the entire community, but the home where he was honored as husband and father will mourn his departure for many a day. His widow, though she puts her confidence in God, is sad and lonely in his absence, for she misses the strong arm upon which she leaned for nearly thirty-six years. Two children, who were devoted to him, have a legacy in his true manhood and noble virtues that will help them solve many a problem in life. His brothers and sisters will no longer have his advice and counsel as they were wont to seek it, because of their confidence in his judgment; but they will have in him a memory of an honorable life in all his dealings with his fellows. Bro. Robinson's last illness was of only forty-two hours' duration, and his impression from the first was that he would not recover. It was his purpose to attend the session of the Mississippi Conference at McComb, but at the time that he would have left his home for the train, his spirit was freed from physical encumbrances and made its way to the city of God. It was about noon of Tuesday, Dec. 10, 1901. On account of the absence of the writer at Conference, the funeral service, which was held at the M. E Church, South, at Brandon, Miss., on Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1901, was conducted by Rev. M. E. Melvin, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Thus ended a life of nearly sixty-three years, full of faith and service for the Lord. This good man deserved my love, and he had it; he loved me, and I knew it. I would commend his widow and eight children to the God of all grace, who is able to succor them.

ROAT. SALNY.

Midnight of Dec. 14, 1901, closed a life which had been both a blessing and a care to those who so fondly loved our darling, JOHN FRANKLIN EVANS, JR. A care, because of life-long affliction; a blessing, by his winsomeness, his native goodness. Love, which won to himself all who knew him, radiated from his gentle nature, and innate reverence for God and his service made him noticeable from infancy. Even thee, at evening-time, he would point to where the Bible always lay, thus plainly saying, "It is time for prayer." He never ceased to love the hour for family worship. Only two nights before his death he, as usual, "found the place" to read before our last prayer together. His intense suffering was borne without a murmur. The lonely heart had pined for his departed father, who preceded him only a little while; so, when the golden clasp of life was loosed, quietly our darling slipped from our embrace "to heaven with papa." On Sunday, Dec. 15 our precious boy was, by kind friends, laid to rest in "God's acre." As he lay in his casket, stilled by the sleep of death, we looked upon him, our last farewell. "Oh," thought I, "if the chrysalis is so lovely, what must be the freed spirit which, in the perfection of beauty, lives with Jesus in our eternal home?"

MAMA.

MONROE AVEN was born Oct 27, 1882 and died of pneumonia after an illness of six days' duration, Jan. 4, 1902. Brother Aven joined the M. E. Church, South, at the tender age of twelve years, and lived ever afterward so that as associate, friend or neighbor could say aught but the nicest and best about him. His devotion to and care for a stepmother and sisters was worthy the imitation of many men of riper years, and won for him the highest esteem of all who knew him. His thoughtful care and attention for the sick, afflicted or destitute of his neighborhood was a subject of general comment where he was known. No weather was too inclement, no night too dark, no day too warm and no journey too long for Monroe to go for nourishment, physician, or nurse. What is more natural and fitting than that such a life of spiritual devotion should close in joy and peace and the full triumph of a strong and living faith in his blessed Christ, who said, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die"? And such was the end of all that was mortal of Bro. Aven.

His pastor, W. B. PINSON.

Died at the residence of her son, F. M. Myers, on Bearhead Creek, in Calcasieu, La., Jan. —, 1902, Mrs. EUPHEMIA J. MYERS, at the age of seventy-nine years. Mrs. Myers was the widow of Dr. G. Myers. She was born in Hardeman county, Tenn., in the year 1823. She was united in marriage to Dr. G. Myers in Texas in the year 1838; moved to this parish about the year —, where her husband, Dr. G. Myers, practiced medicine a great many years. Of the children living there are three: Dr. H. F. Myers, F. Marion Myers, and Mrs. Cordelle Lyles. Mrs. Myers was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, for the past sixty years, and leaves a host of friends who mourn her loss. The silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the dust must return to earth as it was, and her spirit has gone to God who gave it. A loving mother, a dear friend has been summoned, and responded to the call. To the disconsolate and sorrowing we extend our heartfelt sympathy. God of the universe, unto thy hands we commit the departed spirit.

A FRIEND.

Died at Bond, Miss., Nov. 23, 1901, little KATIE EVANS, the youngest child of our dear brother and sister, Will J. and Lucy C. Evans. She was born the nineteenth day of January, 1900, soon after we had been assigned to the Brooklyn charge. Bro. Evans' home being a home for the preacher, we had watched this little flower as it entwined itself more and more closely around the hearts of the dear ones. They had learned to listen to the little feet as they patted here and there at play. They are stilled now; loving hearts are sad. The All-wise Shepherd has called, and the little lamb has gone into the fold. Her sickness lasted only a few days. On the morning of Nov. 23 her little spirit left its earthly tabernacle. May the Divine Spirit, with its loving-kindness, heal these sorrowing hearts, and again reunite them in a brighter and better world!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Tenderness does not mean weakness, softness, effeminateness. It is consistent with strength, manliness, truth, and bravery. It does not show itself alone in the touch, but in usefulness, thoughtfulness, considerateness, forbearance, patience, long-suffering. But, however it shows itself, it is as the bloom on the peach, as Spring showers on the earth, as the music of the angels stealing down on the plains of Bethlehem. You may not have much of this world's wealth to distribute, but you may give something better, and spend a useful and beneficent life, if you will practice the lesson of shedding round you the grace of human tenderness, in word and act, and by the spirit of your life.—F. B. Meyer.

THE LIQUOR PROBLEM.

Need of Continuing the Mighty Battle Against the Advance of Intemperance.

Some thinkers decry the present temperance agitation, claiming that if continued each succeeding generation will have the same unending battle against the effects of alcohol; whereas, if the effect of liquor was allowed to run its course, the people would in time become immune to it, and it would have little more effect on them than would water, and point to nations now temperate whose ancestors, according to history, were noted for drunkenness.

This solution of the liquor problem is not to be commended. Drunkenness is never a solitary evil; it is the parent of 10,000 evils, and by the time a people have become immune to the effects of alcohol they have brought themselves into a condition from which it takes centuries to recover, and by the time they recover they find that the demon of the still again begins to have its dire effect. We should not let alcohol have full sway in order that there may be a survival of the fittest, any more than we should let smallpox have full sway in order to destroy those subject to it. Time was when plagues devastated whole continents. The science of the time stood helpless before the destroyer, but modern science balks many of the scourges that once left ruin in their path. The scientific treatment discovered by Dr. Leslie E. Keeley, when applied, overcomes the plague of drunkenness. Total abstinence and the Keeley cure now and forevermore the effective weapons against the demon of the still. The avaricious man is hardly ever a victim of alcohol. It is nearly always the generous fellow. Why should we offer him a sacrifice to the alcoholic juggernaut in order that simple and easy-going people generations from now may drink their fill without getting drunk.

—John F. Cunneen, in Banner of Gold.

Lonely Homes

A home is never complete without children. Yet many homes are childless. Many wives are desolate for the lack of a child to love. Their lives are aimless—void of the high motives of motherhood. While barrenness is causing incalculable sadness and sorrow, it exists in most cases on account of some little female trouble, which Wine of Cardui would speedily set right. This pure Wine regulates the disordered female organs by building up the worn out nerves and regulating the menstrual flow. It restores the fallen womb to its proper place. By strengthening the generative organs, it makes pregnancy possible where barrenness exists. You can depend on

WINE OF CARDUI

Suffering women all over the land have been depending on it for seventy-five years. No more convincing proof can be given than the testimony of Mrs. Benson, who is only one of thousands of women to whom Wine of Cardui has brought a permanent cure. Many cases of miscarriage—that trouble which robs mothers of their hopes—have been avoided by timely use of the Wine. You are asked to try Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, its companion medicine. Nine out of ten cases of female trouble, barrenness included, yield to them. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

Vandervoort, Ark., April 2, 1900.

Last May I had a miscarriage, which was followed by flooding. I read your Almanac and my husband got me a bottle of Wine of Cardui and it stopped my flooding and restored my fallen womb to its place. Now I am cured after taking three bottles and have another to take which I got this morning. I am expecting to become a mother and Wine of Cardui will be my doctor.

It never fails, as thousands testify.

CURED AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Mr. W. H. Clark, of Atlanta, Ga., says: "I suffered severely with dyspepsia for 35 years, but thanks to Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy it has entirely cured me, and I am well again. It is the best medicine on earth."

Price 50 cents per large bottle. For sale by druggists. Six bottles for $2.50 or sent by express on receipt of price by TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY CO., 107½ S. Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

SAMPLE BOTTLE FREE.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I had been troubled with gastric dyspepsia for two years. I could not eat or sleep, was short of breath, and suffered from dizziness. I found no relief until I heard of R.I.P.A.N.S Tabules. After the first 5 cent box I felt the difference. When I had taken six of the 5 cent boxes I was able to eat very well, and to sleep, and the dizziness gradually disappeared. They are worth their weight in gold.

At Druggists.

The Five-Cent packet is enough for an ordinary occasion. The family bottle, 60 cents, contains a supply for a year.

Catarrh and Consumption

I have spent nearly 20 years in the treatment of the above named troubles and believe I have effected more permanent cures than any specialist in the history of medicine. As I must soon retire from active life, I will, from this time on, send the means of treatment and cure as used in my practice, Free and post-paid to every reader of this paper who suffers from these loathsome, dangerous and disgusting diseases. My treatment will positively give prompt relief and cure in the worst cases. This is a sincere offer which anyone is free to accept. Address, PROFESSOR J. A. Lawrence, 112 West 32d St., New York.

Attractive Women.

All women sensibly desire to be attractive. Beauty is the stamp of health because it is the outward manifestation of inner purity. A healthy woman is always attractive, bright and happy. When every drop of blood in the veins is pure a beauteous flush is on the cheek. But when the blood is impure, moroseness, bad temper and a sallow complexion tells the tale of sickness, all too plainly. And women to-day know there is no beauty without health. Wine of Cardui crowns women with beauty and attractiveness by making strong and healthy those organs which make her a woman. Try Wine of Cardui, and in a month your friends will hardly know you.

Glances at the World.

The general feeling throughout England and the British Empire, last month, was that the South African war was very near its end. There were many rumors of new peace proposals, and these were much stimulated by a mysterious visit to London of Dr. Kuyper, the prime minister of Holland, who was thought to bring certain overtures from Kruger and the Boer leaders. While almost all Englishmen, regardless of party, now agree that the Boers can not be accorded any measure of independence, it is the common view that they may wisely be granted very generous amnesty, with liberal financial aid in re-establishing their farms. More than one country would like to receive as colonists the tens of thousands of sturdy specimens of Boer manhood now sequestered in distant prison camps, chiefly in Ceylon, St. Helena and Bermuda. Whether or not England will be ready to turn all these men loose again in South Africa is a matter of conjecture. The past month has had its average list of skirmishes, ambushes, and sudden attacks, with losses and gains on both sides. General De Wet has been exceptionally active and successful in operations in the northeastern part of the Orange River Colony; but the Boers lose ground relatively from month to month, while General Kitchener's plan of campaign is continually restricting the area of active resistance. The Cape Town correspondent of the London Times reports that the Boers lost in the last half of 1901 a total of 11,543 killed, wounded, captured, and surrendered.—American Review of Reviews.

Admiral Schley's appeal to the President was made public a few days ago, but at this writing the President's answer has not been given out. Just what that answer will be, no one can tell. It is thought by some that in some of the non-essential parts of the trial the majority of the court will be upheld, while the main features, for which the Admiral's counsel contended, and which were sustained by Admiral Dewey, will be upheld by Mr. Roosevelt. Of course, nobody expects the President to decide otherwise than as he sees the right. But it will be strange, indeed, should he fail to see the matter in the light as presented by Admiral Schley. The people have been with the Admiral from the beginning, and wonder that high naval officers should persist in withholding from a brave and high minded man the honor that is so justly due him. In the meantime Admiral Schley has accepted invitations to visit different cities South and West, and everywhere he has been received by the people in a way to show that he holds their confidence and esteem. He is hailed everywhere as the hero of Santiago, but the vexing questions have not been mentioned.

A party called the National Liberal party was organized on Sunday, Jan. 26, at Cincinnati. There were representatives present from all parts of the country. The purpose of the organization is set forth in the preamble to the Constitution. It declares for "the separation of Church and State to the extent of abolishing chaplains in the army and navy, executive bodies and all public institutions, the taxation of church property and abandonment of Sabbath observance. The National Liberal party is the amalgamation for political purposes of free thinkers, and it is more distinctly political than the American Secular Union." So we have another organization in opposition to the church. A part of the platform adopted by these infidels we have seen advocated in one or two papers of an orthodox evangelical church. Maybe this move of open enemies will cause these papers to halt.

Negotiations are in progress with a view to the purchase by the State of Mississippi of the home of Mr. Jefferson Davis, known as Beauvoir, on the Gulf coast, about seventy five miles from New Orleans. The object is to turn the place into a home for old Confederate soldiers. The object is a laudable one, and no better place could be found for such a purpose. It is exceedingly pleasant on the coast in the Summer, and free from anything like intense cold in the Winter. It would prove an ideal home. It is understood that Mrs. Davis is willing to part with the home for such a purpose, and if the price can be agreed on, no doubt it will pass into the hands of the State, and be set apart for the object named. Mrs. Davis was in Jackson last week conferring with State authorities on the subject.

There are two bills before the Legislature of Mississippi designed to affect the liquor traffic—one to restrict its sale to towns of 500 inhabitants, and the other for absolute prohibition. Which one, if either, of these bills will pass, it is impossible to say at this writing. Reports sent out from Jackson indicate chances in favor of restriction rather than prohibition. The sentiment of strong prohibitionists is divided, which may kill both bills. The bill to restrict its sale to towns of 500 inhabitants and over would be calamitous if it carried with it the excellent local-option law of the State. Mississippi is overwhelmingly in favor of the suppression of the liquor traffic, and, no doubt, would prefer, as we do, prohibition to any tampering with local-option statutes. Let us have prohibition.

HOLDING THE FORT.

BY REV. M. DICKIE

The committee appointed to plan for the proper celebration of the twenty fifth anniversary of the Brazil Mission issued, as part of the celebration programme, an earnest, modest, and humble appeal to the home church, which, it is much to be feared, either passed by unheeded, or received but scant notice. Surely it was worthy of a better sort. Poor Brazil! Her set time, as far as the mother church is concerned, has not yet arrived, nor does it seem even near.

We feel hungry when we read of how the different Boards, as well as individuals, are planning wisely and contributing generously for the extension of educational work, the setting up of printing-plants, and the building of churches in other lands. This is as it should be, and we are glad of it; but when we remember that none of these good things come our way, it is not to be wondered at that we long for some of the crumbs. Does Brazil need these things? Of course, she does, and just as much as any other mission field. But we do not yet despair of being heard. The Brazilian Church still cherishes the hope that the ears of the home church will some day open to her urgent cries for help, and that she will yet receive from the friends of missions that attention and consideration which she justly merits. Meantime she is doing her best to "hold the fort."

The Brazilian believers are a generous people. Of them it might be said, as it was of the Macedonian churches, that "The abundance of their joy and deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality." Instance the goodly number of churches built, and under great difficulties, without aid from abroad. Instance the wonderful development of the matter of self-support, supporting, as they do, the majority of their native pastors. Instance how, so recently, and under great financial pressure, they made such a liberal contribution to the Twentieth Century Fund, really going "beyond their power," this amount to go to their educational work. Then add to this the fact that just now, although the financial crisis still continues, they have courageously set to work to pay off the embarrassing debt on their own Publishing House, and you will be ready to conclude with us that such a generous people and such a flourishing mission ought to be encouraged.

The twenty fifth anniversary memorial, or appeal, referred to the committee mentions a number of needs as being "the most urgent material necessities of our Methodism in Brazil." Amongst these there are three to which we wish to call very special attention. I quote from the appeal.

"1 Funds to secure a site and erect a suitable church-building in the city of Sao Paulo. It is recognized by all the workers on the field that the work in the city of Sao Paulo has about reached the limit of what can be reasonably hoped for in rented and inadequate premises. This is one of the most important centers of evangelization in the country, and to meet the demands and improve the great opportunity, we must have an adequate church-building. The native church is working heroically, and has already in hand a nice little sum; but some fifteen thousand dollars more must still be provided in order to secure the proper building suitably located.

"2. The carrying out of the plans already projected for the new building so greatly needed for Granbery College. One of the most important enterprises undertaken by the church thus far in Brazil is Granbery College. Education in a country where less than twenty per cent. of the people can read and write becomes an important feature of mission work. The fact that this school is for the education and preparation of young men for the ministry commends its claims to the whole church. The liberality with which the native church has contributed to the Twentieth Century Fund for education is well known to the whole church. What they have contributed goes largely to paying for the admirable site already purchased. It is imperative that the funds necessary for the creation and equipment of a proper building be secured at once. Perhaps the greatest need of the work to day is the preparation of a native ministry.

"3. The sending out at once of at least three new missionaries. The statistics and facts presented annually for your consideration will not have failed to impress you with the rapid growth of the work in this mission field. It is everywhere recognized that there is urgent need for more workers. The preparation of a native ministry is necessarily a slow process, especially so long as Granbery College remains so inadequately equipped for work. To maintain the work already in hand, and to respond to even a few of the many calls that constantly come from sections of the country immediately contiguous to our existing work, at least three more missionaries ought to be sent out at once. The new work recently taken over in Rio Grande do Sul must be provided for. We most earnestly urge upon you the necessity of sending out those men immediately."

IMMERSED THREE TIMES.

BY REV. I. L. PIEBLES.

Those who believe that immersion is baptism, and the only baptism, and also claim to be the only church of God, and hence have come down all the way from the apostles, and especially from John the Baptist, to the present time, should consider well their departure from the doctrines of their church, which claims divine authority for its acts. If their claim be true, they have made many departures from the faith; but we wish to call attention to only three of the many.

First, infant baptism, of which Benedict, who wrote a history of the Baptist Church, said, "From the time of Tertullian, through all the early and middle ages, no works are extant in opposition to infant baptism." (Benedict's History of the Baptists, page 135.) And let it be remembered that Tertullian lived in the second century after the apostles, and that he believed in infant baptism, but advised its delay, and also the baptism of young people and widows, because he believed that if anyone sinned after baptism, he was lost forever. (Tertullian on Baptism, chap. xviii, etc.)

The second departure is not to sprinkle or pour on water on the subject when baptizing him. Their church used to do that. That it did is evident from the writings of the following members of it: Tertullian on Baptism, chaps. v-xiii; Cyprian's 75th Epistle; Eusebius, Book VI., chap. xliii; and pouring is also recommended in the seventh chapter of The Teachings of the Twelve Apostles.

The third departure is from three immersions. Their church used not only to baptize by pouring or sprinkling, but also immersed three times before it was baptism. That it did is clear from the following writers in that church: Tertullian says, "After we disown the devil, his pomp, and his angels, thereupon we are thrice immersed." (Tertullian, Book IV., chap. iii.) Gregory of Nyssa says in his sermon on the baptism of Christ: "To what purpose are the three immersions received? By doing this thrice we represent for ourselves that grace of the resurrection which was wrought in three days." Gregory Nazianzen declared that Eunomius was the first to discontinue three immersions, and denounced him as a false teacher. Basil, of the fourth century, said, "In three immersions, and with three invocations, the great mystery of baptism is performed." (Basil on the Spirit, chap xv.) And in his 236 h letter he says, "It is impossible for anyone to be immersed three times without emerging three times." John of Damascus said, "For by the three immersions, baptism signifies the three days of our Lord's entombment." (Exposition of the Orthodox Faith, Book IV, chap. ix.)

Now, the church that came down from the apostles claims that three immersions was given by the apostles, for Sozomen, the great historian, said: "Some assert that Eunomius was the first who ventured to maintain that divine baptism ought to be performed by one immersion, and to corrupt, by this, the apostolical tradition which has been carefully handed down to the present day." (Sozomon's Eccl. History, Book VI., chap. xxvi.) What tradition? Baptized by immersion three times. Why have immersionists disregarded this tradition of three immersions since they are the church? Jerome said, "For many other observances of the churches, which are due to tradition, have acquired the authority of the written law, as, for instance, the practice of dipping the head three times in the laver, and then, after leaving the water," etc. The laver was a vessel that contained the water. Here we see they just dipped their heads under the water. So the church baptized by sprinkling, pouring, washing, dipping the head under water three times, and immersed three times. It also baptized infants by sprinkling, pouring, washing, and three immersions. All who claim to be the only church of God should continue to do those things that it claims to have received from the apostles of our Lord, and that will include infant baptism with the rest.

The action of the North Mississippi Conference, at its last session, on the question of temperance, together with the position assumed by one of our chief pastors, seems to have been a great bother to the good women of the W. C. T. U. at the present session of the State Legislature. It is pretty freely intimated that the Conference and the Bishop were fervent the legislation mapped out by the women, and that the action of the Conference and the views of the Bishop were paraded as favorable to the other side.

I am absolutely certain that neither the Conference nor Bishop Galloway meant to say or to do anything that would in any way hurt the cause or hinder the progress of temperance in this State. We are all perfectly well agreed as to the importance of legislation on this subject, and as to the need for a statute prohibiting the sale of liquors in this State, and yet we may differ widely as to what is the better, or best, thing to be done. Some of us would hate to see the present local-option law repealed, or substituted by some new and untried statute law. It is far easier to pass a law than it is to enforce it. A law can not, and will not, enforce itself. The law may be good, but the administration may be bad. The victory will not be won by statutory prohibition, nor by constitutional prohibition. Much would be gained in either way. The State, as a corporate body, would get out of league with this monster evil. As a citizen, I regret to see the State license evil of any kind, or to tacitly approve or permit it in any way.

It may be admitted that the resolution offered by F. A. Critz and B. C. Trigg, and adopted by the North Mississippi Conference at its last session, is somewhat hard to be understood. The wording of it is too complex to be clear to common people. It is very difficult to frame a sentence of one hundred and eighteen words, and make it clear and easily understood. I have to chop such sentences up, and serve them in short meter, before I can get any real good out of them. My mind chambers only one thought at a time.

If I get at this resolution right, the North Mississippi Conference—my Conference—wants the license to sell liquor limited to cities and towns of more than five hundred inhabitants. They want it sold only where there is police force to protect against disorder and crime. If the liquor is the cause or occasion of the disorder and crime, why grant license to sell it at all? I understand the women to charge the North Mississippi Conference with having put itself in favor of licensing the sale of liquor in all towns of more than five hundred inhabitants, and having a good police force. It looks so. Why sell the worst stuff where there are the most people? Why scotch a snake when one might kill it outright?

My home was a mile out, the weather was bad, and so I was not present when this action was taken. I did not know what the Conference had done until the women began to write to me about it.

I am just home from a trip to the Delta, and I found a number of gentlemen down that way who thought that whisky was essential to good health and successful farming in that country. If whisky helps farming, it is more needed in the poor hills than in the rich Delta. Liquor helps nothing and nobody except the devil and his cause.

The Conference resolved to "continue the fight for prohibition until every county in the State shall go dry." The Conference resolved to ask "the governor to request the Legislature to so amend the retail liquor law as to limit the issuing of license to the authorities of cities and towns of more than five hundred inhabitants, and with good police force." If this is done and continued, some counties will never go dry. They will build towns of five hundred and ten inhabitants, and have a police force to match.

Miscellaneous Notes.

The eighteenth session of the Florida Chautauqua, DeFuniak Springs, will open Feb. 12, and continue until the second of April. Full information may be had by addressing N. Colver, Sec., DeFuniak, Fla. We thank the secretary for a ticket to the meetings of the assembly.

Ministers and laymen representing a Protestant membership of sixteen million souls will call on President Roosevelt on Feb. 5. It is said they will assure the President that, right or wrong politically, the Protestant Churches will stand by the government. They will also tell him that sectarianism is dead. That would be strange talk for men who belong to any church.

Dr. Alonzo Monk, who got his start in life in Mississippi, is one of the foremost preachers of the church. He is a great worker, and creates enthusiasm among his people. He has his heart set on building a church in Atlanta, his new charge. On Jan. 19 he started out to raise $25,000, but the people were stirred, and in less than one hour he raised $28,350. Well done for Doctor Monk!

The white Baptists of Tennessee have 1,600 churches and about 150,000 members; have been working a hundred years, or more. The State Convention was organized twenty-five years ago, and yet Dr. A. J. Holt, the secretary of the State Board of Missions, says "the Tennessee Baptists are not as thoroughly organized for aggressive work for the Master as are the Baptists in many other States."

Mobile has recently celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of its founding. The city was the first capital of France's province of Louisiana, which in the early day included all the territory between the Alleghenies and Rocky Mountains. In the division that followed the war in 1762 63 all that part west of the Mississippi river went to Spain, and the rest to England. The wonderful development of the country is well known.

What Our Editors Say.

SWEAT OF BROW AND BRAINS.

The pastor of a city church, if he puts his might into his pulpit, taxes his powers to the utmost. A national senator delivers one set speech a session. Some solons never open their mouths. One speech does duty for a campaign for Congress or the State Capitol. The congregation of a "First Church" demands a telling and taking sermon twice on Sabbath, and there must be "ginger" enough on Wednesday night to keep every eye open. "Who is sufficient for these things?" The pulpit is but a fraction of the task. If a list of the things done in a day by a city pastor were printed, the wonder would be, When did he find time for his sermon? Statesmen pay men to collect the material and marshall it for speeches. The notables of the pulpit, like Spurgeon, Talmage, and that sort, with big salaries, have "readers" to search libraries for ammunition. Beecher and his class did none of the "pastoral work" that consumes hours. They had assistants. In their churches the lay element attended to many things done by the Methodist minister. In fact, eloquent and popular preachers can not be seen till late in the afternoon. We recall one whose "study" was not known even to his wife. "The Doctor is in his study, but where that is I don't know," said the sexton. . . . There is no vocation so testing to industry, genius, patience as the pastorate of a chief Methodist Church. The surprise is that we hear so few poor sermons. Only ceaseless practice, the daily training of the mind makes and achieves these rare powers and products. We repeat an utterance of the gifted Charley Hall, of precious memory, when a lad in the ministry and pastor at Farmville. He declared that on Saturday afternoons he envied the fellow who had sold his load of wood, and was going home for a rest on Sunday, when he was in agony as that day of dread drew near.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

THE REVIVAL.

Let the good work go on. Wherever it is possible to get the people together, and to interest them in the salvation of souls, let it be done. The severe weather that usually comes after Christmas need not put an end to the work. The devil uses the Winter months for some of his most aggressive efforts. We need not mention all forms or ways in which he strives to lead men and women away from religious life. Some of the ways are fair to look upon and pleasant to the appetite. Let us strive every month of the year for some good work. Laziness, or, perhaps, to put it in milder terms, indifference, is no more a part of God's plan than stinginess. Vary the methods of work, adapt ourselves to the changing conditions of place and weather, and let the people feel we are heartily in earnest in this greatest of all works, the extension of his kingdom.—Central Methodist.

PESSIMISTIC MOODS.

There is nothing that so demoralizes a man and unfits him for the duties of life as the habit of always looking on the dark side of things, counting up his disadvantages, magnifying the difficulties and underrating his own abilities and resources. Such a habit will produce a paralysis of faith and result in a state of chronic grumbling. Some Christians have reached that state. They take gloomy views of the condition of the church and of the outlook of Christianity. Looking backward, they tell us that the former days were better than these; that there is not as much piety in the church as there used to be, and in their gloomy forebodings they prophesy that the church, like a vessel dismantled by the storm, is drifting towards the breakers and is doomed to be wrecked. We have no sympathy with such pessimism. We are by nature and by grace an optimist. We could not be anything else without surrendering our faith in God. The hand of God is at the helm, with infinite wisdom and love directing the course of this world, guiding humanity to its true destiny, and by methods and plans too large and far-reaching for our comprehension. He is controlling all things in the interest of Christ's kingdom.—Southern Christian Advocate.

THE KEYS OF THE KINGDOM

The picture so popular to funny paragraphers, and to some serious writers, of St. Peter standing at the gate of heaven with a great girdle of keys, is a piece of deluded Romanism that has for its foundation a misinterpreted passage of Scriptnre. The Master committed the keys of the kingdom not only into Simon Peter's hand, but also into the hands of the other apostles. Whatever that committal may mean, to us it is another statement of the "great commission." If the gates of ignorance and superstition are ever to open to truth in heathen lands, the church of God must turn the key. Political parties will not do it; armies will not do it; commercial syndicates will not do it; literary and social clubs will not do it; brotherhoods will not do it. The responsibility is with the church. The keys are in her hands. Will she be faithful in unlocking that gate, and in loosening thereby the bonds of multitudes?—Midland Methodist.

THE DREAMS INTERPRETED.

BY MRS. E. M. HILLEBRANDT.

As I have had a little experience in dreams, and was very much startled while reading "Not All a Dream," I hasten to give my opinion as to its interpretation. It seems very clear to my mind that the second dream interprets the first, and means just what the message said. There is need of help in the places mentioned in the proclamation, especially as the Macedonian cry to "Come over" was so plain. It also means, by the figures going down the stream, to indicate the direction of the need, and that, although they have the Word of God, they need help in teaching and interpreting it. If the lady has never lived (as I do) right amongst the ignorant French that people the wilds of Louisiana, she could not conceive of one-half of their ignorance. I'm satisfied that the only way to teach them is by the method of Bible women, as in China, for they can not be reached in any other way.

I hope the dear sister will pardon me if I lay a burden on her that will be hard to carry; but I have had the same burden on my conscience so long that I should like some one to share it with me, asking God's help in doing something for these poor, benighted people. The regular monthly sermon delivered to the "faithful few" doesn't touch them; and I see nothing but house-to-house visitation that will do. If anyone has tried this, will they please give us the help of their experience, and please join us in praying for light, strength, and the ability to go out amongst these people and teach them the Way of Life? If God has shown the need, he will surely show the way. The prophecies concerning the last days are being fulfilled with such startling rapidity that if we are not careful, the Master will come upon us in a time when we are not looking for him, and "we shall be weighed in the balance and found wanting" Let us think deeply, and act quickly in this matter.

I am also a mother with little ones to guide, and have so little time to spare outside of my family that I can not do much, and, in fact, have not been able to accomplish anything as yet.

"CIRCUIT RIDER" AND BAPTISM.

BY REV HOUSTON ARMSTRONG.

MR. EDITOR: It seems that "Circuit Rider" is through with his series of articles on baptism, and now reviews and criticisms are in order. Controversy upon this subject will not down as long as men entertain such opposite and extreme views upon it. Extreme and erroneous views upon this subject lead to nitraism, intolerance, and much evil. I have been snubbed and given the "cold shoulder" all of my ministerial life by exclusive immersionists—our Baptist brethren holding that I am not in the church, and the Campbellite brethren teaching that I am not in Christ because I have not been immersed. I firmly believe that some of our immersionist brethren, who are accounted orthodox, so emphasize the water in their preaching and in their exclusiveness towards other churches that sinners become penitent under their ministry, and, believing that the water will complete their salvation, unite with the church, and go under the water, and come up unsaved, and remain so. Am glad that the mode of baptism has been so logically, historically, and scripturally discussed. All honor to "Circuit Rider." His work may be away out in the brush, yet he certainly has been to school, and I move his promotion, and request him to have his articles published in pamphlet form, that they may be scattered broadcast. I think he is in error in one of his statements. He says the law requiring us to immerse our subjects for baptism is not mandatory. I have always so understood it, and I can give one case to prove that I am correct. Rev. L. L. Pickett was located by the North Texas Conference because he would not immerse, and appealed the case to the General Conference, which body sustained the action of the Annual Conference.

LETTER FROM REV. C. A. POWELL.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference—

MY DEAR BRETHREN: In justice to myself, I deem it my duty, as well as my privilege, to give you my reasons for doolining to stay at Hermanville this year. The atmospheric conditions are not what the profession would recommend as conducive to the retention of physical reoperation already obtained. While the conditions are unfavorable to me in my convalescent state, they ought not to produce consternation, or even solicitude, in the mind of a fairly strong man.

It will, doubtless, seem a little peculiar to some of my old-time comrades, who know from whence I came, for me to be raising a cry about malaria. But those were other days, when the vital forces had not been taxed and tried as they have been during the past several years, when I was treated in mute receptivity to that kind of menn.

While my improvement in health is a marvel to myself and astonishment to my friends, it has not yet reached that state of permanency which would warrant prodigal waste, or stand the strain of forbidding surroundings.

My doctor (than whom I know of none other more astute), who has treated me for several years, firmly protests against my assuming any unhinging risk. He does not hesitate to say that such a course would probably be at the peril of all that has been gained by treatment and respite from the tension of the active duties of the pastorate for the past eighteen months.

A visit to Hermanville refreshed my memory about conditions, and settled me in my reluctant conclusion. The meeting of many old-time friends, whom I had loved and served in other places in the years agone, created a keen desire to stay with them.

Thanks to Bro. Weems, the presiding elder, whose brotherly discernment compassed the situation, and who cheerfully and readily consented to disengage me.

I write this information for all whom it may concern, that my action may not be misinterpreted, and I, myself, misunderstood. There is not a man in the Mississippi Conference to whom it ought to be necessary for me to say that I regret the necessity which I am fully persuaded justifies the irregularity.

With devout and unabated prayer for the continued prosperity and substantial expansion of the work of the church, I am,

Fraternally, C. A. POWELL.

REV. J. P. DRAKE.

A TRIBUTE.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE: Permit me, as a brother of another denomination, to say a word in regard to Rev. J. P. Drake, who has been called to his reward. It was my happy privilege to be intimately associated with him for four years, while he was stationed at this place, and while I may not have as clear an insight to his character as some of the brethren in his own church, yet, being thrown with him, and working side by side in the Master's cause, I was permitted to see something of his character and true worth as a servant of Christ. I learned to love him as a man, a Christian and fellow-laborer in the gospel. His pure character, strong faith, loyalty to his Master, and conscientious discharge of duty, were prominent characteristics of the man. He lived the gospel. His life was not a closed book, but an open volume, a living epistle, seen and read by all who knew him. No one could long be in his company without knowing he was a follower of Christ. He may have had his faults. Who has not? One thing he did have, and that is religion, pure and simple, and in his death the M. E. Church, South, has lost a good man, an earnest minister, and a faithful servant of Christ.

On the eve of his departure from this place I called to see him, and in bidding me good-bye he very feelingly repeated, with tears in his eyes, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

My association with him during his stay here was most pleasant, as it has been with all the brethren of your church. If our fellowship on earth is sweet, what will it be in our Father's home in the skies? "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Cordially yours,

C. P. COLMERY,
Pastor Presbyterian Church,
Edwards, Miss.

ORPHANS' HOME.

The Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, located at Water Valley, is an institution of the church, and is doing noble work. Brother Griffin, the agent and manager, has entered upon his duties. His heart and hands are full. We take pleasure in copying the following notice from the Coffeeville Courier:

"Superintendent Brewer visited the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, at Water Valley, last week. He was somewhat surprised to find so many pretty little girls and brave little boys there. D. Jones of the State University, was there also on the same day. They took dinner in the Home. They were much pleased to see the little fellows march into dinner; about thirty-two couples, all looking happy. The Doctor and the Superintendent stayed in the afternoon until Brother Griffin drove them off, the Doctor to the Methodist Church and the Superintendent to the graded school."

In a note to us Brother Griffin says: "We have now seventy one in the Home, and nearly twenty applications for needy and worthy children. Some of them we must take."

REV. J. W. BRADFORD.

Rev. James Watson Bradford, son of the Rev. D. P. and Emma E. Bradford, was born in East Feliciana parish, La., May 27, 1868. He was educated at Centenary College, Jackson, La. He came of a line of Methodist preachers reaching back a hundred years. His father is at present a member of the Mississippi Conference, and is stationed at one of the churches in Meridian.

The subject of this sketch was licensed to preach at Jackson, La., June 2 1888. He did some work in the East Texas Conference, and was stationed at least one year at Liberty. January of 1892 he became a member of the Florida Conference, and was sent to the Wauksenah circuit. In 1893 he served the Sarasota circuit, and at the close of the year, forced by the failure of his wife's health to transfer, he came to the North Alabama Conference. In this Conference he served the Fredonia circuit one year; Piedmont circuit, three years; Birmingham circuit, one year; one year in Anniston, and was entering upon the third year at Brookside when he was killed. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Fitzgerald at Ocala, Fla., Jan. 8, 1893. He was ordained elder by Bishop Galloway, Dec. 5, 1897, at Florence, Ala. It is to be doubted whether he served a charge without leaving the strong impress of his strong personality and of his progressive nature. At Piedmont and Brookside especially he was greatly beloved and admired. At the latter place he had done in two years a great work, and under God had made the Methodist Church a power for good. The people were delighted at his return to them for the third year.

He was one of the most active and energetic men I have ever known. He did a great deal of work, and did it well. He seemed never to be idle. He moved in a hurry. His was a quick step. He made up his mind in a little while, and at once undertook the execution of his plans. He was a man of varied gifts. There were many things he could do. His knowledge was extensive for his age.

He was neat in person and orderly in all he did. He had a place for everything. He was consecutive and logical in his thinking, and had a reason for all he did. He was not spasmodic and unreliable, but could be depended on to keep his promises. Because of small salary, he was sometimes unable to meet promptly his debts, but he toiled with all his might to free himself, and all obligations will be met. He was a man of deep piety, and was growing at the time he was murdered. His religious nature had deepened and broadened greatly in the past two years. He was not a mere nominal Christian, but a real man of God. He understood and experienced the life and power and genuineness of our holy religion.

He was a clean man. Those who knew him well never suspected him of any uncleanness. In a recent letter his wife said to me, "None knew so well as I what a pure life his was." He was transparent, and seemed incapable of a little, mean thing. He preferred to suffer rather than to be guilty of a low or ungentlemanly thing. In the last private talk I had with him, he said to me, "We have to do many things for Jesus' sake."

He was referring to unpleasant and disagreeable things. He loved his Lord, and wanted to be obedient to him.

As a man, he was fearless. He had convictions, and dared to stand by them. I doubt whether he knew from experience what fear meant. He was a noble, brave specimen of manhood. As his presiding elder, he grew on me to the last, and I loved and admired him. The closer I got to him, the more noble and manly he appeared to me. You had to know him to appreciate his real worth.

He was a preacher of striking gifts and marked ability. He had an ear for the beautiful and elegant. He always caught whatever was new and striking, or strong, in all he heard or read, and carefully stored it away for use. If he had been spared a few more years, I believe he would have been in demand by the biggest congregations. He was a delightful and soul-stirring preacher. The last time I heard him was last year at our District Conference at Hamilton, where he preached Sunday, at 11 o'clock, from the text, 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.' The congregation was greatly moved, and some of us will long remember the beauty, the elegance, and almost overwhelming power of the sermon.

One of the most beautiful traits of his character was his devotion to his family. He was married to Miss Laura Row, of West Feliciana parish, La., Feb 8 1891. He never tired in his efforts for the comfort of his wife and family. He was at the parsonage alone when murdered, his wife and children being at the time on a visit in Louisiana. That afternoon he had written a letter to his stepmother, whom he loved as a mother. During his twelve years absence from the parental roof, his rule was to write home at least once a week. He was affectionate in his disposition, loving his family devotedly, and being greatly loved by them. He was murdered just before dark on the evening of the eighth of December, 1901. He was shot through the head at the parsonage at Brookside, and died in almost two hours. He was never conscious after friends reached him, and never able to tell the particulars of the attack. Many believe he died a martyr, and will wear a martyr's crown in heaven. Noble, brave, gifted Bradford! How we loved you! God will take care of his wife and three little children, and in eternity, perhaps, he will let us understand why he permitted this cruel deed to be done.—Rev. J. F. Sturdivant, in Alabama Christian Advocate.

Members of the W. F. M. S. of the Mississippi Conference

DEAR SISTERS: Do we realize that we are fast approaching the end of our financial year? Only one more month of the year is still before us. Much remains to be done, and must be accomplished in a very short time, if we meet our obligations to the Board, and to our mission work in distant heathen lands. It is important that all dues from membership fees, as well as our Conference pledge money, be in the hands of our treasurer by March 10. The Contingent Fund and Conference Expense Fund are also of much importance. Some auxiliaries have failed to look after these matters. Let all societies in which these collections have not been made see that these funds are in the hands of the local treasurers without further delay. We can not afford to have our Conference society fall behind other Conferences in these matters. The W. F. M. Society is doing well in sister Conferences. May not we, of the Mississippi Conference, stimulate our society to a like condition? God has blessed us for many years, but we must seek to have still greater things at his hand, and must manifest our gratitude and faith by increased efforts to extend his kingdom throughout the earth.

Some of our best workers have been called upon to pass under affliction's rod. Our beloved president, Miss Addie Marshall, has suffered for months from injuries sustained by an accident which disabled her in early Autumn. Her mind and spirit are still one with us in the work, but physical weakness hinders her from her accustomed activities.

Our treasurer, Mrs. J. P. Drake, is passing through the "deep waters," having so recently been called upon to give up the beloved husband whose companionship and counsel have meant so much. Our hearts go out to her in tender sympathy in this hour of sorrow.

Mrs. Parker, secretary of Seashore district, has watched anxiously for weeks by the bedside of a beloved mother suffering from critical illness.

While we extend our loving sympathies to these dear sisters in their suffering and sorrow, let us remember that our own responsibilities are increased by that which takes them temporarily from the work, and let us each, by renewed zeal and redoubled activities, do all possible to us to supply any lack which might be felt.

May God's blessing be and abide in each auxiliary throughout the coming year, and may we work for him as we have never worked before!

Your sister and co-worker,

SALLIE SMYLIE.

A young wife once said: "If ever I am led to question my husband's devotion to me, I always look at the marks upon his hands and arms—the scars from burns received while carrying me in an unconscious condition from our burning home." If you question Jesus' love, just look through these memorial elements of the feast of the broken body and the shed blood, and remember that it was all endured that you might be redeemed.—Southern Churchman.

It is pleasant to think that the best of all service for others we can render even when unable to do any active work in their behalf. A "shut in" who can run no errands and lift away no burdens and speak no words of cheer to busy toilers and sore strugglers in the great world can yet pray for them, and God will send truest help.—J. R. Miller.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss.

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.

The Bible Teacher's Study Circle.

I have been anxiously awaiting the result of the movement set on foot at our last General Conference, and to-day we have it in part, at least, in "The Bible Teacher's Study Circle." If our pastors and superintendents will see to it that Circles are formed, and that teachers be urged—yea, required—to study the Course, it will not be long until the much-needed, long-looked-for better teacher and better teaching will be forthcoming. I would kindly urge upon pastors and superintendents the pressing necessity for organizing Circles. Let not a single school within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference be without its Study Circle. We can not afford to be behind in this matter. The books of the Course are remarkably cheap—one dollar per set of three.

Brother superintendent, if your teachers will not contribute the amount necessary to purchase the books, take a public collection and buy them. If they should still refuse to form a Circle and study the books, supply their places with men and women who will. Brother pastor, if your superintendents are not wide-awake to the importance of the Study Circle, and in hearty sympathy with this forward movement on the part of our Sunday-school work, admonish them kindly, but earnestly, and if they repent not, try to find men better suited to the responsible position of superintendent.

A Circle has been formed in Mer Rouge, my new charge, and eight sets of books ordered, and they have been received to-day.

The Sunday-school Board is ready to supply mission and needy Sunday-schools with literature. An order for literature endorsed by pastor or presiding elder, and sent to me, will receive prompt attention.

CHILDREN'S DAY AND DECISION DAY.

It is some time yet before children's Day, and yet it is none too early to plan for that occasion. We believe it would be a good thing if the three Conference Sunday school Boards would recommend that the day be also observed as Decision Day. As it now is, very few of our schools observe any day as Decision Day, and, consequently, much of their labor is lost that might be made profitable in soul-saving. There is inspiration and power in unity, and should all our schools observe the same day, we believe the good results would be increased tenfold.

Let the day be emphatically Children's Day—theirs to assist needy Sunday-schools, theirs to speak and sing the praises of Zion, and theirs in which to decide for Jesus Christ.

MISSIONARY DAY.

We are glad to see a revival of the missionary programme in many of our schools once a month. It has come to be the custom in many places to take up a collection once a month, and make no further emphasis of the day, while more than half of our schools do not even take up the missionary collection.

When the paragraph was placed in the Discipline requiring each school to be organized into an auxiliary missionary society, it was the intention and object not only to increase the collections, but to increase the missionary spirit and zeal of our schools. That is of vastly more importance than the collections, because where there is a strong missionary spirit, the collections will take care of themselves. And a Sunday-school with no missionary spirit will accomplish little or nothing in its home work.

Nearly all our churches take the missionary money collected in their Sunday-schools, and apply it to the payment of their missionary assessment. The original intention was to make the Sunday-school collection a surplus, and that is what it ought to be. Last year some congregations so used it, and we trust many more will do so this year.

Prevalency of Kidney Trouble.

So prevalent and deceptive is kidney trouble that it very often becomes well advanced before it is even suspected, therefore, it behooves all to be on the lookout. Should you be ill, or not feeling well, it would be wise to first pay attention to the kidneys and ascertain if they are the cause of your trouble.

A simple method of finding out if your kidneys are at fault has often been called to the attention of our readers through D. Kilmer's Swamp-Root advertising in the columns of this paper, and it is now repeated for the benefit of those who may be interested. Viz: Fill a bottle with urine and set aside for twenty-four hours or so, and if it shows a brick dust sediment or cloudy appearance, or if the urine is scanty or profuse, or if it is found necessary to go often through the day, or get up many times during the night, you may be sure your kidneys need attention.

After careful inquiry we find Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is remarkably successful in the quick relief and cure of the diseases for which it is recommended. There is hardly a drug store in the land that does not keep and highly recommend this celebrated preparation for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

By special arrangement every reader of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE may have a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root by mail, free, (if they have not already had one), by sending their address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

INDIANOLA, MISS.

Without any ado we were received by the good people of this place. Since our coming and entering into the work many expressions of kindness and appreciation have been shown us. Indeed it seems that a kindly, gentle and constantly blowing wind, from every point of the compass, has been turned towards the parsonage. While we shiver in the boreal blizzards, we flourish and thrive amid these refreshing zephyrs. I am now well into the work, and while things are not what they should be and as I desire they shall be, there has been steady improvement. If this can be held—and it can—we are victors in His name. Seven have been received into the church.

By the way, I see that State prohibition is to be—aye, is already—prominent in our Legislature. Train the ADVOCATE'S guns, and fire several broadsides on the few remaing hell-holes of our noble commonwealth, and thus encourage and urge our friends on to glorious victory. I stand with you on the deaconess matter. Already we have tried too much to ape others. God bless you.

Your fellow-laborer,
H. C. MOREHEAD.

CHESTER, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I am making this round on the circuit in the interest of the ADVOCATE. The people plead "hard times, and worse coming." I send several subscribers, and hope to send more before long. I become discouraged sometimes, but live in hope that a better day will dawn. We have had quite a time getting settled. Household goods were in transit more than a month, and we have been badly torn up by the storm that struck us just after Conference, and just got into the parsonage last Saturday, the eighteenth of January. We will have a severe struggle rebuilding our church. People are good to us, and all looks promising in the church. Bro. Lagrone did some good work for us the tenth and eleventh. Hope seed will spring up and bear hundredfold. Cordially,

H. C. EDMONDSON.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FOREST, MISS.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: The people at Forest have received me very kindly. We were met at the train with vehicles, and carried to the parsonage, where a sumptuous supper awaited. The store-room contained larder sufficient to start us off. The stewards here have already guaranteed salary, and beg to let them raise Conference collections. This is a refined, cultured people and the outlook is promising.

Bro. Mellen is busy all the time, constantly riding, preaching, and writing. The district which he serves is the hardest in the State, on account of the bad roads. The majority of churches are in the interior, which necessitates much traveling in buggy. The people here regard Bro. Mellen as a walking encyclopedia, and all hard questions are referred to him, which he answers.

Fraternally, JNO. D. ELLIS.

ROXIE CIRCUIT

Rev. C. C Evans, whose address is changed from Roxie, Miss, to Hamburg, adds these pleasant words to his request: "We have met with a very warm reception amongst the people of Roxie circuit. I think we have made a good start for a fine year's work. All whom I have met seem to be anxious to see the circuit come to the front. We hope to build a new parsonage in Hamburg real soon. Best wishes for you and the ADVOCATE."

UTICA MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I am entering upon my third year here with encouraging prospects. A new church-building at this place is nearing completion, and the good part about it is, there will be no outstanding debt.

It is my purpose to push the interest of the ADVOCATE this year. I am hoping to get all who now subscribe to renew, and a few new subscribers also. W. H LEWIS

THE BALANCE OF HEALTH

Is often very much against the wife. Her strength is undermined, she loses flesh and her energy and courage slowly leak away from her. Gradually the comradeship of husband and wife is broken up. At first he takes his solitary pleasures reluctantly, but later he hardly seems to remember the old days over which his wife in her weakness mourns daily.

Women who find their health failing, and womanly ailments fastening on them, should promptly begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It corrects irregularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness for about two years," writes Mrs. Emma Richardson, of Gose, Wayne Co., Ky. "Could not do my work part of the time. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and felt as well as I ever did. I have also used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for ulceration of the throat with good results and half of one bottle cured my throat when I could scarcely swallow."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, free, on receipt of stamps for mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1902

The best exponent of the Christian life is not the man who makes the biggest noise, and is the most conspicuous in the performance of religious duties, though he may be perfectly sincere, but the man who is nearest akin to Christ in spirit and example. We have known a few who made much ado, and attracted attention, but they were of little moral force in the community. None went to them for comfort in time of trouble.

A correspondent of one of our Northern exchanges says: "A recent incident at the White House has called forth such a protest and comment, on the case of the negro, from the Southern press, that all should now see the importance of strengthening our educational work in the South." That is to say, the comments of the Southern press make it necessary for Northern men to push their work of education in the South until Southern people are forced to accept social equality. The brother must think that the educational forces of the North are omnipotent.

The Roman Catholics of England, and in this country to some extent, are much exercised concerning the oath Edward VII. will take when he is crowned king. The oath does not require him to interfere with the Romanists in the exercise of their religion, but it does require him to declare false some of the cherished doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church. They are working to have the oath modified. Catholics have no just ground of complaint so long as they remain undisturbed. Besides, they should hold their peace until they become more tolerant of Protestantism. It is the boast of Romanists that Catholicism never changes. Why should they complain if the attitude of Protestantism toward Rome remains unchanged?

It is a little embarrassing, not to say humiliating, when an intelligent man stands before a large audience to expound and defend the tenets of his faith, one of which is, "The blood, heart, lungs, brain, etc., have nothing to do with life," and has to be carried off the platform on account of heart failure. Such was the experience of a lecturer a few nights since in New Orleans. The lecturer had overtaxed his strength before he reached the city, and when he went on the platform, felt a little nausea, but thought he would get all right after speaking awhile. Not so. His vital powers were affected, and he was compelled to desist. The Times-Democrat tells its readers there are several hundred more people in New Orleans much further from the reach of Christian Science than they were before they went to hear the lecture.

CONFESSION OF SIN.

"With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." This is the divine order. There is no other method by which we can obtain salvation. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." In this passage (I. John 1, 9) we have clearly set before us the ends to be reached by confession, viz.: the forgiveness of our sins, and the cleansing of our souls from the pollution of sin.

If these are the two objects to be attained, it ought to be easy to determine to whom we should make confession. And yet there is more or less confusion in the minds of people, even Protestants, on the subject. We sat some months since under the ministry of a leading evangelist. More than once he emphatically declared that if an individual was guilty of a sin, no matter what, there was no possible way of obtaining forgiveness, except by making an open confession of the specific sin. In confirmation of his statement, he cited two or three persons who were in great distress, and found no relief until they made confession. One was of an individual who had grossly sinned against another. In talking with the individual he discovered that there was some great secret sorrow. He urged confession. The sin was confessed, not openly, or to the church, but to him, and he said, "There was immediate relief." There was the essence of Romanism.

A soul in distress, under the influence and teaching of one in whom there is great confidence, can be persuaded to do almost anything. An individual reared in the Roman Catholic faith conscientiously goes to confession, and reveals the secrets of the heart to the priest. But who authorized any ordinary preacher to receive confessions, or any priest or Bishop to exact the secrets of the soul? We find no authority for it in the Word of God. As to Protestants, we are sure it is not conferred in ordination.

There can be no doubt that through the confessional Rome largely controls her membership. No doubt the priest hears much that is revolting, but the confession being made in secret, and sacredly guarded by him who hears it, no scandal arises. The individual who has confessed leaves, feeling that absolution has been complete. But how would it be if confession, either in Roman Catholic or Protestant Churches, of specific sins were made in public? The churches would be utterly abandoned; else become the schools of scandal.

Reconciliation between man and man is necessary, if differences have arisen, and to this end concession and confession may be required; but this is different from the case of one whose sin is an infraction of God's law, and has harmed no one but himself. There is no law that demands such a sin to be either openly or secretly confessed to men. The reason is plain. Men have no power to absolve from guilt or to cleanse from sin. God only can do that. And with this idea clearly defined in his mind, David said, "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight; that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest." David's sin, which he said was ever before him, was a sin against the family, and against the State, but it was primarily and supremely a sin against God, and he deemed it quite sufficient to confess to God and throw himself on the divine mercy.

The atonement throws wide open the door of mercy, and under the call of the gospel men everywhere are required to repent; and with it understood that repentance implies confession, as well as conviction and turning from sin, we ought to be satisfied when a sinner goes to the throne of grace and opens his heart to God. It is sufficient for us to know that if one confesses his sins to God, he is faithful, and will pardon according to his promise, and will cleanse the soul from all uncleanness.

THE PASSING OF THE EVANGELIST.

One of the leading Southern daily papers gives currency to the statement that "professional evangelists are in the depths of despair," many of them being without any employment. None are pressed with calls as they were a few years back. They are gone, we hope, never to return.

In expressing this hope, we ask our readers to bear in mind that we make a distinction between the professional evangelist and the preacher who makes a specialty of revival work in connection with pastors. We know good men who work in perfect harmony with the pastors, and not only so, but take pleasure in strengthening their hands, and always leave a good influence. Their converts unite with the church, and make useful Christians. Such evangelists are always welcome, and are entitled to love and respect.

We have known some evangelists to do more harm than good. They went from place to place at the call of citizens inside the church and out. Pastors had little voice in the matter. Evangelists, often perfect strangers, were given full control, and they used their authority to the full extent. Pastors were objects of ridicule, often of abuse. They seemed to be perfectly delighted if they could turn a point, even though it were nothing more than the point of a joke, against the pastors. We have known them to charge some very serious sins to the pastor, holding him up before the congregation as faithless to Christ and his cause. The day of this order of evangelist is over.

Since the influence of this character began to wane, there has been greater prosperity in the church. Not because a better class of revivalists has been developed in the regular ranks—though this, in a large measure, may be true—but because those pastors who have gifts for conducting revival meetings have been called on to assist the less gifted. Their work, while not so sensational, has been of a more solid character, and their converts brought into union with the church.

The professional evangelist's seeming antagonism to the church was fatal to the permanence of his work. They made a show of glorifying Christ aside from his church, which the Lord never intended. True, they did this under the pretense that sectarianism was detrimental to true religion, and must be lost sight of if souls were to be saved. This naturally influenced sinners who professed religion under their ministry to hold aloof from the church. Hence, though flaming reports were given of great revivals and many conversions, the churches were not strengthened. We call to mind one such revival. Hundreds were reported as having been converted, but not a church received a recruit—not even the Campbellites got a lift. It is a poor revival among unions forces if the Campbellites gain no members.

A regime of the sort mentioned could not last many years. It, or the church as an organized force, must cease. God will take care of his church. The gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Nor will he suffer disorganizing evangelists long to stand in the way. Let pastors, who love God and his church, take courage, and redouble their diligence.

CHURCH STATISTICS FOR 1901

The statistics of the churches for 1901, as compiled by Dr. H. K. Carroll, were printed in the Christian Advocate (New York), January 16, ultimo. Dr. Carroll has been doing this work for the Independent for many years past. He is regarded as a competent hand. On all sides we have seen commendations of his skill, and his figures are accepted as approximately correct. We rejoice in the good showing made by all our evangelical churches. We are particularly concerned for our own people, the Methodists.

The Methodist family is divided into seventeen branches, with a total membership of 6,005,435, including 38,935 ministers. The M. E. Church, South, is credited with 1,483,346, including preachers. The figures are also supposed to include the net gain for the past year, which is estimated at 8,790. Comparing Dr. Carroll's unofficial figures with the returns made to the Book Editor of our church by the Annual Conferences, we discover a net increase of only, 1,448, showing that the basis of Dr. Carroll's estimate of increase was incorrect by 7,342.

The certified returns of our church last year show 11,378 preachers, local and traveling, and 1,470,520 lay members—a total of 1,481,898. Dr. Carroll's estimate of the net increase of Southern Methodism for 1901 must have been made early last year, and on data furnished by small Conferences, or Conferences which reported small increase. He certainly did not wait to hear from Texas. The five Conferences in that State alone return a net increase of nearly 10,000 members. We have information which justifies us in saying that when the figures are all in for 1901, there will be shown a net increase of 30,000 in our membership. Until all the returns are in, we will rest quietly.

AN ERRATIC REFORMER.

It is given out as a sensational piece of news that Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, a minister of the Presbyterian Church, on a recent Sabbath denied the immortality of the soul, stating in emphatic language that "the Scriptures do not teach immunity of a soul from death." There is nothing new or strange in that; the startling thing is that Dr. Parkhurst should make such a statement. But even that ought not to startle the country. He has done a thing or two equally as strange and much more dangerous. For example: Dr. Parkhurst has publicly advocated the opening of saloons after one o'clock in the afternoon on Sunday. He advocated the measure in the interest of reform. The opening of saloons on Sunday in New York, or any large city, for that matter, would be a dangerous experiment; but preaching the liability of the soul to death is neither new, nor, at this late day, very dangerous. A whole community of believers has been at it a long time, and have succeeded in gathering less than 90,000 adherents. We are not trembling for the fate of the ark, notwithstanding Dr. Parkhurst has dared to touch it.

WE HOPE NOT.

Under the title, "What the General Conference Should Do for the Epworth League," a writer in the Central Methodist suggests that "It should keep intact the departmental work, and add to it a fourth, to be known as the Civic Department." We hope not. We desire very much to see the League increase in efficiency, but we do not believe it would be wise to enlarge the scope of its work. If anything, it has too much work on its hands now. It has more than can be worked to satisfaction and edification in many places, and for this reason, in such places, the League is regarded as impracticable, or a failure. We feel sure usefulness could be extended by subtraction rather than addition. We refer to the Literary Department—a good thing in itself, but wholly useless in sections where there are no literary people. And it is worse than useless in the hands of one or two, however well educated they may be, if they do not know how to adapt the conduct of the department to the limited attainments of their fellow-Leaguers.

In favor of the suggestion before us, it is said "Christian citizenship is a religious duty," and that a Civic Department "would interest our young people in solving the problem of municipal government." We do not deny the truth of either proposition, but we seriously doubt whether it would be proper for the church to enter upon a systematic course of study of that subject. Views of municipal government are as diverse as to its methods as of the State government, and quite as partisan. It might not be to the profit of the League to introduce a subject well adapted to produce partisan feeling and discussion.

A MUSICAL REVIVAL.

One of our much-prized exchanges informs its readers that "never has there been such a musical revival in the churches as is in progress at this time." We do not know whether the editor means a general revival, or a revival confined to the churches in the city where he lives. We presume it is local, as we have seen no notice of anything of the kind elsewhere. Certainly there is no indication of a musical revival down this way. We have fairly good music—quite as good as we have heard further North, and sometimes a little better.

The value of a musical revival depends altogether on the character of the music and the words sung. To stir up interest in the sort of singing we have been compelled to endure for years, and get the multitude to engage in it, would be a positive hurt. To go back to the old-time songs and tunes, and use them in connection with many of the new ones, we believe would be to the delight and edification of the old people, and at the same time have a good influence over the young. If the revival noted by our brother editor has had the effect of putting the soloists, with their operatic performances, out of sight, then we pray for a general revival in music. We mean some soloists—those that are paid to sing in two churches at the same hour. We would not care to see a revival of their sort of singing.

A NOTABLE EXCEPTION.

A good brother in North Mississippi sends us five dollars—two dollars to pay his subscription for 1901, two dollars in advance for 1902, and the remaining dollar to send the ADVOCATE one year to a deserving widow. This brother is a notable exception! Oh, that hundreds of our readers who are behind in their dues to the paper would follow this example! It would relieve us, and help us purchase a new dress for the ADVOCATE, which is so greatly needed. Dear brethren, hear the call!

Rev. M. A. Thurman, Vancleave, Miss., writes that "prospects are good for a successful year on the Vancleave circuit." We pray that Bro. Thurman's hopes may be fully realized.

BROTHERHOOD NOTICE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

After sending to the ADVOCATE the notice of the death of Brothers Jones and Drake, last week, news came through our secretary of the death of Rev. J. H. Holland. Three assessments in so short a time is unusual. Up to date there have not been an average of two assessments a year since our organization; and never, I think, but once before, as many as three assessments in one year. It will bear hard on some of our members to meet these assessments promptly; but will not the brethren of the laity help them? At all events, let no one forfeit his membership, for that one might be the next to pass away. Besides, it is due the family of each of these brethren, who have always paid their mortuary fees so promptly, that the amounts called for be sent in to the treasurer without unnecessary delay. May God bless the work of the Brotherhood, and comfort the bereaved family of each of our departed brethren! W. B LEWIS,
President.

Yazoo City, Jan. 21, 1902.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. M. Young informs us that his little son Wilbur, whose illness we noted a short time since, is still in Memphis unable to go home, but improving.

Bishop Galloway has recently spent some days with the churches of the Indian Mission Conference, in the interest of education. His services are ever in demand.

We had the pleasure, this week, of meeting Rev. H. E. Carter, our pastor at Slidell, La. He is an affable and intelligent young man, much interested in his work, and reports fair prospects for the present year.

We have received a tribute to the memory of Rev. J. H. Holland, of the Mississippi Conference, who recently died in California. The tribute is from the pen of Rev. W. P. Andrews, and will be appreciated by the bereaved brethren.

Rev. F. D. Vanvalkenburg, once a Southern Methodist, and a member of the Louisiana Conference, but now of the Gulf Mission Conference of the M. E. Church, was appointed Hammond at the session of the Conference held last week.

Rev. P. O. Lowery announces the death of Rev. W. D. Russell, which occurred at his home on Island DeSlard, La., Jan. 20, and was buried in the DeSlard graveyard. He was for many years an honored local preacher in our church.

We had the pleasure, last week, of an hour's conversation with Rev. D. E. Kelley, of Boyce. He was on his way home from Birmingham, Ala., where, for some time past, he has been detained on account of sickness. His wife is still there, not yet able to travel.

The Epworth Era, of last week, printed a splendid likeness of Dr. R. A. Young, now one of the patriarchs of the Tennessee Conference. We delight in looking at the face. It reminds us of the days when, as Missionary Secretary, he electrified thousands of hearers with his sermons and platform addresses.

Rev. B. F. Jones, presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, says, Jan. 30: "Matters on my district are moving on smoothly. We have been deeply bereaved by the death of two of our best men since Conference—Bros. R. J. Jones and J. P. Drake. Rev. L. Carley takes Bro. Jones' place at Crystal Springs, and Rev. M. L. Barton will supply Summit."

Dr. Jno. T. Crebbin, president of the City Epworth League Union, asks correction of the Executive Committee for entainment of the State League Conference. Instead of the persons named last week, some of whom could not serve, he gives the following list: E. T. Woods, W. L. Burdet, J. H. Meyere, F. R Higbee, and Miss Eddie Bently.

Rev. J. E Methvien, of Vernon circuit, Louisiana Conference, desires, through the ADVOCATE, to express his gratitude to the good people of his charge, who had the parsonage in readiness for his reception, "with fuel on hand, and good things necessary for the table." We heartily join Brother Methvien in his prayer, "God bless the people of the Vernon circuit, and may this be the grandest year ever experienced."

Preachers' Meeting.

With devotional exercises the regular meeting of the Methodist pastors of New Orleans was opened. Every pastor was present, and made a report of the work during the past month.

Bro. Drake, of Felicity Street Church, reported much-needed improvements on church property.

Pastor Dodson, of Algiers, spoke very encouragingly of his charge, especially his Sunday-school.

Brother Alford, of the mission work of the city, who has been in ill health since his arrival here, was present, and spoke of his work.

Bro. Jno. F. Foster, of Burgundy Street Church, reported one addition and 138 pastoral visits since Conference.

Rev. R. H. Wynn said his Sunday-school was better this year than last. Spoke of his League as a great factor in developing the spiritual life of some of his Epworthians. Reported one addition.

Pastor of Parker Memorial stated his church well organized, and an encouraging outlook.

The new pastor of Carrollton Avenue, Rev. M. F Johnson, made a very good report. He is gaining note as a pastor. Three additions.

Rev. F. N. Parker, of Carondelet, reported his church work moving on as usual.

Bro. Fontaine, the new pastor of Dryades Street Church, made a most encouraging report. Addition, one.

The pastor of Rayne Memorial, Dr. W. H. LaPrade, reported three additions, and the outlook for the work of his charge encouraging.

NOTES.

Rev. H. E Carter, of the Slidell circuit, was present, and made a good report. He thinks of building a new church on his charge.

Several of the pastors spoke of the good work being done by the Woman's Home Mission Society.

Pastor Wynn has held two special services during the month.

Some of the pastors held regular monthly Church Conferences, and have catechism classes.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster will lead the thought of the Preachers' Meeting next Monday, on the subject, "Is Christian Perfection the Central Theme in Methodism as Wesley Taught It?"

North Mississippi Conference Matters.

We have found the missing Journals. One was in the district parsonage at Durant; the other had been packed up with D. J. W. Price's books, and was at Cleveland.

I am very anxious to get our Biographical Record in good shape, and I write to ask the following brethren to fill out the blanks below, and forward to me for insertion in the Record: J. T. Cunningham, C. N. Terry, J. W. Price, J. W. Bell, J. H. Bass, W. M. McIntosh, J. C. Lowe, R. M. Evans, W. D. McCullough, W. G. Harbin, J A. Hall, B C. Trigg, W. M. Campbell, R. A. Clark, L W. Felder, R. P. Nohlett, T. M. Brownlee, J. H. Ingram, J. A. Goad, R. W. Evans, E. H. Jones.

Blanks to be filled out: Son of ———. Born ———. Educated ———. Converted ———. Licensed to Preach ——— Admitted on Trial ———. Received into the Conference ———. Ordained Deacon ———. By Bishop ———. Ordained Elder ———. By Bishop ———.

I would be glad to have a list of appointments filled by the first nine brethren, as the blanks are now unfilled.

The secretaries and editor of the Minutes have no easy places. At the late session of the Tennessee Conference $25 was appropriated for the purpose of having the Minutes recorded. Our secretary receives as his compensation for two weeks of very hard work the criticisms of his brethren and the scrutiny of the General Conference, and he pays his own bills.

Our Conference ought at least to pay the actual expenses of those who are trying to serve her interests. But you can't please some brethren; at least, I can't. T. W. LEWIS.

Morehouse Parish, La.

Although Morehouse parish, La., is considered the strongest whisky parish in the State, Wards 1 and 3 went dry on Dec. 30 without a single whisky vote. Notwithstanding that there were only one in the former and thirteen votes cast in the latter ward, it is thought by the Christian people to be prophetic of a complete prohibition victory in the parish this year, since not a single man in either of these wards was interested enough in the saloon to vote for it. No doubt many of our communities could now carry prohibition that could not have done so while the negro could be voted by the saloon men. P. O LOWRY

A Museum for East Mississippi Female College

We have begun to collect specimens for the museum at East Mississippi Female College, and believing that our friends feel an interest in the school, and are desirous of helping it, we suggest that they send us any specimens that they may wish to contribute, such as minerals, shells, reptiles (dead) birds (mounted), insects, pre-historical relics, etc.—in fact, anything that will be of scientific or historical value to students.

These will be carefully labelled with name of donor, date, location, and date of discovery. Help us out in this small way, and it will be appreciated. J. W. BERSON.

By Anointing with Oil—Ovarian Tumor Cured.

PITTSBURG TEXAS, AUG. 11, 1898.

DR. D. M. BYE CO., DALLAS, TEX:

This certifies that my wife, Mrs. S. W. Jones, has been afflicted for several years with something, we did not know what. She gradually grew worse and took medicine all the time. In the Fall of '97 she became almost helpless. Her physician informed her that she had an ovarian tumor, and that an operation would have to be performed to save her life. She was badly swollen. He said the tumor was about the size of a child's head. She was sixty-one years of age, and we did not think she could stand the operation; therefore, we sent for her children and relatives to consult together for the best. Rev. G R Bryce, of Waco, being a brother of my wife, was sent for, and all concluded it best not to have an operation, and just wait on her and let her die in peace. January, '98, I found an advertisement in the Texas Christian Advocate, printed at Dallas, Texas, saying that Dr. D. M. Bye could cure tumor by absorption. With but little hope of doing my wife any good, I wrote to Dr. Bye. He wrote me what he could do. I sent at once and procured one month's treatment. The first month's treatment did not reduce her size but stopped all pain. The second month's treatment reduced her to almost natural size. The third month's treatment reduced her to natural size, and to-day she is in better health than she has been for four years. The tumor is now almost entirely gone, and she suffers no inconvenience from it whatever, and is able to help do the housework, go buggy riding, and is enjoying life better than for years past; therefore, we cheerfully recommend D. D M. Bye to all ladies suffering with the same disease, and say to the public that we believe if it had not been for Dr. D. M. Bye, my wife would to-day have been in her long resting-place. We will cheerfully answer all questions asked us by those afflicted, by letter or otherwise.

P. S.—I am a member of the East Texas Conference, and I am serving the people on Musgrave Circuit this year. We live three miles and a half southwest of Pittsburg, Camp Co., Tex. REV. S W JONES.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

INTRODUCING AND ADVERTISING

THE WERLEIN PIANOS

In placing the WERLEIN PIANO on the market, one month ago, in order to introduce and advertise it, we set aside 100 for that purpose—forming the WERLEIN PIANO CLUB; in other words, to advertise the Werlein Piano, we

Furnished Club Members $350 to $400 Pianos for Only $262.

No piano ever had such a reception, and we have found where WERLEIN Pianos have been used in a home they brought in other orders. In forming the Werlein Piano club we did not take into consideration the wide scope that could be reached from this city through the daily papers, and the Werlein Piano was put on the market by advertising, with the reputation of the WERLEIN HOUSE back of it.

We find in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi there are 249 towns with a population of 1000, 115 with a population of 2000, 45 towns have a population of 5000, and 21 with a population of over 10,000. In fact, in above towns there are over one million people, not counting the country and smaller places. All these people should know what the Werlein Piano is. Orders come pouring in for WERLEIN'S under the club plan, and at present writing about sixteen or seventeen members have subscribed over the 100. AT A MEETING of the PHILIP WERLEIN, LTD., yesterday it was decided to offer to the public in general, and ESPECIALLY towns not represented in Werlein Piano Club No. 1

Werlein Piano Club No. 2,

100 Club Members secured them at .....$262 each.	$26,200

AND EVERY MEMBER IS SATISFIED. Many have written in the interest of friends to secure instruments under the club plan. For and on account of above reasons the company decided to offer Werlein Piano Club Number Two, and in doing so will state plainly that the factory can only furnish one carload per week—about fifteen pianos. Orders will be filled as booked, and shipped or delivered in the city as promptly as possible. The terms under the club plan for $350 to $400 Werlein Pianos are TRAINED NURSE CURED BY SWAMP-ROOT.

USED BY HOSPITALS --- PRESCRIBED BY DOCTORS.

To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, will do for YOU, Every Reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Miss Alice Brown, the well known trained nurse, is in a position to speak with knowledge. She was formerly with the St Louis Rap... Hospital and has had many trying experiences in her arduous vocation. She adds her valuable testimony to the thousands already received for Swamp Root. She said in a signed interview with a reporter of the St. Louis Star:

MISS ALICE BROWN.

"Although a woman in my position can receive plenty of prescriptions from physicians without cost, it was upon the advice of a well known West End Doctor that I began to take Swamp-Root. No, I will not tell you his name, for he might not like it. But all the same, I took it when I was run down from night work in the sick room. I was thin and yellow and tired even when I rose from my sleep. Swamp-Root gave me a relish for my food and cleared my blood from its stagnant impurities. Of course I do not praise Swamp-Root as a cure for all troubles, but it is splendid for the kidneys, stomach and bowels and relieves female disorders when all other remedies have failed to give relief. I know of many cases in the hospitals cured by this wonderful remedy.

Alice Brown

1519 Semple Ave., St Louis, Mo.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

We often see a relative, a friend, or an acquaintance apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness, or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's Disease.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the great kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Hospitals use it with wonderful success in both slight and severe cases. Doctors recommend it to their patients and use it in their own families, because they recognize in Swamp-Root the greatest and most successful remedy. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle free, by mail.

Which Thief?

"Oh, of course, I intend to be saved sometime; but there is no use being in a hurry about it. There is always a chance even at the eleventh hour. Remember the dying thief," carelessly said a young man at the close of a meeting when spoken to about his soul.

"Which thief?" pointedly asked his questioner.

"Why, I had really forgotten there were two. I mean the saved thief," was the reply as an anxious expression came on his face.

"Yes, one was saved, and is in heaven now; the other, who had an equal opportunity for salvation, is wailing in hell. What warrant have you that you will not spend eternity as he will, rather as the other?"

It was a word fitly spoken, an arrow that pierced the joints of the harness, and the young man was led to see the folly of procrastination, and that night was saved for eternity, through receiving the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Savior.

Thousands like him forget there are "two thieves." They remember the mercy of God that saved the one, while forgetting the judgment of God meted out to the other. Carelessly they wander on, hoping to be saved at last, but, alas! how many are cut off in sin and damned forever, to whom the gospel was often presented, but who, presuming on the patience of God, rejected it until "there was no remedy."

Which thief, reader, we affectionately ask, would you be like? We remember speaking once to a very refined and elegant lady on a steamer, who asked indignantly, "You do not mean to say I have got to go to heaven like the dying thief, do you?"

"Madam," we replied, "you do not have to. If you reject Christ, though, you will have to go to hell like the other."

And so we would remind the reader. The saved thief believed on the Son of God, and is with Christ now. The lost thief scorned a Savior, and is in the depth of woe.

You must be with one or the other for eternity.

"Because there is wrath, beware, lest he take thee away with his stroke; then a great ransom can not deliver thee."—Selected.

The Swan and the Crane.

There is an old legend of a swan and a crane. A beautiful swan alighted by the banks of the water in which a crane was wading about seeking snails. For a few moments the crane viewed the swan in stupid wonder, and then inquired:

"Where do you come from?"

"I came from heaven!" replied the swan.

"And where is heaven?" asked the crane.

"Heaven!" said the swan, "heaven! Have you never heard of heaven?" And the beautiful bird went on to describe the grandeur of the eternal city. She told of the streets of gold, and the gates and walls made of precious stones; of the river of life, pure as crystal, upon whose banks is the tree whose leaves shall be for the healing of the nations. In eloquent terms the swan sought to describe the hosts who live in the other world, but without arousing the slightest interest on the part of the crane.

Finally the crane asked, "Are there any snails there?"

"Snails!" repeated the swan; "no! of course there are not."

"Then," said the crane, as it continued its search along the slimy banks of the pools, "you can have your heaven. I want snails!"

This fable has a deep truth underlying it. How many a young person, to whom God has granted the advantages of a Christian home, has turned his back upon it and searched for snails! How many a man will sacrifice his wife, his family, his all, for the snails of sin! How many a girl has deliberately turned from the love of parents and home to learn too late that heaven has been forfeited for snails!—Selected.

Exaggerated Ills.

"I may not have achieved anything great in my life," said a woman the other day, "but I have brought up two daughters who never talk about their pains and aches."

"Maybe they haven't any," ventured a woman who enjoys poor health.

"Oh, I fancy they have their share," resumed the first woman, placidly. "One has enormous dentist's bills, and they are documentary evidence of a certain amount of suffering, don't you think? The other is anything but robust, constitutionally, but she is seldom ill, because she takes care of her health instead of talking about it. I don't think I have been an unsympathetic mother, and I fear I am not made of Spartan material; but when my girls got old enough to talk about headaches and toothaches and ailments, real, exaggerated or imaginary, I made up my mind to discourage it at once. I refused to listen to accounts of mysterious aches and sensations when I had reason to believe they were the outcome of too much introspection and too little exercise. Fresh air and occupation were the prescriptions for headaches and bad temper, and a bread-and-milk supper and early to bed was the treatment for other ailments. Real illness seldom comes unheralded, and when the eyes keep bright, pulses regular and appetites good, there is scarcely anything that can not be cured by witch hazel or a good sleep. We are a busy family, and there is seldom an hour of dreaming for the girls. They had plenty of pleasure, but it was active and jolly rather than leisurely. They never got into the Summer-piazza complaining habit, because they were always playing tennis, or sailing boats, or reading books. I suppose their education has been sadly neglected as far as fancy work is concerned, but the hours that most women spend over fancy work are, in my idea, like those hours after dinner which Thackeray says women always spend in discussing their diseases."—Commercial Advertiser.

Ways of Telling Time.

From our Philippine possessions has come an account of a primitive device for recording time which deserves a place among the long list of contrivances for that purpose. It is used by the natives during certain sports. They bore a hole in the bottom of a cocoanut shell, and let it fill with water. At a certain point it suddenly drops to the bottom of the basin. This calls "time."

Many were the plans for recording the flight of the hours before the coming of the clock. The most famous was the hour glass, which was made of various sizes, and capable of recording with tolerable accuracy almost any given interval of time, although seldom one greater than an hour.

This system of keeping time was so long in use as to give rise to the solemn warning, "As the sands in the glass, so our life doth pass." Certainly this is more picturesque than it would be to say, "Like the ticking of a Waterbury watch."

The burning of candles was another favorite device. Lines were drawn at different elevations for the fractional divisions of the period which the candle recorded.

There was also a very ingenious water-clock, which is even now occasionally seen in museums. The sun-dial, for marking true astronomical time, was much in use in early days. It told nothing in cloudy weather, and in our latitude would not be strictly accurate except on a few days in the year. Its accuracy at other times would be a varying quantity.

There is no surer test of an industrial civilization than the general desire to know the time of day. The late Henry Drummond told of carrying a watch to a great chief in the interior of Africa as a present, thinking it would be greatly prized. To the chief it was simply a mechanical toy. He cared nothing for knowing the time of day.—Youth's Companion.

Can You Drive a Nail Straight?

We fancy that at the above question one of our boys shrugs his shoulders, and answers: "What difference does it make if I can't? I don't mean to drive nails for a living."

Even supposing you are not planning to learn the trade of a carpenter, the chances are that a good many times in your life you will need to drive a nail, and there is no particular reason why you should not learn to do it well. The man who pounds his fingers and doubles the nail over, and then has to pull it out and straighten it, wastes enough time and temper to lay a sidewalk. And probably when he is done he has a poor job to show.

Between the right and wrong way of doing things there is all the difference in the world. There is a pleasure in doing any kind of work well, but nobody ever enjoyed making a "botch" of things. The boy who can not drive a nail straight will probably drive as few as possible. And if he gets in the way of thinking that this particular thing is done "well enough," even though it is done poorly, he may apply the same reasoning to more important things.

Can you drive a nail straight? If not, set about practicing, and gain for yourself a feeling of respect that may be new to you.—Young People's Weekly.

Don't Worry—Try It This Week.

Let no day pass without personal communication with God.

Begin each day by taking counsel from the Word of God, if but one verse while you are dressing.

Put away all bitter feelings and broodings over slights or wrongs, no matter from whom received.

Have on your heart some person or cause for which you are pleading God's blessings each day.

Let no opportunity pass without owning your Savior before others, and modestly urging all to accept his service.

Let no opportunity pass to say a kind word, do some kind deed, or at least smile upon those you meet. Do this, not affectedly, but sincerely "as unto the Lord."

Guard well the door of your lips, that no unchaste word, jest or story, no slander or cutting remark, no irreverent or untruthful statement, shall pass out.

Remember each day that Christ will surely come, suddenly come, quickly come; and, it may be, this day will determine how his coming will find us, as it must to thousands.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

People read infidel books and wonder why they are unbelievers. Why do they read such books? They say that to form an unprejudiced opinion they must read both sides. If a book is a lie, how can it be one side? Infidel books are not one side.—D. L. Moody.

OBITUARIES.

JOHN J. CAIN was born Nov. 26, 1827, and departed this life Nov. 27, 1901 at his home in West, Miss. He was married first to Miss Martha McClung, April 5, 1849. She died in November, 1862. He was then married to Mrs. Amanda Spencer, June 20, 1865, who passed away Sept 26 1889, leaving him in the gloom of sorrow. Though not physically very robust, yet by his prudent, systematic way of living, he passed his seventy-fourth mile post. He was emphatically a busy man. His was an active life, not that it was necessary in his old age, as he had, by industry and laudable economy, acquired more than a competency, but, having commenced life as he did, activity became the law of his being—to work in some way—and still he seemed to take life easy. In the work of the church he was controlled more by principle than impulse. In his religious life he was not very demonstrative; yet we have never seen him in a love-feast when he did not attest his fealty and fidelity to his Lord and the church of his choice. As his presiding elder for four years, we took sweet counsel together in the church, and in his ideal, typical country home. For many years he was the support and stay of his home church. He was a clear-headed, judicious, safe counselor in all the business of the church. Some have thought that, perhaps, he was too deeply absorbed in the things of the world. Those who knew him best understood better the philosophy of his nature. We give a statement, from Rev. R. M. Davis, his pastor for three years: "I regard Bro. Cain as a true, good man in every sense of the word, a good friend to the church and his preacher. He was sympathetic and spiritual. He was one of the most liberal and influential members of our church in his community." Also a statement from Bro. Watt Brock, of how toward for many years: "Bro. Cain was a high-toned Christian gentleman. Have known him all my life, and found him first in church and first in everything that was for the right. Have been with him in protracted meetings, battling for God against sin. Truly he was diligent in business, serving the Lord; ready to acknowledge his Savior anywhere. In business, in church work, and in the social circle, he was always the same Christian gentleman. His word was his bond." As I knew him, I can say he was diligent in the work of life, and to his own quiet way he was "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." It was a principle more than a sentiment with him. As is the case with us all, he passed through the shadows as well as the sunshine; he had his sorrows as well as joys. The angel of death visited his happy home twice, and left him without an affectionate companion to soothe his crushed and bleeding heart, and his children bereft of a mother's love. He was a member of the church fifty-four years, and was always true to his vows. We carried his body to Valder, his old home, where the writer preached his funeral, and we laid him to rest with his kindred, to await the resurrection of the just.

J. B. STONE.

SISTER ANNE WINDHAM, wife of M. L. B. Windham, was born in Noxoobee county, Miss., in 1834, and died at her home near Fairfield, Ala., July 19, 1901. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1873. Although other notices of her death have appeared in county papers, it is due her memory and her many friends among the preachers that her obituary should appear in the ADVOCATE. Of her early life the writer knows very little. She has been a member of Hebron Church more than twenty-five years. As a member of the church, she was loyal and true; as an individual Christian, she was quiet, unassuming, and gentle, yet fervent in spirit, strong in faith, abundant in works. She possessed a character that left its influence, strong and abiding, wherever it touched. I feel the simple truth is, to one could I know ever long without feeling stronger and more pure. Her piety was unobtrusive, but deep, steady, and constant "as the flow of a majestic river." Her home was, perhaps, the social center of the community. One of her chief excellencies was a desire to elevate the moral and social character of the young people. In her home she has cared for and reared four or five orphan children. Her friends often wondered how it was possible for her to undergo the toil and care incident to the care of four or five orphans, being physically frail. Her answer always was, "I could not have done it but for the help of God and a good husband." It truly can be said of her: Her home was her empire, and she was queen; her husband the enthroned king of her heart, her children and friends the prime ministers of her court.

S. L. POPE.

OTIS VINCENT PARKS, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Parks, was born near Cayuga, Miss., July 25, 1875, and died Nov. 15, 1901. He joined the Methodist Church at Cayuga in September, 1890, and lived a consistent member to the day of his death. He was a very quiet, undemonstrative young man; hence had little to say in reference to his Christian experience; but his regular attendance upon the services of the church, and his consistent life, are evidences that he was ready to go. He and Miss Pearl Anderson were happily married March 25, 1900, and it is indeed sad for them to be separated so soon by the messenger of death; but it is not for us to question the dispensations of Providence. God is infinitely good, just, and wise. The funeral services were attended by a large congregation, indicating the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. He was a good son, a kind-hearted young man, and a true husband. May the God of all comfort sustain the sorrowing loved ones! Otis will be greatly missed in the home, in the church, and in the community.

W. H. LEWIS.

On the twenty-third day of January, at 1 A. M., MRS. ZIPORA M. CROSSLEY, wife of Rev. C. M. Crossley, departed this life. Sister Crossley had been sick only a few days, and her death was a shock to our little village. She was a faithful, loving wife and mother, true to her family and her God. For two or three days before she fell asleep this good woman seemed conscious of beckoning from the other shore. Though suffering much pain, she was rational to the end. The consistent, exemplary Christian life she had led fitted her for the gloriously victorious death she died. Peacefully calm, with unfaltering trust in her Savior, in prayer and song she passed the last day of her earthly life. As she was crossing the river she raped in song, "Jesus, blessed Jesus." Sister Crossley leaves a grief-stricken husband and six small children, one a babe a week old. May the prayers of God's people be freely offered for Brother Crossley and his six little girls! Oh, how sad they are now! Home is broken up; mother and wife is gone. The parsonage which but a few short weeks ago rang with merry laughter and song is now silent and deserted. Brethren, pray for Brother Crossley, for he is sad and oh! so lonesome.

JOHN RUSSLE.

P. S.—The remains were taken to M Como City for interment.

MRS. NARCISSA ELDRIDGE (nee Hart) was born in Rankin county, Miss., July 20, 1835; was married to Mr. Oscar A. Eldridge, July 28, 1859, and died in Amite City, La., Dec. 31, 1901. Sister Eldridge was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, while young, and was a bright Christian to the day of her death. She was left a widow Aug. 15, 1863, with two little boys to raise, and these two sons survive her, and are both Christian men and officers in the church in Amite City. Sister Eldridge loved God, his people and his house, and when circumstances would permit, her seat in his house was occupied at the hours of divine worship. Owing to the nature of her disease, she left no dying testimony to the power of Christ to save. Her life, however, was for many years sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical. Her sons and their families, though in sorrow, mourn not as those who have no hope. They expect to meet her again. Rest, dear sister, till the trump of God wake the dead.

THOS. J. UPTON, Pastor.

MRS. MARTHA ALICE M. GEE, daughter of Bro. and Sister Robt. K. Thompson, was born in Lawrence county, Miss., Dec. 15, 1853, and died at her home in Collins, Miss., Dec. 20, 1901. She was married to Derry D. Magee, March 11, 1894. She joined the church in girlhood, and to the day of her death continued an earnest, devoted, consistent member. Sister Magee was of modest, quiet, retiring nature; gentle in her manners, sympathetic, kind-hearted. As a Christian, she was conscientious, devoted, dutiful, faithful. She made no enemies; all were her friends. For some years her health had been poor, but she was a patient, uncomplaining sufferer, and her "affliction worked for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." A number of brothers and sisters, together with her devoted husband, mourn their loss. They shall meet her again.

A Double Injury.

"When considerable quantities of beer and wine are taken frequently, it is not merely the alcohol in these beverages that is injurious, but also the temporary overfilling of the blood vessels, because that entire stream of fluids is obliged to pass through the blood. All of that superfluity has to be equalized by means of increased action of the heart. Now, it is true that a sound heart is furnished with considerable reserve force that enables it to respond to great demands on exceptional occasions; but there is no doubt that those who persist in making demands of that sort diminish considerably their capital in heart power. The consequences of such real overburdening of the blood vessels become especially manifest at middle age in the form of a weak heart, a condition we might term a strike on the part of the exploited heart."—F. von Birch-Hirschfeld, M. D., Professor of Pathology, University at Leipsic.

An Absurd Critic.

The temperance cause has received a strengthening through the absurd charges of a Dr. Reid in the London Lancet. The doctor declares that "natural law should solve the question of alcoholism," that wherever prohibition prevails inebriety grows, and adduces statistics which were evidently framed to suit his assertions. He cites London as an example of sobriety, declaring that there are only seven drunkards to the 1,000, while in Maine there are 42! These figures are too preposterous for repetition, did they not show the utter and willful ignorance that abounds concerning the evils of drink. While we doubt if anyone ever counted the number of drunkards in any city, London's notorious drink habits and Maine's abstemiousness are both too well known and too generally accepted for controversy. We have nothing to fear from such critics as Dr. Reid.—Union Signal.

G.F.P. GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA CURES WOMEN

FAINTING SPELLS,

Backache, Headache, Dizziness

are frequent results of menstrual disturbances, falling of the womb, inflammation, or any one of the score of diseases which afflict women of all ages. But they all soon disappear, and with them the cause, when G. F. P. is taken. It is not worth while to experiment with other medicines when a bottle of G. F. P. will convince you that it CURES.

MRS. ADA WEBB, of Pike Road, Ala., suffered in this way for more than three years. Her case is typical of thousands. She writes: "I suffered from whites, nervousness, fainting spells, bearing down pains at monthly periods, sick headache, etc. Of all the remedies I tried nothing did me any good until I began the use of G. F. P. It has cured me of my terrible afflictions and I have taken only four bottles. I can recommend G. F. P. very highly and think it should be used by every woman who suffers."

In many instances a single bottle of G. F. P. has cured cases that for years had resisted all other treatment. It is a HOME CURE for the diseases of women, which accounts for its widespread popularity and general use.

You can get G. F. P. from your druggist or dealer at $1 a bottle. If he does not have it he will get it for you if you will insist on having it and refuse to accept any substitute.

We Have It at Last

For many years we have been trying to get a Bible containing exactly the features which, to our mind, would constitute as nearly as possible especially for the use of preachers and teachers. We have contracted for a large number of a Bible which we believe to be the nearest to a perfect book we have ever seen. It contains the AUTHORIZED VERSION, DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES, SUBJECT INDEX, CONCORDANCE, AND MAPS. The type is long primer, self-pronouncing. It is 6x8½ inches, and only 1 inch thick. Bound in the best levant morocco, divinity circuit (overlapping edges), calf lined to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges. By reason of the large number contracted for we are selling this splendid Bible at only a little more than half its regular price.

Our Price, Only $5.00

Postage 20 cents additional, if mailed.
Patent Thumb Index, 35 cents extra.

Cures Weak Hearts.

Palpitation and other heart irregularities are nearly always caused by a weak stomach and a disordered digestion. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy cures weak stomachs, regulates the gastric juices, builds up the appetite and invariably cures palpitation, intermittent pulse, and other heart irregularities. For this purpose it has no equal. It cures all stomach troubles and insures good health and sweet refreshing sleep.

A GOVERNOR'S OPINION.

Governor Robert Taylor, of Tennessee, says: "I find Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy an admirable aid to digestion. It imparts a vigor and easiness of feeling which is very desirable. It is a first-class remedy for aiding digestion."

Price 50 cents per large bottle. For sale by druggists. Six bottles for $2.50 or sent by express on receipt of price by TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY CO., 107½ S. Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

SAMPLE BOTTLE FREE.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I had been troubled with the sick headache for years until I started taking Ripans Tabules. I have experienced such relief from their use that I would not be without them in my house. I find them good for sickness at the stomach and dizziness in the head.

At Druggists.

The Five-Cent packet is enough for an ordinary occasion. The family bottle, 60 cents, contains a supply for a year.

CONSTIPATION INDIGESTION TORPID LIVER

These are the great curses which afflict three-quarters of the present generation. Sufferers from either one or all of them must always feel miserable, and sooner or later become chronic invalids, useless to themselves and a burden and nuisance to friends and family. There is one cure, safe and positive cure which you can test without any expense. Our remedy is Egyptian Regulator Tea, a full package of which we will send you free and prepaid on request. Unless you find our claims are true, we must be the losers by this liberal act. Shall we send you the trial package, and lead you to perfect health and happiness? Address,

GENERAL NEWS.

It is reported that a man and his fourteen-year-old son have invented a wireless telephone that appears to work perfectly. What distance can be traversed is not stated.

A passenger in a street car, Chicago, was ejected because he gave a smooth nickel for his fare. He brought suit for damages, and was awarded the sum of $2 000

It is gratifying to hear that there is a probability that the Gillett bill for the prohibition of trade in intoxicants and opium in the New Hebrides Islands will pass the House and become a law.—The Standard.

According to newspaper reports, the weather of last week was the worst in the North and middle South that has been experienced for a dozen years, or more. For a dozen years, or more, we have been hearing the same story.

The visit of Admiral Schley to the South—Atlanta, Louisville and Nashville—and to Chicago in the Northwest, has demonstrated his overwhelming popularity among the people. All classes vied with each other in doing honor to the hero.

Much talk is going on about Miss Roosevelt, daughter of the President, going to England to witness the coronation of King Edward. There is no law against her going, but many are of the opinion it is not the proper thing. As she would not be present in any official capacity, there is no reason why she should not go.

The Board of Trustees of Carnegie Institution, founded in Washington City by Andrew Carnegie, and for which he has donated $10,000 000, met last week in Washington to discuss plans for the organization. Mr. Carnegie met with the Board, and expressed his purpose to turn the endowment over to them absolutely.

A young lady in Iowa sued the executors of a dead man's estate for $7,000, basing the suit on the ground that he had failed to marry her at the time set, and fixed another date, but that he died before the second date arrived. As she was his influenced, and not his wife, through no fault of hers, she thought herself justly entitled to part of his estate. The jury gave her $6.000.

A young man who understands printing, and is willing to work an average of four hours per day, can make his board and tuition at Centenary College. Write to Mr. W. F. Norseworthy, Jackson, La. I. W. COOPER.

A Boston lady, Mrs. Ellen Proctor, has left by will to Harvard Medical School $50,000 to be used to promote the study of chronic diseases. She also left $10,000 to be used in medical mission work.

At the Capitol.

I have just taken the last of two bottles of Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir for nervous headache, indigestion, with diseased liver and kidneys. The Elixir cured me. I found it the greatest medicine I ever used.

J. H. MENNICH, Attorney,
1225 F Street, Washington, D. C.

President National Bank,

McMinnville, Tenn., writes: From experience in my family and L mon Elixir has few if any equals, and no superiors in medicine for the regulation of the liver, stomach and bowels. Your Lemon Hot Drops are superior to any remedies we have ever been able to get for throat and lung diseases. W. H MAGNESS.

To Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta.

Just one thing: prejudice, keeps some women from using PEARLINE. They think, if it acts on dirt so strongly, it must hurt the clothes. Soap and rubbing act on dirt, and the fabric is rubbed away. PEARLINE loosens the dirt better than any soap and bundles it out with little or no rubbing, and no injury. 656

We have spoken as earnestly as we could about the laxity of divorce laws, and the frequent scandals in consequence. A limit seems to have been reached, and there are now signs of reaction. The reform has begun at the head—District of Columbia, Rhode Island, and New York. The Washington Post says: "Thank heaven that the turning-point seems to have been reached, and that the American people are waking up to the peril which confronts them. Even New York, a State whose conservatism in some respects has aroused public indignation, but which deserves credit for preserving its decent divorce law, has discovered that its lax matrimonial practices need reforming. It has, therefore, undertaken to break up the common-law marriage system, which has bred so many scandals by playing into the hands of the seducer of one sex and the blackmailer of the other. Throughout the United States may be observed omens of like purport. The change resembles in some respects the arousing of public sentiment against anarchism. The two interests are planted in the same solid ground of patriotism and common sense. As well strike at the sovereignty of the nation as at the sanctity of the home. Civil government is only domestic government amplified, for the family is the unit whose multiplication and organization make the State possible. The whole country can well afford to take a lesson from what the District of Columbia has done, and what the Governor of Rhode Island has advised that Commonwealth to do."

It seems never to have been doubted in well-informed circles that Great Britain in the end would wear out the Boers and rule their country. But the Boers have shown such courage, persistency, and good fighting qualities, that it has taken England much longer to accomplish the task than anyone expected. And the end is not yet. The Boers seem determined to fight on, even though they meet with extermination. And England is as fully determined to crush them as they are to fight to the bitter end. No power is disposed to intervene save Holland, one of the small European sovereignties, and even Holland has gone about it in a round-about way, having asked of England the privilege of sending a commission to South Africa to communicate with the Boer leaders, to point out the hopelessness of their cause, in order to induce them to treat for peace. But the well-meant offers of good Queen Wilhelmina have met rejection, the English authorities saying they must have overtures directly from the Boers. This means, perhaps, another year of war, or a longer period, and the sacrifice of hundreds of lives and millions of money. The poor Boers are destined to suffer.

There has been introduced in both the House of Representatives and the Senate a bill to promote the efficiency of the militia and other armed forces of the United States. This bill is introduced with the sanction and at the request of the War Department, and has been carefully prepared after consultation not only with officers of the regular army who have had experience with volunteer troops, but also with prominent National Guard officers. The measure has also received the sanction of the majority of the Adjutants General of the various States. Because of all this backing, the bill, which is essentially a measure to revise and reform the obsolete militia laws, should meet with little opposition. In addition to making provision for the training of the organized militia, the bill also provides for the use of the militia as a national force in time of war. The President is to have the power to call into service for the repelling of invasion, the suppression of insurrection, or the preservation of order, any portion of the militia that he deems necessary for a period not exceeding nine months.—New Orleans Picayune.

All efforts for reciprocity with Cuba so far have failed. President Roosevelt favors a measure of that sort, but the Ways and Means Committee of the House block the way, and a majority stand with the committee. We do not know what would be the result but for the sugar interests of this country. Those interested do not favor any concession to Cuba, because free sugar from Cuba, or only a moderate tariff, would prove detrimental to the sugar trade in this country. The sugar men here argue that the article can be made so much cheaper in Cuba than in the United States, that the Cubans can better stand to pay the tariff than the sugar planters here can to lose what they would were sugar admitted free, or at a lower duty than at present exists. For the same reason it is altogether likely that the annexation of Cuba to the United States would be opposed. Of this, however, we express no opinion. The question is not up now for discussion.

The effort of Mr. Crumpacker, of Indiana, to reduce the representation in Congress from the Southern States will result in failure. He has a bill before the House, and has been working at it for some time. He succeeded, last week, in having a caucus of the Republican members called, but the outcome was not encouraging. There was a division of sentiment. Some favored his bill, others preferred a "force bill" such as Senator Lodge urged a few years ago, while others, who were evidently in the majority present, preferred no action at all, believing it to be unwise to disturb and excite the country at this time. This, we take it, is an indication that there is no desire at all on the part of many Republicans to reduce representation, for they could do it if they would. They are largely in the ascendency in Congress, and can pass any measure they desire. It is well that they decline to stir up excitement.

GOOD STEWARDS.

BY "ALPHA."

The church has a temporal as well as a spiritual side. Its interests are the same. They are all-important. God calls men to devote their time entirely to the moral and spiritual upbuilding of his kingdom. But that they may do this most successfully, provision must be made for their temporal support If one ministers to others in spiritual things, it is proper that they, in turn, should minister to his temporal welfare. To meet the temporal needs of the ministry and the church, some business system should be observed. The different churches have different plans, and various officers to carry out these plans. In one there are the deacons, in another the elders, while the Methodists have stewards for this purpose. We do not think it is putting it too strong to say that the office of steward is an essential factor in Methodist economy. We do not see how we could get along without it.

Upon the stewards depends largely the success or failure of the church in many of its departments. As Aaron and Hur held up the hands of Moses, their leader, so the stewards are holding up the hands of their pastors. They have largely to do with the making of the church. They give tone to it largely, both financially and spiritually. They are the preacher's right-hand men. But for their faithfulness in looking after the temporal matters, the pastors could not give themselves fully to the work of the ministry. Good stewards that have liberal views and make liberal provisions for the support of the church are of incalculable value. They may truly be said to be the pillars of the church. A church that has good stewards will almost invariably prosper along all lines. Since this is true, let us inquire what are the requisites of this important official. Our Discipline, I think, answers this fully.

The first requisite is piety or goodness. "Let stewards be men of solid piety." This is by no means an unimportant requisite. Good men will exercise wholesome influence in many respects. Being good men, they will naturally be interested in everything that is for the good of the cause. Family religion, the success of the Sunday and prayer meetings, will be matters of deep concern to them. Of course, they will be heartily interested in the welfare of their pastors. It will be natural for them to be leaders in supporting the institutions of the church. It is generally conceded that goodness or piety is essential to a successful ministry. Let it be regarded also as our Discipline wisely suggests—that "solid piety" is the primary requisite of a good steward. The Methodist itinerants are constantly moving. They do not stay long with any church But the Methodist stewards often remain for years with the same church, and thus have longer time for their pious lives to impress for good. Let such as are called to the office of a steward appreciate it as an important trust and high honor. Let them strive to be men of solid piety; lights to their brethren. Let them appreciate the fact that they will need divine aid to meet this important trust committed to them.

Another requisite of a good steward which the Discipline recognizes is knowledge and love of the Methodist doctrine and discipline. A man, to be a good steward, should be sufficiently interested in the church to get proper literature and take time to acquaint himself with its doctrine, polity, and needs. Not only should he be acquainted with its doctrine and polity, but he should love the church. When there is real love for the church, one will cheerfully give of his time and money for its welfare. He will not feel that the time that he spends in looking after its temporal interests is thrown away. Nor will he think that the money he gives is unwisely spent. Nor will he give stintingly or grudgingly, but he will give liberally and cheerfully. He will do this because he really loves the cause. Such a steward will also impress this same spirit more or less upon all with whom he has to do. Loving the church himself, this love will be a constraining influence on others.

Since there is love for the work, such an one will endeavor to meet the third requisite which the Discipline suggests for stewards, viz: that they be men of good "natural and acquired ability to transact the temporal business" of the church. They will endeavor to use good business judgment and principles in looking after church finances. Instead of waiting till late in the year to adopt any plan for the finances, they will begin their plans early in the year. Instead of waiting till a day or two before quarterly meeting to collect "a little money for the preacher," and plead as a means of getting this little money "that the preacher is hard up," he will be seeking opportunities and improving opportunities all along to keep up the finances.

Let the stewards who read these lines remember that the comfort of the preachers and their families, and the welfare of the church, is largely in their hands. Let them covet to be good stewards of the manifold grace of God. Let them begin early in the year to get this work on their hearts, and push the temporal interests of the church as business men push business matters of a temporal nature, and I venture that the results will surprise them. And the inmates of many parsonages will be gladdened, many pastors will be better able to do the great work committed to them, and the church, generally, will be greatly blessed thereby.

AFFAIRS AT CENTENARY.

BY PROF. R. P. LINFIELD.

The most striking fact in connection with this session's work at Centenary is the fine class of students that we have. Probably sixty per cent. of them are Christian young men, and their devotion to duty is a continual inspiration to their professors. The average work done by the entire student body is unusually good, and the faculty maintains a deep personal interest in each boy. Truly, Centenary is an ideal place to put a youth. It is, doubtless, true that most normal boys face their crisis before the age of eighteen, and it is extremely important that good influences be near to guard them at the crucial time.

Prominent among our finest students are the members of the Senior class: Misses Mary Taylor and Beatrice Skipwith, and Messrs. G. O. Sanders, L O. Clarke, and E. A. Hoffpauir. One would have to travel far to find a more faithful five, and their thorough work during the monotonous routine of lectures and recitations is a sure prophecy of future worth when matters of broader effect shall claim their efforts. The last two mentioned above are contending for the honors. Mr. Clark is a member of an influential family at Rayne, La., and they have just cause to be proud of their boy. After graduation here he expects to go to New York City to take up a course in medicine. Mr. Hoffpauir is a Methodist preacher's boy, and is going to be an honor to his father's fine training ability when he gets an opportunity to show his real worth. He is president of our college Y. M. C. A., and is a spiritual leader among the boys The faculty is very proud of this class. The Commercial Department, also, will graduate a good class.

In this connection we might mention the unexpected success of this department. Prof. Reaser has conducted the work with such skill and judgment that he has succeeded in placing it upon a high, but firm basis. Let those who entertained doubts as to the possibility of success in conducting a commercial school at Centenary now acknowledge their lack of the prophetic eye. Centenary Commercial Institute is a gratifying success, and its future is assured.

A pleasing reproduction of our distinguished president's features appeared on the front page of a recent Era in the "college president series" now running in that enterprising journal. This suggests the observation that Centenary is a part of the educational machinery of Southern Methodism, and its past record guarantees for it a prominent place among the colleges of the South. Seventy-seven years of faithful and eminent service to the church and to society can not but secure for it that recognition that is always accorded worth and service.

Feb. 22 will be observed here with all its patriotic sacredness. On that date the boys will have an inter-society debate on the question of Cuban reciprocity. The speakers for the occasion are: W. H. Nelson and W. L. Doss, for the Franklin, and Ellis Cooper and E. A. Hoffpauir, for the Unions. These boys are fine debaters, and will render the coming debate interesting.

If anyone reading this should happen to know a pessimistic or down-hearted Methodist, please direct such a one to Centenary, and his love for the church and his faith in its living, moving purposes will surely be revived. We have great faith in the vitalizing power of work, and feel sure that even to view passively the energy here displayed at all times would serve to reclaim lost hopes and re-animate drooping spirits. Centenary believes in keeping everybody busy, and the opportunity of applying this belief is abundant here.

"TWO SIDES."

BY REV. E. E. LAKGFORD.

In looking over a county paper, which came into my home a week or two ago, I gleaned the following: "The Young Ladies' Euchre Club was delightfully entertained last ——— evening by Miss ———. The doors of the double parlors were thrown open, and seventeen tables were arranged for four-handed euchre."

And then, after giving names of those present and who won the prizes, it also states that "Misses ——— and ——— presided at the punch bowl.'

"The Married Ladies' Whist Club" of the same town was entertained in a similar way, with two girls yet barely twenty years of age "presiding at the punch bowl."

The foregoing is one side of the "from onee." In the same edition I read the letter Will Mathis, now confined in the jail at Oxford, Miss., wrote to his son. He refers to the fact that he is soon to become a victim of the gallows, and then denounces strong drink as the cause of it all. He also declares that women could suppress intemperance if they would.

We have before us a striking illustration of intemperance—its gay beginning, its sad ending. A play in two scenes, the first of which is enacted in the parlors of pleasure seeking society, the second in a prison cell. The one is pleasing, the other is horrible. Solomon tells us in Proverbs. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

May we all bear well in mind that Satan has from the beginning captured victims by deception! And to deceive, he must use pictures with "two sides," showing only the attractive side first. Let society, let the church, let us all "take heed to our ways."

Cedar Bluff, Miss., Jan 31, 1902.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At the late session of the Mississippi Annual Conference all of the notes and papers belonging to this association were turned over to the Board of Education of the Conference. This course was pursued because, in the judgment of the friends of the organization, it could be more systematically attended to than by the association as heretofore. Again, it was thought especially advisable, upon the ground of bringing our young ministers at Millsaps College more closely in touch with our Conference, and would invest the Board of Education with more authority in the matter of their training. By action of that Board all arrangements have been made for the transfer of such papers to them. And all parties having notes unpaid will find them in the hands of Maj. R. W. Millsaps, who is the treasurer of said Board.

We were gladdened at our last Conference by several of our young brethren who have been aided by the association making payments upon their notes. The notes held "for value received," and subscribed by friends, amount to an endowment out of which others now calling may be helped. The Master's exhortation, "As ye would," etc., appeals with great force to us all, and should more especially to those who have received at the hands of the association.

All who have gone out from us are manifestly in better positions than they otherwise would have been, and some are occupying the best places.

Brethren, let us not forget the appeal of those who call upon us for aid to-day, but "pass on" the blessings which have been ours from the hands of others. By a little timely aid many a young man may be enabled to fit himself for the work to which the Master has called him, because of a better education, and return in manyfold, not only in more satisfactory work, but in actual money as well. In conclusion, I would appeal to all who have given notes to this worthy cause to remit some amount, even if small, to the treasurer.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Dr. W. K. Piner, of Central Church, Memphis, delivered an address in commemoration of Gen. Robert E. Lee, which has been pronounced one of the finest pieces of oratory ever heard in that city.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Tennessee has voted by a large majority to exclude from the fraternity all members who engage in the retail liquor business. The order will take effect January, 1903.

Dr. H. M. Hamill, of the Sunday-school Department of our church, will occupy the office in the Publishing House so long occupied by the late Dr. Cunnyngham. Should the dear old saint's mantle fall on Dr. Hamill, he will be blessed indeed. A purer-minded man never sat in an editorial chair.

What Our Editors Say.

THE MEN BEHIND THE GUNS.

The preachers in the pulpit are the leaders in church work. They are the captains in command. But behind them, and often unseen, are the faithful stewards who look after the financial support of the church, and their co-operation with the pastors is often the secret of success that attends the ministry. They prepare and collect, and often actually furnish, the munitions of this spiritual campaign. Their presence at the regular service, at the prayer meeting, and in the Sunday-school, is the power that gives force and aim to the preacher's public deliverances. In all of our church work, they are the men behind the guns. If they are faithful to their duties, the ministry of the Word is largely encouraged and made effective. Then, behind these stewards are the people. Some of these are humble and unobstrusive in the service they render. But upon the faithful performance of their part of the work also depends the magnitude of the results to follow. Without their co operation, the stewards and the pastor can do but little in the accomplishment of the ends of the gospel. They come very largely into the success or the failure of church enterprise. Their prayers, their attendance upon the services, their contributions to the great cause represented, and their sympathy, go a long way to make the church of God a power in the world. And they deserve due credit for their part of the work, though they may not be heard in the forefront of the battle. All of these quiet agencies are essential to an efficient ministry and an aggressive church among men.—Texas Christian Advocate.

AN ERRANT UTTERANCE.

One professor of something—no matter what—in the neighborhood of Chicago, has recently gained a little temporary notoriety by giving out, through the Associated Press dispatches, the statement that the New Testament is made up largely of "poetic fancies." It is, therefore, not inspired, and need not be followed. We mention this errant utterance not to refute it, but that our readers may see to what lengths some of the "advanced" thinkers are going. This all comes of making perverted and fallible human reason the final test of a divine revelation. When reason can assume to correct the supposed "errors" and "traditions" of inspired men in one part of the Scriptures, it is only a matter of time when it will undertake to correct some other part of the divine revelation. Telling what the Bible is not, human reason will essay to tell what the Bible should be. Poor sinners will have little hope in a salvation poor sinners have provided. We need a God-given revelation as a warrant for the faith that saves. We have such a revelation. We would best stand by it, and bring men to believe and trust its unfailing promises.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE WONDERFUL BOOK.

Among the many triumphs of the nineteenth century must surely be reckoned the translation of the Bible, in whole or in part, into four hundred and thirty-two languages and dialects. Among these are one hundred and twenty complete Bibles, and one hundred and nineteen New Testaments. When it is remembered that during the first sixteen centuries, or previous to the Reformation, only twenty two versions had been made, and that during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries only thirty-two more were completed, or fifty-four in all for the eighteen hundred years, the magnitude of the work done in a hundred years will be the better realized. . . . The work is all the time going on. Faithful, studious, able men are bending all their energies to perfect previous translations and to make new ones. The Bible Societies are distributing the books in unparalleled numbers and with amazing results. Every country contributes to the triumph of the work. Instances multiply of those who, through simply reading the Scriptures without human help, have given up their idols and grasped the truth as it is in Jesus. There are no better missionaries than the agents of the Bible Societies who in almost every land are now giving their whole time to this one thing, and with most encouraging effect. . . . Facts abundantly show that no part of the work surpasses in importance the placing of the Word of God in the homes of the people. These leaves are indeed for the healing of the nations. Let them be scattered more and more.—The Methodist Review.

THE BUSINESS OF THE CHURCH.

The church failing to reach the masses in our great cities has made possible the zealous lodge worker and Salvation Army on the one hand, and the free peddler in small moralities and the wild vagaries, religious street fake, Christian Science, Spiritualism, Darwinism, etc., on the other. The one business of the church is to reform society by the regeneration of the individual. It is not a social club; its mission is to redeem mankind not by lopping off the offensive and sinful habits, but by putting a divine power within which worketh to the purifying of the soul. It is to win the world to God and its charter is God-given, and its inexorable demands as conditions of membership are the forsaking all to follow Christ and regard filial love but as hate when compared to our devotion and adoration toward him.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

THE CHURCH PAPER.

There is not an enterprise of the church that is not much benefited by the free circulation of the religious church paper—the missions, the collections, the revivals, church extension, education, Sunday-school work, etc. And yet, strange to say, we have heard ministers say, even within the last few months, that they never asked their members to take a church paper. How can they overlook the good they themselves would derive from the wider circulation of the church's best literature in their congregations, the increased appreciation of their efforts and a more liberal support? But enough of this subject at present. A wise man is he who sows seed that will bring forth as good a harvest as the regular church literature that is freely scattered throughout his work.—Central Methodist.

A HAPPY EXPERIMENT

BY REV W G HARBIN.

When Bishop Morrison read me out for Holly Springs, my first thought was intense and agonizing fear, lest the great work given me might suffer because of my inexperience and inefficiency. My next thought was to ask God to help me. I knew I needed help, and then gradually there came over me the sense that could such a body of Methodists as the congregation at Holly Springs be got to work together, almost any sort of person would do in the pulpit, provided he loved and trusted God.

As the lines of my work grew definite in my mind and clearly fixed, my impression that I must enlist the sympathetic help of every member of my church grew deeper and stronger. With this end in view I wrote a letter; such a letter as I felt that I would write to the most loyal among my people. I sent a copy to every member of the church, and waited prayerfully for the result. In a few days the replies began to come. Quaint letters from little children; strong, earnest letters from men who, with all the cares of life upon them, yet find time to serve God; sweet, tender letters from saintly women whose names are written in heaven.

The first reply that came, typewritten and business-like, with the address of a bank on the envelope, read in part as follows: "I wish to say to you that you have the sympathy of my wife and myself in your work. . . . My business is such that I am rarely at home until half-past eight or nine o'clock at night. We will be delighted to see you at our home. Now, do not let my absence keep you from coming. Come right along. . . . My wife and little baby girl will entertain you better than I could do."

The hearty cheer and good fellowship of this letter was like a breath of good, pure air after being shut up in a close room. Moreover, I knew that this man, who in his busy life had only dropped me a hurried nod in passing, would be easily a true, good friend. Perhaps, had it not been for that exchange of notes, neither of us would ever have understood.

Here is one from a boy: "I will pray for the church and sinners, and try to be a better boy myself. I am fourteen years old, and have been a member of the church two years." That boy and I are chums now, and he believes in my interest in him.

Next to it is a joint letter from two little girls: "Many thanks for the best wishes of the new year. You shall certainly be remembered in our prayers."

This from a girl whose life is truly hid with Christ in God: "I am happier when 'about my Master's business;' . . . and when you find that I can help you in his cause, call on me. It will give me pleasure to serve. . . . May God bless all you do in his name, and may you have the co-operation of the people!"

This is different, but it brought me keener joy, for in it was the cry of a weary heart that I could help by bringing back to Christ. It came from a woman going blind to her visions. "I am not the joyous Christian I once was. . . . I once possessed the pearl of great price. But I was not able to bear the severe tests that came; . . . the blessing gradually left me. . . . O, I want Christ crowned within my soul, never to leave me again."

These words from one who has but lately found the Lord were cheering: "In every way that I can assist you in your work, I will be glad to do so. There is little I can do, but I am willing to prayerfully make the effort. . . . God bless you in all your efforts for him."

These are but a few. There are many more, and each has a message of its own—a sweetness and a fragrance that will outlast the years, and be good to remember in heaven. The membership has been drawn together by this means more than by months of work. My pastoral work will be carried into the hearts of my people. Certainly God's Spirit was in the thought, and it came on the wings of prayer.

NEW AND OLD TRANSLATIONS.

BY REV. J. W. CUNNINGHAM

I have no objection to your criticisms on the Twentieth Century version of the New Testament. I like the Old Version in common use better than the new one of 1881. John Wesley's translation, on which he wrote his notes on the New Testament, I prefer to the New Version. Here are three versions of a passage in the experience of St. Paul as related to King Agrippa (Acts xxvi, 18,): "That they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me." (Old Version)

"That they may receive remission of sins and an inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith in me." (New Version, 1881)

"That they may receive through faith that is in me, forgiveness of sins, and an inheritance among them that are sanctified."

In the Old Version a comma (,) is placed after sins; in the New Version that is omitted. Wesley has the word "through," which is not in either of the others, and he closes with "them that are sanctified."

Punctuation in the Scriptures is a human invention, and may be correct or incorrect. Matthew Henry was an English commentator, who died in the midst of his work just when he had completed his notes on the Acts of the Apostles. In the passage quoted he inserted a comma after sins, and another after sanctified, thus making "forgiveness of sins by faith" instead of "sanctified by faith," as the punctuation in the Old Version seems to have it. Wesley's method appears to be like that of Henry, by his reconstruction and punctuation of the passage.

This week, before seeing the ADVOCATE'S article on the Twentieth Century version, I saw in a large book in the St. Louis Public Library six English translations of the New Testament in parallel columns. They were Wiclif, A. D. 1138; Tyndale, 1534; Cranmer, 1539; Geneva, 1557; Rhemish, 1582; King James, 1611. One who has never seen the book would be astonished at what he may find therein. Wiclif represents Zacharias as saying, "Serue to hym in holynesse and riytnisnesse bifor hym in alle oure daies." (Luke i, 74) Peter is represented as saying to the wondering people, 'What bi holden ye us as bi oure virtu, ether power, we maden this man for to walke." Tyndale says, "to goo." (See Acts iii, 12) Some people could almost read Wiclif's "Lord's Prayer" without knowing what was meant. It took nearly five hundred years and four intermediate translations to enable the King James' translators to bring out the version of 1611, which is printed as it is supposed to have come from the translators; but I discovered differences from the Old Version in common use now, mostly in the spelling of words.

It occurs to me that the substitution in the Twentieth Century book of the word "senators" for "elders" was an absurdity. "Elders" is more than fifty times in our old translation. "Senator" is not once there. "Senate" is there once, and there refers to the Jewish Sanhedrim, and has no reference to anything in Christianity. If the Twentieth Century version is to have a run among Methodists, we may hear from preachers and people facetious references to "local senators," "pastoral senators," and "presiding senators;" and local elders, traveling elders and Doctors of Divinity may be retired. These "simple"-minded Greek and English twentieth century scholars may have done, or will do, Methodism much harm with their senatorial fabrication.

RICH!

BY REV. J. I. HOFFPAUIR.

Who? Not this writer, but the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of Jan. 30, 1902, just to hand, is rich. What could be more timely than Dr. Boswell's editorial, 'A New Version?" Right you are, Doctor; the "Old" is better, the "New" is tame.

Here give me space to advise the young preachers. Read the "Old," the "Authorized Version," until perfectly familiar with every verse and word, and its entire phraseology; then get the "New." You will be "getting along in years" then, and it will not hurt you.

I saw one young brother, who had just been admitted on trial at the late session of the Louisiana Conference, purchase the "New," the "Twentieth Century New Testament." Some will commend him for so doing. I have serious doubts as to its being the best thing for him.

Then there is that sensible article, "Deaconesses Not Needed," written by "A Woman." "'Wife' and 'mother' are holy words, and to her the greatest and grandest of all possibilities is to create a true home, where she can reign in the hearts of husband and children as queen." Blessings on that woman. Tell her to write some more "on that line." Write it large; make it plain. Not "Deaconesses," but 'Wife, Mother, Home."

Bro. Sonrlock's timely and unanswerable article on "Dancing" is to be commended and recommended to the thoughtful perusal of our entire membership.

I notice last Bro. Van Valkenburg's just tribute to our departed Bro. Marcus C. Manly. Dear old man; he used to hit me some hard blows, and cuff me about considerably, when I was a young and inexperienced preacher. What long letters he would write me! What long, hard words he would use! The long words would send me to my dictionary, and his exhortations and admonitions would send me to my knees. I could never agree with him in all of his views. What of that? I am a better man to-day because of his letters and talks to me. He would write, 'I am coming to see you." He would come; he never saw me. I hope to meet him some day where he can see me.

Would that our ADVOCATE had a wider circulation! What a great loss is sustained by church members who do not take and read their own church paper! Who is to blame for their not taking? It is not always the fault of the preacher, for, Doctor, some of us do try to secure subscribers, and fail.

ANENT THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

Three assessments in less than thirty days is a little startling. Such a thing has never happened before in the history of the Brotherhood. A letter received a few days ago from one of our members suggested an inquiry into the financial status of our organization. The facts developed were quite as surprising to the writer as they, no doubt, will be to some other members of the brotherhood. Our membership has never been large. Some of our brethren, considering it an expensive insurance, and losing sight of the help and sympathy extended the families of our deceased, have not united with us. Others have dropped out for a similar reason. We have never made the effort which we should to increase our membership until the last session of our Conference, at which time the wisdom of the effort was manifested by an increase of twenty-five per cent. in membership.

In the past eight years (very nearly) we have had ten assessments, not including the last three which have just been issued. The treasurer's book shows that on these ten assessments the sum of $2 540 has been received and paid to the families of our deceased brethren. This has cost us $50 each. Thus it will be seen that the average amount paid on each of these assessments is $254, at an average annual cost of only $6, and a little over, to each member of the Brotherhood. This is at the rate of only $25 per annum on a $1,000 policy. How many members of the Mississippi Conference could get a one-thousand-dollar life insurance policy (except in some of the fraternal organizations; and not all in them by any means) for only twenty-five dollars per annum? Or one for two hundred and fifty dollars for only six dollars per annum? Yet this is what the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood has done. Not promised, but done. And that, too, considering:

First. Assessments Nos. 25 and 26 have not been closed, which will increase the amount paid per assessment, and decrease the yearly premium on the same.

Second. That during these eight years we have gone into ten desolated homes by our brotherly remembrance, which is no small part of our purpose.

There are two suggestions which should not need elaboration:

1 No member of the Brotherhood from the simple question of provision for his family, can afford to forfeit his membership. Nowhere else can he get so large a policy, for so small a premium, at so slight a risk, on so easy terms.

2. The same considerations should be an inducement to all eligible members of our Conference to join this organization. B. F LEWIS, Treasurer.

REV. J. H. HOLLAND.

Rev. Jacob H. Holland, late of the Mississippi Annual Conference, has been excused from further labor and suffering below, and taken to the kingdom above. His call came on Saturday, Jan. 18, 1902, at 1 o'clock A. M., closing an illness of several months' duration at the home of his son, Wm. J. Holland, in the city of Berkeley, Cal.

It was my privilege to visit him during the session of our Conference at Oakland, in October last. I found him weak in body and mind, but trusting his Savior. He had then been confined to his bed for five weeks. He afterwards rallied, but only a brief time. His beloved wife, and companion for fifty-one years, was ever by his side, and with their son and his family ministering to him. Rev. J. C. Wooten, pastor of our church in Oakland, and some of his faithful band, by their visits and good cheer made lighter their burdens.

On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 19, assisted by Bro. Wooten, I conducted funeral services at the residence, after which the Masons of Berkeley held a service at their hall, and his body was conveyed to the beautiful Mountain View Cemetery in Oakland, where, with the Masonic ceremony, it was consigned to the dust.

Jacob H. Holland was born in Jackson county, Miss., Nov. 30, 1829, and so was seventy-two years one month and eighteen days of age at the time of his death. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at the early age of ten years. On Jan. 16, 1851, he was happily married to Sarah Adline Smith, and the same year was licensed to preach. He was elected to deacon's orders Nov. 3, 1865, and ordained by Bishop Paine, Sept. 2, 1866. Bishop McTyeire ordained him to the office of elder on Dec. 12, 1868. He remained in the local ranks until this date, however, serving part of the time as a supply. He now was admitted into the traveling connection in the Mississippi Conference, which connection was never broken until his death. He served the following charges: Philadelphia circuit, two years, 1870 and '71; Paulding, four, '72 to '75; Trenton, two years, 75 to '77; Union, two years, '78 and '79; Shady Grove mission, one year, '80 Enterprise circuit, one year, '81; Vancleave, two years, '82 and '83; Ellisville, one year, '84; Nechoba, two years, '85 and '86; Marion, two years, '87 and '88; Bethel, one year, '89; Whittington, two years, '90 and '91; Americus, three years, '92 to '94; Nicholas mission, one year, '95; Fuller, Linwood, Gulf Port, and St. John circuit, one year each, '96 to '99

At the session of the Conference, held in December, 1899, because of declining health, he was placed on the list of superannuates.

About the first of August, last year, he followed his son to California, where he ended his days. He knew that his end was approaching; shortly before it came he begged his son's family to meet him in heaven, and bade them adieu.

He was the father of ten children but all save one died in infancy, the oldest only reaching the age of six years. His faithful wife abides with us for a while longer. She is "leaning upon the Everlasting Arm."

The will of God respecting me is that we shall live by each other's happiness and life; not by each other's misery or death. A child may have to die for its parents, but the purpose of heaven is that it should rather live for them; that, not by its sacrifice, but by its strength, its joy, its force of being, it shall be to them renewal of strength and as the arrow in the hand of a giant. So it is in all other right relations. Men help each other by their joy, not by their sorrow. They are not intended to slay themselves for each other, but to strengthen themselves for each other. —Ruskin.

To be true, to hate every form of falsehood, to live a brave, true, real life—that is to love God. God is infinite; and to love the boundless, reaching from grace to grace, adding charity to faith and rising upward ever to see the ideal still above us, and to die with it unattained, aiming insatiably to be perfect even as the Father is perfect—that is to love God.—F. W. Robertson.

The stontest difficulties, when overcome by divine grace, may be transformed into stepping-stones leading upward to the attainment of the perfect life.—Alabama Baptist.

The education of a child can not be shifted to the shoulders of teacher or educator. The responsibility rests, first and foremost, with the parents —Ladies' Home Journal.

The richest experiences of life never come to those who try to win them selfishly.—Anna R. Brown.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

Decision Day.

Since writing the article last week on Children's Day and Decision Day, we found the following which is pertinent to the subject, in the Sunday-School Times:

"The Day of Decision for Christ, although several years old as an organized movement, is not observed by all Sunday-schools at the same time. Some State Sunday-school Associations have advocated the Fall months, about Rally Day time, while other associations have prepared for such an occasion in the Spring time. Pennsylvania, however, which was the pioneer in securing the widespread observance of Decision Day, has made the time just after the holidays in January. The exact time was placed at the end of Sunday-school week in January. In this city (Philadelphia) the experiment was tried of having a uniform time, and the Sunday following the annual Philadelphia County Sunday-school Convention was chosen. While some denominations, or pastors, desire a different date, there must be concerted action by the great bulk of the Sunday-schools.

"The Ohio State Sunday-school organization advocates the uniform observance of Decision Day in the Sunday-schools of that State on the last Sunday of January. While some Ohio schools observe a day of decision quarterly, and others during special revival seasons, the great majority have no special time, and for this reason a particular day is needed."

We give place to the above simply to emphasize the fact that, in the opinion of the best Sunday-school workers, it is best to have a uniform Decision Day. With us in the South, where the day is so little observed, we believe it would be wise to center upon Children's Day as a Decision Day also. But what say our Sunday-school workers, both ministers and laymen? We would be glad to have them discuss the subject in our Sunday school column. It is an important subject, and ought to be thoroughly understood. To get the children to decide for Christ is the only object of our schools.

Rev. A. H. M. Kinney, superintendent of the New York State Sunday-school Association, has said that of the 800,000 children who attend Sunday-school in the Empire State, only forty per cent. are converted to Christ while in the school; twenty per cent. more of the number are converted after leaving the Sunday-school, and forty per cent. go down to Christless graves. This statement reveals the great responsibility resting upon the officers and teachers of our Sunday schools, and also the importance of the conversion and soul-culture of our scholars. Another eminent worker has said that if we win the children of this generation for Christ, the following generation will be a better and a holier one than this has been.

We hope to be able to announce the date for holding the Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention next week. The Board is waiting to hear from Prof. Hamill, as he has promised to hold an Institute in connection with it, and the date will depend on the time that he can be present. There is a great demand on his time for Institutes, and he has to arrange his dates to accommodate as many as possible. In the meantime we trust all who desire to enter the competitive examination on the Book of Acts will be preparing for the occasion. All under eighteen years of age are eligible, and the examination will cover that part of the Book of Acts covered by the Sunday-school lessons up to July 1. The prizes will be a five-dollar gold piece and a Teacher's Bible.

Bro. J. C. Cavett, superintendent of the Sunday-school at First Church, Jackson, Miss., last Fall sent out some written invitations to the adult members of the congregation to attend Sunday-school. The results were good, and quite a number of them have become regular attendants. His example is worthy of imitation.

It is now proposed to hold the fourth World's Sunday-school Convention in the city of Jerusalem in 1904. What an inspiration it will be to hold such a convention in the city of the Great King!

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

SARDIS, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I send you with this the names of three new subscribers. I hope to send others soon. I am glad to state that I find a goodly number of subscribers here to the Nashville Advocate, and also several to our Conference organ. I am sure, however, that both lists ought to be extended considerably.

We are well pleased, in a general way, with our new charge. We expect to have a pleasant year with these good people, and are determined, as much as in us is, to serve them faithfully. As pastor and people, we count ourselves fortunate in having Bro. Kendall reside in our town. His four-years' pastorate here will ever be remembered pleasantly both by himself and the whole town of Sardis. And now that he is to make this his home as sperannna's, the already strong friendship will grow stronger still. No one who knows Sardis will need to be told that we have been kindly received and well treated. They do not know how to act otherwise toward their pastor and his family. With very best wishes for the ADVOCATE and editor, I am,

Your brother, W. C. HARRIS.

WATERFORD, MISS.

MR EDITOR: I have been very kindly received on this charge, and have made one round. I find everything very agreeable. We have the prospects of a good year. We have two Sunday-schools at work, and expect to have one at each of our churches. On account of failures in crops for the two last years, the financial question will be a little close, but we are hoping and praying for a prosperous year in spiritual things. Brethren, let us not consider so much what our works are, but what we can make them by the help of the Lord. These fields are the Lord's, and we are his laborers sent here to labor. He has promised to be with us. Then, as a band of preachers, let us be more consecrated. Let us live more upon our knees, praying and beseeching the Lord to be with us in power, that we may have more power over sin. Then let us say deep down in our hearts, "Where he leads me, I will follow." He always leads to victory. Pray for us.

G. S. SAUNDERS.

SLIDELL, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Please allow me a small space in the dear old ADVOCATE, as I feel like penning a line or two in regard to my work. I was appointed to this work by Bishop Fitzgerald, and having heard so much about this place, was somewhat afraid to come here. I was told the people were such desperadoes! Dec. 27, 1901, wife and I started for our new field of labor. We arrived here next day about 10 A. M. It was raining and trying to snow, and kept getting worse, and we thought of what had been told us of the place.

A storm came up that morning and struck the parsonage, doing no damage, but leaving in its trail an abundance of good things, such as flour, sugar, rice, hams, coffee, canned goods, and lots of other good things. We had a nice reception. Sister G. O. Aiken met us at the train, carried us to her house, and kept us there for some time. The ladies have fixed the parsonage very comfortably, and we find everything in good condition. I am just back from the lower coast; had a nice time while there. We have a house full at every service. May God bless you and the dear old ADVOCATE!

Fraternally yours,
H. E. CARTER, P. C.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

ELLISVILLE CIRCUIT.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We have just closed our first month's work on this circuit. The people received us kindly, and some have pledged us their support. We have six regular appointments, and while we are kept very busy, we enjoy it. Our second Quarterly Conference will be held ten miles west of Ellisville, at Oak Bowery Church. We feel safe in saying that at least two of our churches will pay up their assessments quarterly, and that all, with the possible exception of one, will bring up their assessments in full. We are praying that many may be saved on this work this year, and we feel sure of our prayer being answered. Visible signs of a great revival have already appeared, and we feel confident that God will bless us still more. G. W. SHEARER.

Life without industry is guilt and industry without intellect is brutal ity. All the busy world of flying looms and whirling spindles begins in the quiet thought of some scholar cloistered in his closet.—Ruskin.

The book-keeper's occupation renders him specially liable to stomach trouble. The hasty breakfast, the "quick lunch," the long hours spent in stooping over journal and ledger, with lack of exercise, all tend to the derangement of the stomach.

When the stomach is in a healthy condition the feeling after a meal is one of satisfaction and comfort. Whenever there is discomfort after eating it is a sign of stomach derangement or disease.

Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition perfectly and permanently. The cures effected by this medicine are almost countless.

"I have taken one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for indigestion and liver complaint," writes Mr. C. M. Wilson, of Yadkin College, Davidson Co., N. C. "Have had no bad spells since I commenced taking your medicine—in fact have not felt like the same man. Before I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I could not eat anything without awful distress, but now I can eat anything I wish without having unpleasant feelings."

Don't be fooled into trading a substance for a shadow. Any substitute offered as "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery" is a shadow of that medicine. There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which no "just as good" medicine can show.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and regulate the liver. They produce permanent benefit and do not react on the system.

AN APPEAL TO OUR FRIENDS.

We make a special appeal to our friends who owe us on subscription to send us the amount due. We need the money. The amount each one owes is small, but the aggregate amounts to hundreds of dollars. Our friends must see that it is embarrassing to us to withhold the money. Please look at the label on your paper, and if you are behind, send us the amount due. We will greatly appreciate it.

In a great army some do all the fighting; others gather and guard the munitions of war, and subsistence for the men. These posts may not be filled by men of their own choice, but by order and detail. They are all necessary and equally entitled to the honors of a successful campaign. When David's men declined to divide the spoil with their comrades who remained in the camp, he said, not so, "but as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff; they shall part alike." And he made it a statute in Israel. So it is in the ranks of the Christian ministry. No man will lose his reward, though he may have done his part in a quiet, unobtrusive way. Let no man lose heart!

A Baptist brother, who knows the strength of his church, and the rate of increase per year, can, in a little while, demonstrate exactly how long it will take the Baptists to fill the world. A Methodist brother can make a similar calculation, and his conclusion, based on figures, can not be denied. But how idle are such calculations on the part of both. There is no chance for the Baptists to take the world as Baptists. There is no chance for the Methodists to take the world as Methodists. As Christians, with the help of other good people, they can take the world for Christ. With this they ought to be content. One could not blot out the other, if it would. We trust neither would blot out the other, if it could. We ought to bid each other God speed.

It is perfectly natural for a preacher who feels an interest in his work to desire the increase of his membership, and to collect as much money as possible for the various benevolences, but it is unjust to measure his worth to the church by his success in these particulars. Some preachers seldom have great revivals, and are not noted as money-gatherers, but they seem to be indispensable factors in the general work of the church. "One soweth, another reapeth." One plants, another waters, but God gives the increase.

PROHIBITION.

In accordance with numerous requests from various church meetings throughout Mississippi, the Governor has submitted to the Legislature now in extra session the subject of prohibition of the liquor traffic. The temperance forces of the State are much interested in the issue. Of course, the liquor advocates are agitated and active, and will do all they can to stave off legislation of any kind that looks to the restriction or suppression of the traffic.

We are not on the ground, nor are we fully informed as to the working of the liquor laws already on the statute book. We have a general knowledge gathered from newspaper accounts. These accounts are to the effect that by far the larger number of the counties are already under prohibition, and that the law is fairly well enforced—quite as well as the law against murder, theft, and other crimes. The good people of the State have been many years working for what they have. They have gained ground inch by inch, much of it after severe and protracted struggles.

Now that the question of prohibition by legislative action is up, we are told that the temperance forces are divided, some favoring the move for outright prohibition, and others are for restriction. Those who favor restriction are classed as friends of the saloon. This is not fair. Indeed, it is unreasonable to suppose that one who has been a consistent and ardent temperance man all his life should be a friend of the saloon. The mere fact that at any particular juncture one assumes it to be inopportune to push the question of prohibition does not put him in the ranks of the enemy.

If we understand the position of those who favor restriction, or the maintenance of the present local option law, rather than statutory prohibition, it is that in pushing prohibition there is danger of losing all that has been gained. And believing that it is doubtful whether the State can be carried for prohibition, they are unwilling to take any chances. It is only a difference of opinion as to the best policy to be pursued against a common foe, and we can not find it in our heart to condemn them.

On general principles we oppose the liquor traffic. It is the common enemy of all good, and we make it a point to deal it a blow every time we have an opportunity, and without assuming to dictate to any one, we may be allowed to say that if seven-tenths, or more, of the counties of the State of Mississippi are under prohibition through the voluntary action of the citizens, we can not see why a law extending its benefits to the whole State should not meet with the approval of the majority. It would only be making State-wide that which is now restricted to county lines. The only difference is, one is through the operation of a local option law, the other is proposed to be enacted by the State Legislature. But the people should not object to that, for, what is good for a county is good for a whole State.

True, it is said, "a State law can not be enforced." That point is unworthy of consideration. It is a reflection on the officers of the State. It may be that no law can be framed that will entirely free the State of liquor sellers, neither can one be framed that will stop murder, but the murderer can be apprehended and punished. So can one who violates a liquor law if officers will do their duty. It requires only vigilant and faithful officers to execute any law.

If the Legislature will give Mississippi a prohibition law, we venture to say that outside the large cities it will be as well enforced as any law on the statute book.

[Since writing the above, the prohibition bill before the Legislature has been defeated. Notice, however, was given that a motion to reconsider would be offered. Up to date, Feb. 11, we have seen no notice of the motion, and the session is near its close.]

MARDI GRAS.

Mardi Gras, or "the Carnival," as it is commonly called in this city, is upon us again. The word in some cities is but the synonym of vice and vulgarity. Not so in New Orleans, and yet the festivities are not wholly unobjectionable viewed from a religious standpoint. The dancing and drinking engaged in during the nights of the carnival week are, of course, positively injurious to health and piety, not to say destructive of good morals. They are no more so, however, than like things on other occasions. But during Mardi Gras, they are on a more elaborate and costly scale. The waste of money, too, is enormous. Preparations are begun weeks in advance, and how much money is spent on the show can never be known. We have been informed that the man who acts the part of the king pays largely for the privilege—perhaps as much as one thousand dollars. And it costs the father, or brother, or friend of the carnival queen an equal sum. The whole is under the direction of social clubs.

The people generally have nothing to do with the management, but they take as much delight in the day as those who pay the highest price. But their part is wholly on the street, and on foot. Now and then something grotesque is seen on wheels. Of all the jolly, good-humored, and fun-provoking crowds one ever saw, he sees on Mardi Gras Day in New Orleans. Nothing occurs to offend the eye or ear. It is a day of cheer and good-will, a festival indeed, a regular Fat Tuesday. The grand procession on which is centered the expenditure of money to make it gorgeous is the great attraction. It brings the whole city together, and thousands of visitors from afar.

After all, what is Mardi Gras? Nothing but a great big child's play, on which the time and money spent is worse than wasted. The railroad and street-car companies, hotels, eating-houses, saloons and theaters are the principal beneficiaries. Probably the retail merchants secure a share of the profits. The large merchants, commission and wholesale, contribute to the entertainment, but it is doubtful, so we have been told, whether they get back in trade the amount they give. Notwithstanding the innocent amusement and the many visitors that annually come to witness the scenes, we do not believe the city would lose anything were Mardi Gras abolished, and the money used on it applied to building up the private and public interests of the people. We are sure that many who come to witness the play do not get their money's worth.

A SOURCE OF NATIONAL WEAKNESS.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling in a recent poem created a sensation in English circles by making an attack on excessive athleticism. By some Mr. Kipling is condemned; by others he is upheld. If we understand the matter, Mr. Kipling's poem was inspired by the long-continued war in South Africa, which has cost England so many lives, and such a vast amount of money, all of which he attributes to the fact that the men of England, those most interested, have not shown a disposition to uphold the arms and the honor of the government. They have refrained from active service.

In searching for a cause for this backwardness he finds it due to what a writer in the London Times calls "dry rot," caused by "the pursuit of sport and athletic amusements." These things are not bad in themselves, but when they become the ideals of life, and create ambition in the breasts of thousands of young men to become the best dancers, or the most famous sportsman, or the best foot-ball players, the result can not be otherwise than ruinous. And so far as England is concerned, Mr. Kipling believes that the love of ease and sport has killed the patriotic spirit of England's young men, at least to such an extent as to make them shrink from the hardships of the army camp, and the dangers of the battle-field.

The head masters of English schools, of course, resent Mr. Kipling's insinuation. Not all, for one who presides over one of the institutions says:

"There is plenty of military purpose in us, but for generations it has been misdirected upon athletics in the erroneous belief that they are a fine training for officers. For it is a superstition of boys that an athlete may become a fighting officer in the twinkling of an eye. This superstition dies hard, but it must go."

What has come to pass in England will overtake the men of our land, within two, or more generations, if we keep up the pace we are going in multiplying riches which, in turn, multiply the number of idle and ease-loving women who spend their time in dressing and dancing, and men who go to college for nothing, apparently, but to play base-ball in the Spring, and foot-ball in the Fall. If we have concern for immediate posterity, we had better bestir ourselves and check this evil tendency, else it will be said of us as a correspondent of the London Times said of Mr. Kipling: "He perceived a little too late in the day that the war has probed our civilization and discovered a certain amount of dry rot."

We endorse the sentiments as expressed in a recent issue of the Daily Picayune of this city:

"No sane man doubts the value of physical exercise, and certainly there are very few who will deny that, other things being equal, the more pleasant exercise, the more wholesome it is There is nothing young people enjoy more than out-of-door sport. Nine boys out of ten would rather be the hero of the playground than be the recognized genius of the school-room. But it is neither seemly nor profitable for grown men to devote the greater part of their time and strength to the sports which were the delight of their childhood and youth. Foot-ball, riding to hounds and deer-stalking undoubtedly tend to develop some important soldierly qualities, but they do not suffice to equip an army officer at every point Moreover, it is essential in every sphere of life to grasp the great fact that successful leadership can not be expected from men whose ideal of happiness is amusement."

THE NEW VERSION—AGAIN.

Our attention has been called to the fact that we did an injustice to Dr. Tigert in our notice of the Twentieth Century New Testament, in saying that he gave the version his unqualified endorsement. The Doctor said, "Despite an occasional blemish, it is a worthy monument of Greek scholarship with which to mark the beginning of a new century of biblical learning." He also said, "The way in which the lessons of divine truth are brought home to the bosoms of men of this generation is at times very wonderful, evincing not only exact and delicate Greek scholarship, but perfect mastery of living English, and a positive genius for translation." If in the omission of the words "despite an occasional blemish," and "at times," we did the Doctor an injustice, we beg his pardon. The Doctor's commendation was hearty; and so emphasized by repetition, and fortified by a quotation from "a very eminent professor of New Testament Greek" who had abandoned all other versions for the Twentieth Century, that we did not attach as much importance, perhaps, as we should, to the expressions which indicate that he does not commend the translation throughout.

The revisers will doubtless thank Dr. Tigert for his notice, and profit by his criticisms. Their work lacks so little of being perfect that they will in the next edition be so painstaking as to leave no blemishes, and in every instance bring home to the bosoms of men the truth in a wonderful way.

A TIMELY REBUKE.

Under the head of "A Timely Rebuke" the Baptist, at Jackson, Miss., gives in detail the action of the citizens of Pascagoula, Miss., in regard to an invitation issued by them to the Legislature of Mississippi to visit their town. The invitation was given the body to visit the town on the twenty-fifth of this month. The good and enterprising citizens desired the Governor, State officers and members of the Legislature to visit the town, and inspect the harbor and industries, etc. The invitation was accepted, but the day changed from the twenty-fifth to the twenty-sixth, which is Sunday, whereupon the Commercial Club having the business in charge instructed the Committee of Invitation to inform the Legislature that the people of Pascagoula would "take great pleasure in entertaining them in their homes and in their churches if they should visit there on the Sabbath, but that because of the day they would be unable to take them over the channel, river and harbor, so as to make a full and proper inspection thereof, and unless they could give a day other than the Sabbath," the invitation would be withdrawn.

That was indeed a timely rebuke. One such ought to suffice for a life-time. The legislators surely forgot what they were doing, else they entertain strange notions concerning the sanctity of the Sabbath, and thought the citizens of Pascagoula "were altogether such as themselves." All honor to the citizens of Pascagoula!

BOOKS.

BIBLE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR CHILDREN By Rev. T. L Moody, of the Tennessee Conference. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. 112 pages. Price, 20 cents

We have examined this catechism with more than ordinary interest and care. The more we look into it the better we like it. It is divided into three parts. The first part is historical and practical; the second treats of the famous names mentioned in the Bible; the third is doctrinal and miscellaneous. The lessons are short and well adapted to children, even of very tender years. The questions are plain and direct, and the answers given in language equally as plain, often in the words of Scripture. Christian parents will find this book exceedingly helpful, and Sunday-school teachers could not do better than to supplement the regular lesson with lessons from this volume. We congratulate our old friend and brother in bringing out a book so well adapted to instruct in things concerning the kingdom of God.

X RAYS FROM GOD'S WORD. Bible Readings. By Emma and Tina Tucker. 346 pages. Price, $1. Foote & Davies Company, Atlanta, Ga

We are in receipt of a copy of this book, neatly printed on good paper, and bound in muslin after the prevailing style. The book consists of an array of subjects suggested by the Word of God, with several passages of Scripture bearing on the particular subject named. No comments are attached, but now and then there is an apt quotation from some wise one whose knowledge of God's Word gives great weight to their sayings. To the devout and meditative soul this book will be helpful.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention of the M. E. Church, South (not the M. E. Church, as printed in the official notice), will meet in Utica, Miss., Monday evening March 24. Full notice will be given next week.

On account of the above meeting the District Conference for Natchez district will be held April 23 27, instead of time heretofore announced.

The Annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Louisiana Conference will be held in Mer Rouge, March 6 to 9. Full notice next week.

We are requested to say that the Minutes of the Mississippi Conference have been unavoidably delayed a few days. The work will be ready for distribution this week.

We are crowded with communications—all good; a few of them very long. It will be several weeks before we can reach some of them. We ask the writers to be patient. We will do the best we can.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J W. Ramsey, of Nettleton, Miss., says: "My new work is opening up nicely. This excellent people have given us a kind reception, and we look forward to a prosperous year."

Rev. V. C. Curtis writes from Starkville (Miss.) circuit: "Our work is moving on well. The finances are behind, but are one hundred per cent. in advance of this date last year. The present outlook is promising."

We had the honor of half an hour's conversation, last week, with Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Whitworth College. The half hour was profitably spent. The Doctor informed us that Whitworth College was in a prosperous condition.

Rev. H. M. Young has entered his third year on Ebenezer circuit, North Mississippi. He has received a cordial welcome. His people have shown their appreciation by their works, and Brother Young is cheerful, and hopeful of success.

Rev. J. R. Jones, Flora, Miss., is comfortably located, and says: "I think the outlook is somewhat bright for a prosperous year at Flora. The people have received us very kindly, and seem to be ready to cooperate in the work of the Master."

Rev. W. G Harbin, of Holly Springs, has sent us a communication which indicates his great interest in his charge. We have no doubt of his success. For lack of space we were obliged to omit the letter addressed to his people. He serves a congregation of intelligent and devoted Methodists.

We thank Rev. H G Hawkins, of Centerville, Miss., for a kind invitation to attend the District Conference, to be held at Centerville the last week in April. We will be very glad to do so if we can leave home at that time. We also thank Sister Hawkins for her work in behalf of the ADVOCATE. May the Lord reward her!

The death of Dr. R. A. Young, of Nashville, was sudden, and the announcement will bring sorrow to many who knew and admired him in the days of his strength. A great man and a prince in Israel has fallen He died at his home, Feb. 7, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. We did not learn of his death until nearly all the matter for this issue was put in type. We will have more to say hereafter.

It was our privilege, on Friday last, Feb. 7 to visit our senior Bishop, John C. Keener, at his home in Carrollton. It was his birthday. He was eighty-three years old. Notwithstanding his advanced age, he was in good health and in unusually good spirits, and as fully alive to all the interests of the church as at any period of his life. He is not only a reader of the current literature of the church, but a hard student. He reads books, new books, and keeps himself well informed. We pray that many years more may be added to his life.

If the label on your paper is wrong, let us know, and we will correct. If it is right, and shows that you owe us, please send the amount due. We need the money.

The Mississippi Conference.

To the Presiding Elders and Preachers in Charge, Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South -

DEAR BRETHREN: The reports made to the Conference at McComb, in December, have never been surpassed in the history of the Conference. Not less than six thousand conversions were reported, and as many, if not more, accessions. The increased contributions to the assessments were gratifying, if not satisfying. Four districts—Natchez, Seashore, Jackson, and Forest—paid the assessment for foreign missions in full, with $21 in excess credited to the Natchez. Two districts—Seashore and Forest—paid the domestic mission assessment in full, the Forest paying an excess of $12 These last named two districts also paid the Conference claimants' assessment in full. To the Seashore district belongs the distinction of being the first in the Conference to pay every assessment in full on every charge.

Altogether, ninety-one pastoral charges paid the foreign mission assessment in full, only two in the Natchez and only two in the Forest being in default. The increase in the Conference over 1900 was more than $2,000, and the deficit was less than $600. Shall we not make a persistent effort this year, and wipe out every such deficit? It can be done It ought to be done. Shall we not say it must be done, and then do it? The Mississippi Conference will then wheel into line with the advance guard of Southern Methodism. In 1899 only one Annual Conference paid foreign missions in full. In 1900 there were four to meet the obligation. In 1901 eight have been reported. More than eighty districts have reported this assessment fully paid. The South Georgia ontpaid by more than $600 The Holston and the East Texas Conferences report all assessments met at the rate of one hundred cents on the dollar. The Mississippi Conference is able to do as much. We have the members and we have the means. Let us begin early; let us be persistent; let us not be weary in well-doing; let us be prayerful, and let us be watchful and ready to avail ourselves of every opportunity to inform the people to arouse their interest, and to "provoke them unto love and good works."

As helpful to this end, let every presiding elder and every preacher in charge be a subscriber to the Review of Missions and to Go Forward, and let preachers and laymen work together to put at least 500 copies of Go Forward into the homes in each district.

T. L. MELLEN,
Miss. Conf. Miss'y Sec'y.

Feb 3, 1902.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Although kept at home since Conference by work, weather, and other conditions, it is pleasant and cheering to have communications from the brethren, not only ordering books, but relating their success in the work, and the good things that come to them. I note with pleasure a few items as follows:

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Greenville station: "We have been kindly received, and the outlook is favorable. Had an 'old fashion' mourner's-bench service last night, and one bright and happy conversion."

Rev. J. E. Thomas, Greenwood: "Everything is moving on nicely and encouragingly."

Rev. J. T. Murrah, Shaw: "Fourteen additions since Conference."

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Grenada: "Our work moves on pleasantly, and God is blessing us. Have had twenty-seven accessions."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, manager of Orphans' Home, Water Valley: "Our work moves along smoothly. We have seventy-two children. Splendid Sunday-school and day-school."

"Bible Teacher's Study Circles" have been reported as organized at the following places, viz: Tomnolen, Pleasant Hill, Aberdeen, Columbus, Winona, and Carrollton. As others are organized, the pastors will please report them to me as well as to the General Office, with name of leader, etc. I am prepared to furnish papers and information for organizing and conducting this training work, and also the books to be studied. The set of three books sent postpaid for only $1 cash. Surely every preacher and superintendent ought to procure this Study Course at once for their own benefit, and then organize Circles as quickly as possible.

Also Hess' S. S. Lesson Notes, 50 cents; Pelonbet's $1; Neely's and Doherty's, $1. Postpaid at these prices.

ADDITIONAL NOTES

P. S.—In the published Conference Minutes, Friar's Point, H. P. Crowe does not appear in the "Appointments." We exceedingly regret this omission. It was an oversight of the printer.

Capt. G. P. Leake died at his home near Dnck Hill, Jan. 27, aged eighty-three years. He was a Christian gentleman in the truest sense of the term, and had been a faithful steward in the Methodist Church for a long time. This writer knew him as such twenty-five years ago, when he was his pastor. In his death not only his family, but the church and community are bereft of a good and useful man.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

F. E. B.

We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February Feb. means Freez everybody, and that man looked frozen in his ulster. It was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that stays, the warmth that reaches from head to foot, all over the body. We could have told him from personal knowledge that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives permanent warmth, it invigorates the blood and speeds it along through artery and vein, and really fits men and women, boys and girls to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and all its benefits are lasting There may be a suggestion in this for you.

We have been overwhelmed for two weeks, and more, with requests to change addresses. To comply requires much time and a great deal of trouble. We are doing our best. There will, doubtless, be mistakes and omissions; but no request will be overlooked or improperly entered on purpose. It is to our interest to do right; but we are human and sometimes fail. Our patrons will please bear with our infirmities.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

WHAT A SAMPLE BOTTLE OF SWAMP-ROOT DID

To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, will do for YOU, Every Reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

W. F. Lohnes, a prominent business man of Springfield, Ohio, writes the following strong endorsement of the great kidney remedy, Swamp Root, to the editor of the Springfield, Ohio, Republic:

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 21st, 1901

"Having heard that you could procure a sample bottle of Swamp Root free by mail, I wrote to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle and it was promptly sent. I was so pleased after trying the sample bottle that I sent to the drug store and procured a supply. I have used Swamp Root regularly for some time and consider it unsurpassed as a remedy for torpid liver, loss of appetite and general derangement of the digestive functions. I think my trouble was due to too close confinement in my business. I can recommend it highly for all liver and kidney complaints. I am not in the habit of endorsing any medicine, but in this case I can not speak too much in praise of what Swamp-Root has done for me."

W. F. Lohnes.
Mig'r St.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

We often see a friend, a relative, or an acquaintanee apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness, or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's Disease.

W. F. LOHNES.

EDITORIAL NOTE—If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives to the great curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Temperance Lesson.

A young friend of mine in California wished to enter the United States Navy. So he went to San Francisco to be examined, and failed to pass in the physical examination, being told, to the surprise and disappointment of his friends, that he was "color-blind." He could not distinguish certain colors. It may have seemed a very small thing to refuse a bright boy a place in our government service, just because he could not pick out certain threads in a skein.

But in reality it was a serious defect. Failure to distinguish a certain colored light some dark night might result in a terrible collision at sea. Unable to discern the color of a certain signal flying in the midst of action, a single sailor might, all unwittingly, become the cause of a disastrous naval defeat.

But there is a color-blindness of the soul, a blindness to spiritual and moral distinctions, a much more serious matter than any defect of physical vision.

The Bible speaks of this infirmity, applying dreadful denunciation to those who take advantage of such a failing to confuse others.

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

"Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight!

"Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink."

There is the old, yet still interesting, story in Greek literature about an incident in the boyhood of Cyrus the Great.

The little prince, raised in the mountains of Persia, had never tasted wine, which was practically unknown at that time among his countrymen.

Cyrus went down to stay a while with his grandfather, who was King of Media.

Here, among many things that were splendid and impressive, he saw others that filled him with disgust.

One day Cyrus, as children say, "played" royal cup bearer. He girded himself with a towel, and with child-like fidelity of mimicry, offered the cup of wine to the king.

"Very good," cried his grandfather, quite delighted. "But you forgot one thing. It is the rule for the cup-bearer to taste the cup first."

"No, grandfather, I did not forget. I was afraid to taste because I thought there was poison in the cup."

"Poison! What made you think that?"

"Why I have noticed that after these nobles drink wine they appear to forget their dignity and splendor, and really act like very foolish people.

"And even you yourself, grandfather, after you have been drinking wine, seem to forget that you are a king."

Little Cyrus was right. There is poison in the alcoholic cup. No healthy person should drink of it, and is a peculiar quality about alcohol which makes it not only injurious to the human body, but also seriously detrimental to the moral and spiritual faculties. It gradually impairs the fine moral tastes and capabilities of the soul. The Bible says our bodies are the temple of God. And our bodies are wonderful things. No building ever erected, even Solomon's Temple itself, was as wonderful as the humblest human body. Christ himself lived in a human body, and took his human nature to heaven with him.

The use of anything which makes our bodies less fit for God to dwell in is a sin.

God has not given us all beautiful faces, or strong bodies, but all we do possess is to be kept and used for him.

It is a dreadful thing for a person by excess in drink, or in any other appetite or habit, to render his nature coarser, his tastes grosser, and so close the avenues by which in manifold ways God is always sending in his messages to the soul.

Astronomers nowadays take photographs of invisible stars. Stars which our naked eyes can not see, which even the telescope can not make out, are thus brought to our knowledge. A prepared plate is exposed to the night sky, and left for a long time. Gradually the little rays of light from stars so far distant as to be incapable of detection in any other way, print their image upon this plate.

A Christian is a being whose heart should always be open to the influences of eternity and God.

If our bodies were kept pure for the sake of our souls, as I am sure God means them to be, we should learn to feel somewhat as the blessed angels feel, and learn, even if dimly, some of the things which the angels know. We shall learn at least that "for his dwelling and his throne God chooseth the pure in heart."—Rev. Charles R Nugent, Ph.D., in Exchange.

Cures Weak Hearts

Palpitation and other heart irregularities are nearly always caused by a weak stomach and a disordered digestion. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy cures weak stomachs, regulates the gastric juices, builds up the appetite and invariably cures palpitation, intermittent pulse, and other heart irregularities. For this purpose it has no equal. It cures all stomach troubles and insures good health and sweet refreshing sleep.

A GOVERNOR'S OPINION.

Governor Robert Taylor, of Tennessee, says "I find Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy an admirable aid to digestion. It imparts a vigor and easiness of feeling which is very desirable. It is a first-class remedy for aiding digestion."

How Do They Know?

Do animals and birds have within them some instinctive consciousness of Time? Naturalists believe that they do, and many well-known facts observed by different men in different places lend color to that view.

The oriole arrives in Massachusetts every year about the tenth day of May, paying little attention to differences of weather, according to the Youth's Companion. He may have his late seasons and his early seasons, but the very large number of years in which his arrival has been noted on the tenth day indicates that his chronological machinery, like that of a cuckoo-clock, pops into view at a given moment.

Birds which migrate southward early, not waiting for frost or cold winds, also seem to be aware when the date has arrived for their departure. Many kingbirds, for instance, may be seen in Massachusetts on the last day of August, but very few are ever seen after the first day of September.

The woodchuck knows when the time has come for him to "den up." He not only feels the necessity of rolling himself up in his own sustaining fat and going to sleep for the Winter, but he feels it at a particular time, quite regardless of the state of the weather. Woodchucks have been domesticated, and allowed to sleep in a warm place, with all the food they needed, yet they "denned up" when the regular time came for them to do so

They awake in the Spring with much the same regularity. The "ground-hog day" legend is ridiculous. It is, of course, unreasonable to suppose that in a country like ours, with a range of climates from semi-tropical to the completely arctic, a creature will come out of his hole everywhere on the second day of February, and then regulate his future conduct according to the weather on that day, staying out if it be bad, and going back if it be good.

But the legend belongs properly not to the woodchuck, but to the badger, and to the European badger at that, and, moreover, the Germans give us a version exactly opposite to that which is most current. They say that the badger peeps out of his hole on Candlemas Day, and draws back when he finds snow shining—not the sun. The persistence of the woodchuck legend may thus be traced to the regularity of the chuck's European relative.

A naturalist who has studied this interesting characteristic of animals tells a story, from his own observation, which seems to show that some creatures may have a still more exact sense of time than is indicated by the regularity of their migrations and hibernations. He once enjoyed the acquaintance of a mouse which, at exactly a quarter before four o'clock every afternoon, was in the habit of coming out along a wainscoting and making his way to a pot of paste on the table, the crust of which he then proceeded to nibble. No 'suburbanite," having his train in mind, could be more regular in arriving at his breakfast table than this tame mouse was in coming for his daily nibble of paste.

How did the mouse know when it was a quarter before four? The naturalist could not answer the question, but he is certain that the little creature had some way of measuring time.

Make Use of the Minutes.

In the room of a girl friend the other day we noticed something which especially interested us. To the pin cushion, which occupied the central position on her dresser, was pinned a short poem, evidently clipped from some newspaper. And the poem happened to be the "Recessional," which everybody knows about, but comparatively few people know.

Now, a pin-cushion is not the place where one expects to find a poem, however grand or beautiful, and we looked to our friend for an explanation.

"I always have something I especially want to know pinned to my cushion," she said, smiling, "and when I'm brushing my hair or adjusting a collar button, I just glance over the lines. Before I know it I have the whole committed to memory, and then I remove it and place something else in its stead."

Now, this girl, as we happen to know, is a very busy girl, a stenographer in a law office, an earnest church worker, a favorite with other young people, and we had been surprised to hear her spoken of as being so well informed. We wondered how she found time to acquire her information, but the pin-cushion revealed the mystery. She had learned the art of utilizing the minutes.—Exchange.

Shadi's Prayer.

A missionary lady had a little Hindu orphan named Shadi living with her. She had taught him about Jesus, and one night, when he was six years old, she said to him:

"Now, pray a little prayer of your own."

And what do you think Shadi's prayer was? It is this:

"Dear Jesus, make me like what you were when you were six years old."—Child's Gem.

The trouble with a good many people is that instead of being Christian missionaries, they are Christian omissionaries, exhibiting a great capacity for doing nothing, or for doing only easy things. The Christian life, however, is properly the strenuous life—the life that takes its possessor and spurs on its devotees. No absolute idler can enter the kingdom of heaven, or, if he did, the spirit of idleness would be taken out of him.—New York Observer.

OBITUARIES.

Dr. CHARLES WESLEY REAMS was born in East Feliciana parish, La., April 27, 1839. While quite young he joined the church, and soon after was converted. His father, James Reams, and his grandfather, Revel Tabor, were both Methodist preachers. Being taught to love and serve God in his youth, he never forsook the path of right. He attended Centenary College for a while, and from there he entered Tulane University, in New Orleans, and graduated in medicine in 1861, just when the Civil War broke out. He joined the 16th Louisiana Regiment, and remained in the army until May 12, 1865, when he received his parole. He was happily married to Miss Mary George, of St. Helena parish, March 25, 1867. From this on he became more useful, if possible, to his fellow-man than ever. He practiced medicine and superintended Sunday-school in Greensburg for nearly twenty years, and I never heard anyone say aught against him. On account of failing health he moved to Kentwood, thinking a change would benefit him; but, alas! how soon he had to give up his delightful new home! Thank God it was for a better one. Only two weeks had been spent in this delightful home when the death angel called for the first time on the devoted Christian home, and took the third home to glory to await the coming of the rest. He left his pastor the one thought that ought to still the tale, but if he was not there when he returned, he would know where to find him. The next morning at seven o'clock (the first day of October, last) he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. To the bereaved I will say, Weep not, for God has only transplanted the dear one to a fairer, better world than this, and if you will only continue in the path he trod, it will not be very long till you will meet again, and then we can have a big family meeting near some shady brook, and talk over the goodness and mercy of our Heavenly Father in leading us through so many sore trials to such a land of bliss, and join in with the host of heaven in singing praise to God and the Lamb forever. May God help us all to be faithful to the end!

J. W. MCLEAN.

Mr. T. G. JAMES, son of Rev. Peter James, was born in Copiah county, Miss., Oct. 4 1821, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. S. Collier, in Oxford, Miss., Jan. 20, 1902. Bro. James grew to maturer manhood, and married Miss Jane Foot in Yazoo county, Oct 28, 1851. In the Autumn of 1873 he settled at Starkey, in Yallahatchie county, and here he accumulated a competent fortune, and dispensed a generous and bountiful hospitality. His home was a center of attraction for many leagues in every direction, and it claimed scores of visitors from long distance. The preachers of our own and other churches were entertained as if they had been angels. Bro. James professed religion and joined the church of his fathers when young, and remained a consistent and useful member of the same down to the end. Mainly by his energy and liberality Strathmore, a beautiful and comfortable church, was erected near his home, and here he loved to worship God. He was a devout Christian, a devoted Methodist, and a perfect gentleman in all the relations of life; a man of integrity and of honor. He arranged all of his business affairs, and was ready and waiting for the call of the Master. He was a just man in his dealings with the laborers on his large farm, and more than one hundred of them attended his burial and asked the privilege of filling up his grave. He leaves his wife of his youth, a son and daughter, and a number of grandchildren and a host of friends, to follow on.

R. G. P.

D. DENON MCREE was born in Copiah county, Miss., and died in Memphis, Tenn., April 19, 1901. He was the oldest son of F. M. and Bettie A. McRee. Denon was one of those sunshiny spirits who saw only the pleasant side of life, and who gave out of his generous, joyous nature much of the sunshine of his own life to others. He joined the Methodist Church early in life, and remained a member till death separated him from the church militant, that he might claim membership in the church triumphant. He first settled in Wesson, where he practiced law; then he removed to Texas; thence to Water Valley, Miss., near which place, on Oct. 1, 1899 he was happily married to Miss Cora Spearman, who, with her little son, survives him. His health had been failing for some time, and his sufferings near the end were intense. He fully realized his condition, and while he desired to live for his loved ones, yet he was resigned to his Heavenly Father's will, and gave many tokens of his trust in Jesus. May the sorrowing hearts find comfort in the sustaining grace of Christ!

B. F. JONES.

Brookhaver, Miss.

SAMUEL H. POWELL was born Dec. 14, 1880; gave his heart to God, Aug. 15, 1901, and on the twenty-seventh of November thereafter peacefully "fell on sleep." Such was the brief earthly pilgrimage of our brother. His character was that of integrity and honor personified. By nature he was a nobleman, by grace a child of the King. During his last illness he was a great sufferer, and yet never a murmur escaped his lips. Perfectly resigned to the will of his God, he calmly waited the summons that should call him to the realization of his hopes in Jesus Christ. Seldom have I beheld such patience, such fortitude, such faith. Often, when on pastoral calls, I looked into his emaciated face, I saw a smile that spoke of the heavenly calm and peace within his soul. May Heaven's benedictions rest upon his widowed mother and her children, and God grant that this, their great loss, may be sanctified unto their eternal salvation is the prayer of their pastor, J. W. CAMPBELL.

Mrs. E. E. HOWELL, wife of Bro. F. A. Howell, departed this life at her home near Bowling Green, Miss., Jan. 12, 1902. She was born in Noxubee county, Miss., Nov. 25, 1847. Her father moved to Holmes county, Miss., when she was about four years old, and settled near West, where she, in early life, professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Wheeling, in which communion she lived a faithful and consistent Christian until her pure spirit winged its flight back to God. She was married Aug. 29, 1867, and was the mother of twelve children, six sons and six daughters, four of whom preceded her to heaven, having died in early childhood. Five sons and three daughters are yet living, all of whom she had the joy of seeing brought into the church in which she lived a consistent member for more than forty years. The church and community, as well as her family, have sustained a great loss in her death. Her last visit on earth was to a sick neighbor. Her remains were buried in Lexington, Miss., to await the resurrection of the just.

B. B. SULLIVAN, P. C.

Mrs. LIZZIE FRAZIER (nee Regan) was born in Tippah county, Miss., on Dec. 14, 1879. She died at her home, near the place of her birth, on the twelfth day of December, 1901. She leaves a husband, a bright little girl three years old, and an infant son just a few hours old, when she died. Besides these, there are a host of relatives and friends to mourn her untimely death. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and when called upon to do church work, she was always ready. So did the Savior find her when he called her to "come up higher." She was left an orphan when quite small, but was reared by her grandparents and an aunt, and they brought her up into a model lady. To her bereft loved ones we would say: Trust the same Savior which she trusted, live the same life she lived, and you will have no reason to sorrow as those who have no hope, and may have the same heavenly home which she has gone to enjoy. She will be missed, but not forgotten.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The peace is in the possession of the favor of God. This is found only in submission, faith and obedience to his laws. It is therefruit of a pure and holy love for him. Resign every forbidden joy; restrain every when that is not referred to his will; banish all eager desires, all anxiety. Desire only the will of God; seek him alone, and you will find peace; you shall enjoy it in spite of the world. What is it that troubles you? Poverty, neglect, want of success, external or internal troubles? Look upon everything as in the hands of God, and as real blessings that he bestows upon you, children, of which you receive your portion. Then the world may turn its face from you, but nothing will deprive you of peace.—Fenelon.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The Master takes great delight in many of his shut-ins. They are weaving bright coronels for themselves to be worn in that land in which none shall say, "I am sick," and neither shall there be any more pain. Good friends, it matters little where we are, so long as our inner life is hid with Christ, and we keep in unison with the joy of his presence.—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

There is a good deal of difference between economy and meanness. The former is what should be observed in every household, and the latter is, to my mind, a positive sin.—Southern Churchman.

A Strong Woman

Iowa City, Iowa, Aug. 15, 1900

My wife was sick for three years. We tried everything without relief and spent much money. My wife tried Wine of Cardui and four bottles cured her. She took two more bottles, knowing she would have to work hard during the hay harvest. She attended to all her household duties and loaded and unloaded all the hay. This medicine gave her strength. Formerly she was weak and tired and could hardly get about, but since she has been taking Wine of Cardui she feels better and stronger than when 20 years of age. JOS. A. EISENHAFER.

Mrs. Eisenhafer had tried everything during her three years sickness and had spent considerable money. She was weak and could hardly get about for three years before she took

WINE OF CARDUI

Now, after taking the Wine of Cardui, she can work with her husband in the hay field. That is hard work, but it is not as injurious to a woman's health as labor in stores, factories and offices where thousands of girls are closely confined year after year. With the aid of Wine of Cardui a woman can do any reasonable work and enjoy good health. The health that Wine of Cardui brings makes a woman vigorous in body and mind. Freed from those terrible devastating pains a woman grows well and strong naturally. Wine of Cardui regulates the disordered menstruation and cures leucorrhœa, falling of the womb and periodical pains in the head and back caused by standing or sitting a long time in the same position. Thedford's Black-Draught puts the bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys and blood in proper shape. Greatly increased strength and endurance is the natural result. Most cases are cured quickly. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui and 25 cent packages of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Giant Flowering Caladium

Grandest foliage and flowering plant yet introduced. Leaves 3 to 6 feet long by 2 or 2½ feet broad; perfectly immune, and make a plant which for tropical luxuriance has no equal. Allied to this wonderful foliage effect are the mammoth lily-like blossoms, 12 to 15 inches long, snow-white, with a rich and exquisite fragrance. Plants bloom perpetually all summer in the garden, or all the year round in pots. Not only is it the grandest garden or lawn plant, but as a pot plant for large windows, verandas, halls, or conservatories, it rivals the choicest palms in foliage, to say nothing of its magnificent flowers. Thrives in any soil or situation, and grows and blooms all the year, and will astonish every one with its magnificence—so novel, effective, free growing and fragrant.

Place plants, which will soon bloom and reach full perfection, 25c. each; 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00 by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition.

Werlein Piano Club

INTRODUCING AND ADVERTISING

THE WERLEIN PIANOS

In placing the WERLEIN PIANO on the market, one month ago, in order to introduce and advertise it, we set aside 100 for that purpose—forming the WERLEIN PIANO CLUB; in other words, to advertise the Werlein Piano, we

Furnished Club Members $350 to $400 Pianos for Only $262.

No piano ever had such a reception, and we have found where WERLEIN Pianos have been used in a home they brought in other orders. In forming the Werlein Piano club we did not take into consideration the wide scope that could be reached from this city through the daily papers, and the Werlein Piano was put on the market by advertising, with the reputation of the WERLEIN HOUSE back of it.

We find in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi there are 249 towns with a population of 1000, 115 with a population of 2000, 45 towns have a population of 5000, and 21 with a population of over 10,000. In fact, in above towns there are over one million people, not counting the country and smaller places. All these people should know what the Werlein Piano is. Orders come pouring in for WERLEIN'S under the club plan, and at present writing about sixteen or seventeen members have subscribed over the 100. AT A MEETING of the PHILIP WERLEIN, LTD., yesterday it was decided to offer to the public in general, and ESPECIALLY towns not represented in Werlein Piano Club No. 1

Werlein Piano Club No. 2,

Of 100 Werlein Pianos for 100 Club Members at Only $262.

To introduce and advertise the Werlein Piano we saved in clean cash for members of Werlein Piano Club No. 1, $13,800, as follows:

100 Werlein Pianos, regular price	$400 each	$40,000
Net Saving to Club Members	$138 each, or	$13,800

AND EVERY MEMBER IS SATISFIED. Many have written in the interest of friends to secure instruments under the club plan. For and on account of above reasons the company decided to offer Werlein Piano Club Number Two, and in doing so will state plainly that the factory can only furnish one carload per week—about fifteen pianos. Orders will be filled as booked, and shipped or delivered in the city as promptly as possible. The terms under the club plan for $350 to $400 Werlein Pianos are

Cash or on payments of Twenty Dollars Cash and $1.50 per week (monthly if desired), 6 per cent interest. No discount for cash, except saving of interest. The only piano ever sold in the South at

ABSOLUTELY ONE PRICE.

We sincerely thank the public in general, and all members of WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER ONE for their confidence in the piano that bears our name. We will carry out every statement made in our announcements, and the WERLEIN PIANO will bear us out in every promise made in our endeavor to give you the most value for the money.

The books are now open for subscription in WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER TWO. Kindly place orders as quickly as possible, and make first and second choice as to woods—mahogany, walnut or oak—remit first payment, and order will be filled as promptly as possible.

From the New Orleans Picayune we clip the following figures, showing the progress of the United States during the last century. This, of course, is only a partial showing. We would be glad to give the whole article, but have not space at command. We quote: "The United States Treasury Bureau of Statistics has issued an abstract which, while it is made up principally of figures, contains much interesting information. For instance, it gives a view of the changes that have taken place in this republic during the century just closed—that is, from 1800 to 1900. It is shown that the gross area of the United States, exclusive of Alaska and Hawaii, has grown from 827,844 square miles in 1800 to 3,025,600 in 1900, and the population meantime from 5,308,483 in 1800 to 75,693,724 in 1900. The history of the foreign commerce is seen in a few figures. In 1800 the imports were $91,000,000 and the exports $71,000,000, imports exceeding exports by $20,000,000, or nearly 30 per cent.; in 1901 imports were $823,000,000 and exports $1,487,000,000; the excess of exports being $664,000,000, or 80 per cent. greater than the imports. Imports in 1901 were nine times as great as in 1800, and exports were twenty-one times as great as in 1800. This is a vast showing of material progress, and far surpasses any other national advancement of modern times. In another century it will be as far before 1900 as it is now beyond the figures of 1800."

The Germans in the United States, if reports are true, have been preparing to give Prince Henry, brother of the German Emperor, who is on a visit to our country, a grand reception. But they have been mightily set back. Prince Henry has caused it to be announced that during his visit he will speak only the English language. It is further announced that the Emperor has decreed that the Prince shall pay no attention to Germans who have left their native land for residence in the United States; that he was sending a representative to the Americans, not to the Germans. This strikes us as being a severe rebuke, and not altogether undeserved. If these Germans left their country for reasons of government, to escape military duty, as thousands of them have done, or to enjoy the greater liberty of Republican government, they are really entitled to nothing at the hands of Emperor William's representative. Nor does it savor of very great attachment to their adopted home and people to do public homage to a ruler they professed to have renounced the first opportunity they had. All their preparations will go for naught.

The most exciting news of the week, of an international character, was the announcement of the alliance between Great Britain and Japan. It struck the world as a surprise. The object of the alliance, it is given out, is to preserve China and Corea from the encroachments of Russia. In the settlement of the troubles with China, last year, it was agreed by all the powers represented not to disrupt the Chinese Empire. Russia joined in the agreement. But later on Russia occupied Manchuria, claiming that it was necessary to do so temporarily. The signs, however, indicate that the occupation is intended to be permanent, thus violating the promise made a year ago. To prevent this, and save the Chinese Empire, England and Japan have agreed to stand together. The ambition of Russia will thus be checked. And this alliance, it is said, means peace, for Russia would hardly go to war with China if she had also to fight both England and Japan.

A bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives to increase the salary of the President, Vice President, Cabinet officers, and members of Congress. It is not at all likely that the bill will pass as presented, but it may. An estimate we make, which is under rather than over the mark, if the bill carries, will increase the expenses of the law-making and executive branches of the government something near two and a quarter millions of dollars. That would go a good long way towards spending the treasury surplus that is now giving thoughtful statesmen so much anxiety. By the time so many salaries are increased, and the brewers and tobacco manufacturers secure their demands for tariff reduction, there will not be much surplus left.

The German Emperor may sometimes speak rashly and unadvisedly, but he is eminently practical, and goes about his work in a straightforward way. He has been more or less troubled recently with faith curists, Christian Scientists, etc., but he did not tolerate them long, nor even dally with them. He adopted the short method of getting rid of them, issuing an order that none of their kind should be allowed in or around his court. They may exercise the right of conscience without "let or hindrance," so long as they keep out of his way. This will give the new "cult" quite a back-set in official circles in Germany.

DRIVING DOWN STAKES—THE OTHER SIDE.

BY REV. H. W. WHITNELL

I notice that Bishop Morrison's admonition to the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference to drive down their stakes for four years, etc., is receiving considerable comment. It seems to be making rather a serious impression upon the minds of some of our brethren, and we, too, like the idea, but, unfortunately, fail to get much inspiration out of it, as it appears to us to be but one of those beautiful little speeches that sounds pleasing on Conference floors and looks well in print, but finds but little room in the realm of realities. It is very nice to talk about driving down stakes, tightening ropes, and so endearing ourselves to a people as to make a cabinet not dare to molest, etc.; it sounds so easy, and yet, strange to say, the very best men of our Conference are utter failures at the peg-driving business. If they drove any pegs at all, the cabinet certainly found no trouble in extracting them.

In looking over the Minutes of the last session of our Conference, I notice that out of the whole itinerant list, but one man was returned for the fourth year. Are there no peg-drivers in all this number? Did the idea of driving stakes never occur to the preachers of our Conference before? Have the many good and able ministers of this Conference been wholly ignorant of the great importance of endearing themselves to their parishioners, or have they been guilty of criminal negligence in this matter? I certainly can not believe it was either; yet the peg-pulling machine worked to perfection extracting the pegs and obliterating the holes from whence they came. It is indeed a nice theory. Wonder why it was not put into practice? A Bishop sustaining, by appointments, those who have driven stakes would certainly be a much stronger argument in support of the doctrine than a word of admonition. The record of our last Conference shows that about sixty per cent. of our men were moved, less than fifteen per cent. went back for the third year, and only one man for the fourth. In the Grenada district but one man (narrowly) escaped the stake-puller, and went back even for the second year.

We do not mean to say here that all these changes were not perfectly justifiable, and the appointments judiciously made, but be that as it may, in the face of this record the peg-driving business certainly does not have a very flattering outlook.

Mt. Pleasant, Miss.

AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

BY PROF. B E. YOUNG.

Miss Mollie A. Clark, of Pickens, Miss., has established a fund in memory of her father, who was a member of the Mississippi Conference. This fund will be called the Clark Memorial Fund, and will be a worthy monument to the memory of her revered father. Certainly no more appropriate remembrance could be devised.

We note with pleasure the appearance of the January Collegian. The young men in charge of its publication are sending out a worthy representative of the literary life of Millsaps College. No other man has done more to inspire the love of literature among our students than Prof. D H. Bishop, of the Department of English. It is with especial interest, therefore, that we read the leading article in this number, which comes from Mr. Bishop. It is a scholarly and thoughtful criticism of "The Right of Way," Gilbert Parker's famous work. The number contains many other contributions of merit. We note especially an editorial tribute to the character of the son of Bishop Morrison, Mr. Alex Morrison, who died recently at Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Black paid us a visit last week on his round of pastoral calls. Although Dr. Black has a membership of about seven hundred to look after, he does not neglect the Millsaps students or the Millsaps community. By his loving attention to his pastoral duties he has become a personal friend of each member of his church.

We were much gratified last week at a visit from ex-Senator Heidelberg, who was in Jackson on Supreme Court business. His son, H. B. Heidelberg, of the Junior class, is one of our foremost students.

Senator Hughes, a member of the Legislature now in session, is a loyal ex-student of Millsaps College.

The New Orleans Picayune, of last Saturday, contains a complimentary reference to our Mr. Ackland, whose work in landscape gardening has done so much to beautify our campus. We are glad to see Mr. Ackland's ability recognized.

Bishop Galloway visited the college this week upon a tour of inspection of the James Observatory and the adjacent grounds.

The recent intermediate examinations constituted a very severe ordeal for our students, but most of them successfully passed through safely. The opening of the second term brings several new students.

The Law Department is having another good session. Under Dean Edward Mayes and his able assistants, the work in this school has taken high rank throughout the State. A small proportion of each year's students live in Jackson, but most of them come from other sections, attracted by the reputation of the men who compose the faculty. Many of the students avail themselves of the privileges of the Academic Department while pursuing their law studies.

At the recent meeting of the Mississippi Historical Society, Prof. A. M. Muckenfuss, of our faculty, read an interesting paper upon "Industrial Mississippi in the Light of the Twelfth Census." Dr. Muckenfuss' paper contained some startling information concerning the strides that the State is making in manufactures and the arts.

Each year Millsaps sends several students to the professional departments of Tulane University. This year there are three members of the class of 1901 in attendance there. Messrs. H G. Fridge and J. S. Ewing are in the Medical School, while Mr. A. W. Fridge, who expects to practice law in New Orleans, is taking a post-graduate course in the Law School.

One of our most influential students is Rev. J. R Countiss, of the North Mississippi Conference, who takes his degree this year. Bro. Countiss is easily a leader in his studies, and does considerable literary work in other lines. A participant in all lines of college activity, he has exerted a fine influence among his fellows by the power of example. Though a man of family, he finds time to act as associate editor of the Collegian, and will represent us in the coming State oratorical contest. We shall be sorry to lose him and his family when he re-enters the pastorate at the close of this term.

IS IMMERSION MANDATORY?

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

"Circuit Rider" appreciates the kind words of scores of his brethren, and particularly Brother Armstrong, concerning the articles on baptism. Brother Armstrong, however, dissents from one statement, and in the ADVOCATE issue, of Feb. 5, says: "I think he ('Circuit Rider') is in error in one of his statements. He says the law requiring us to immerse our subjects is not mandatory. I have always so understood it, and can give one case to prove that I am correct. Rev. L. L. Pickett was located by the North Texas Conference because he would not immerse, and appealed the case to the General Conference, which body sustained the action of the Annual Conference."

The case of Rev. L L. Pickett does not prove the parenthetical clause of the ritual mandatory, for the simple reason that his appeal to the General Conference went by "default," as the following private letter just received from him explains. Brother Pickett, perhaps, will not object to an extract publicly given, viz: "I was not at the General Conference at the time my appeal was presented, but am told it simply went by default, the secretary of the North Texas Conference not having sent up the papers in the case. . . . I scarcely think there has ever been a real decision of the case at the General Conference. I cared nothing for the case; only taking the appeal at the request of others, and so did not follow up the matter."

Since Brother Pickett's case went by default, it can not be said that the action of the North Texas Conference was sustained. The M. E Church, South, will be placed in quite a predicament if ever the General Conference sustains any such proceedings.

In some former articles it was shown why the parenthetical clause of the ritual was and should be advisory. An additional argument is here made, viz: The majority of immersed candidates in the M. E Church, South, refuse to have their children baptized. Should the church make immersion compulsory upon the ministry when she knows that the immersed candidate will slap the doctrine of infant baptism in the face? Should the church require her ministers to do that which, when done, gives the candidate privilege to insult our Seventeenth Article of Religion? Is it consistent to locate a minister for refusing to practice immersion, and then turn round and wink at the immersed candidate who refuses to have his children baptized?

THAT RESOLUTION.

MR. EDITOR: I beg space for a statement anent one of the motions adopted by the Louisiana Conference at its late session in New Iberia.

1. Some three or four years past the Joint Board assessed against the districts a sum equal to ten per cent. of the claims upon that Board for the purpose of creating a Contingent Fund. The purpose of this fund was to meet claims which might arise in the interim of the Conference.

2. At New Iberia a donation of five hundred dollars from one of our female members was announced, and accepted by the Conference as the nucleus of an endowment fund.

3 Thereupon the announcement was made that there was (about) $300 of the Contingent Fund in the possession of the Board, and a motion was made and (if my memory is correct) carried to add that to the donation for the endowment fund.

4 Just at the close of the session it was stated that the Joint Board was ready to report, and that the Board had added the Contingent Fund to the collections for the year, and apportioned that also to the claimants upon the Board.

5. Such use of the Contingent Fund was objected to, and the report was withheld for correction.

6 Following this action, and for the purpose of settling the question of the disposal of this fund, I moved that the Contingent Fund be held by the Board for the uses for which it was created, and that no diversion of it be made except by a vote of the Conference.*

The resolution—or, more properly speaking, the motion—has been misunderstood, and worthy claimants on that fund have been estopped from securing the aid for which the fund was intended.

I am not positive as to the order, nor the amounts stated in the above facts, nor can I recall the verbiage of my motion; but I know the object of it was to keep the Contingent Fund for such contingencies as might arise before our next session. And that was the reason I gave for insisting on the adoption of my motion.

This statement is made for the information of several brethren who have written to me about the "resolution." Yours, J. A. PARKER.

*This motion was adopted by a very large majority of the members present.

A GENEROUS GIFT.

Rev. J. A Bishop has just added another to his numerous generous gifts to the church of his love.

Centenary Church has been conducting a prayer meeting in South McComb, and preparing the way for an enlargement of its work. The demand for a chapel is imperative. The greatest obstacle in our way was a suitable lot. This lot, centrally located, has just been donated by Bro. Bishop. The title is given in fee simple, and contains the trust clause. The lot is now worth $150, and is rapidly growing in value. The house, with seats, will cost us $550 We expect to hold services in the new chapel on the first Sunday in May. May God increase among us the number of men of "small means," who are willing to make "large gifts!"

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

Article VIII., Annual Minutes, page 14, requests all the auxiliary societies to "unite in the observance of 'Parsonage Day,' for the benefit of the needy parsonages." Feb. 28 has been appointed. How many preachers will give the sermon on "Home Missions" that day?

Attention is called to Articles XI. and XIII. also. Do not fail to raise amount of delegate's expenses before electing.

Our Conference will meet in Port Gibson the first week in April. Let us have a delegate from every society.

Miscellaneous Notes.

The Lake Charles (La.) Daily American, of Feb. 3, was a superb edition of twenty-six pages, and contained a full description, accompanied with many illustrations, of the business of the enterprising and growing town of Lake Charles. The illustrations were very fine. The publishers, Lake Charles Printing Co., with Mr. Wm. E. Krebs at the head, deserve the thanks of the citizens for thus giving their business and their town such an advertisement. The issue is No. 1442, Vol. 5. May the Daily American live long and prosper!

Our Orphans' Home at Water Valley is doing good work. It now has about seventy-five children to care for, and besides feeding and clothing them, it looks after their education and morals. It is also industrial. The boys work the garden and truck patches, and the girls cook and do housework. The institution deserves the patronage and prayers of every Methodist in the State.

An English preacher proposes a church for other things besides preaching. He would have a billiard-room, a smoking-room, a reading-room, and a free-and-easy room, and a room for lads to play games in. Whether Dr. Rainsford got his ideas from this man, or this man got his ideas from Dr. Rainsford, we do not know. We are sure that neither of them got their ideas from St. Paul.

It is now settled that Miss Roosevelt, the daughter of the President, will attend the coronation of King Edward, but she will not go in any representative character. She will attend simply as the guest of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, who will represent our government.

A new State House is being built at Jackson, Miss. It is said that, when completed, it will be, next to the Congressional Library at Washington, perhaps the most beautiful house in the country.

"And you have made little Brother Jackson a deacon in your church?" "Yes, sah. Dat is, he's a brevet deacon, sah." "And what's a brevet deacon, George?" "He's a deacon dat don't handle no money, sah."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Opportunities fly in a straight line, touch us but once and never return, but the wrongs we do others fly in a circle; they come back to the place from which they started.—T. DeWitt Talmage.

MOVING THE PREACHERS

BY REV. Q. A. OATS.

Experience has long since proven the itinerant system, as operated by our church, to be the best plan of securing an efficient pastorate. It is also capable of being worked with as much justice, and less friction and difficulty, than any other. This is conceded by thoughtful observers of all other Christian denominations. Yet we must not think it perfect, and that it may need no alterations or amendments, or that it may not be abused, either by the Bishops, the presiding elders, the preachers, or the people.

Our Bishop, in his address to the class for admission into full connection at our last Conference, gave sound advice when he told them, on going to their appointments, to drive down their stakes for a full four years. I take the Bishop to mean, they should take hold without thought of a limited stay, and entirely with reference to the good of the cause of Christ as an abiding institution, and not to their self-interests; that they should not refuse to engage in an enterprise, or to handle a difficulty because it would give them trouble, and probably no benefits; that they should not arouse unnecessary troubles because of expectation of shifting them to successors, or leave unsettled ones they could settle, on the same ground. In these respects the pastor should be governed without any reference to a limitation of either one or four years. He should drive the stakes as if he expected to stay forever, and execute all his plans in the same way.

Our Bishop could certainly not have intended to say preachers should be governed by an ambition to be known as "four-years' men" for the sake of the reputation, or because of any other personal interest. I am persuaded that one controlled by such a selfish ambition would be more injurious than the man who plans and acts from selfish motives on the idea of a more limited stay. It would lead the preacher to be in a measure out of sympathy with the main purpose of the itineraney, and to oppose its workings, so far as he may be concerned. This purpose is that every preacher shall be ready to be used where and when his services are most needed in the judgment of the Superintendents, whether it involves a change at the end of one day, or any other period within four years; it would lead him to resort to means to secure a personal influence, both with the appointing authorities and his church, without due reference to their wisdom or sense of justice; and in the end probably he would leave his charge in as much of an unsatisfactory condition as the man who calculated to move within a year. If the preacher is controlled by self-interest rather than devotion to the cause of Christ, there will be little difference in results whether he calculates to close in one year or in four.

Long observation has led the writer to the conviction that, as a rule, preachers are changed more frequently than is necessary, and in many instances with injury, both to the preachers and the church. In fact, unless grave reasons exist, they should not be moved, and it ought to be a settled principle never to move a man unless necessity demands it. Many things should be considered; first should be the good of the church; then the interest of the preacher and his family as regards morals and education of his children, health, and financial support; then his special preparation for greater effectiveness in other places. A consideration should also be conceded in the interest of other brother preachers. If one man can be moved without too great sacrifice to enable another to be better placed to meet his needs, he should be unselfish enough to be reconciled to it, for we all be brethren, and should never lose sight of the fact, or ignore the principle.

The Bishop's statement, in view of the result in the appointments made by him, seems a serious reflection on the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference. The minutes show that he moved at least seventy-five out of about one hundred, who were subject to appointment, not counting those admitted on trial, supplies, transfers, school presidents, students, and editor. One man of the whole number was found worthy of being returned for the fourth time.

If these changes as a principle were not in accord with the best interest of the church and preachers, somebody made a mistake. The writer believes with the Bishop's meaning, as he understands and interprets it, that the wholesale change was not for the best interest. A very limited number had to change because of the four years' limit, and others for reasons that could not be avoided. After deducting all these, the fact still stares us in the face that the mass were moved for reasons, if there really were any, purely local and personal, and not known outside of the Bishop's cabinet. Is it possible that such a serious matter is attributable to fifty or more of the preachers themselves?

RELIGION AND SCIENCE.

BY PROF J. M. SULLIVAN.

The so-called "Conflict between Religion and Science," whose spectral visage was more a subject of dread a quarter of a century ago than now, has not been a genuine conflict between religion and science, but between some would-be and some real theologians on the one hand, and some would-be and some real scientists on the other. Less than forty years ago it was not uncommon for some scientific lecturer to denounce religion from the rostrum or the press, presumably in the interest of the advancement of science; or for some theologian to cry out from the pulpit against the natural sciences, as if science itself were some awful bacillus atheisticus, or skepticoccus scientificus. As these contestants have become less dogmatic and more reasonable, less theological and more practical, less visionary and more careful, less prejudicial and more liberal-minded, the heat of the contest has diminished. Many grave fears have fallen short of realization, as error has given way to the truth of established facts and unquestionable experiences.

The developments of science have made possible larger appreciation of the wisdom and beneficence of the Almighty, while they have operated with "the messengers of the gospel" to 'illumine the dark places of the earth." The world's greatest scientists are those who are honestly striving to discover new facts, or a newer and better explanation of old facts, and making these a part of the world's capital for commercial, intellectual and moral improvement—not those who would establish some great temple of scientific theories, at whose shrine the lovers of nature may worship, laying their offerings on the altar of "an unknown God." Much of the so called conflict, however, has arisen from the contest over variously expressed views of cosmogony and organic evolution. A long string of leading about these things has not begotten a universal conviction, and the real point from which a "conflict" has arisen is that some of the widely accepted announcements of scientists have not seemed to be more with a literal acceptation of the translation, or even the original Hebrew of certain passages in the Old Testament. It is not my purpose to discuss, either historically or critically, these various opinions and claims, but two facts stand out as nuclei around which others may be gathered.

First. The entire universe—the earth and its cargo, from the center of its core to the outer limits of its atmospheric envelope, included—was created by the power of God in a way which we do not understand and which man, perhaps, never will understand.

Second. Much genuine information has been obtained by scientific study regarding the system among systems in our corner (only a little more than 700,000,000,000 miles in expanse, by way of photography) of the universe, as well as concerning the forces and processes by which many changes have been and are now being accomplished on and within the earth.

Until about the year 1500 A. D. it was generally thought that the earth was stationary, and that day and night depended on the real motion of the sun. Since the explanations made by Copernicus very little change has been made in our conception of the solar system, and it is only the uneducated who believe that the sun actually moves around the earth. But, some one will ask, if "the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day," how can that be in harmony with the interpretation of Copernicus or Kepler, or astronomers of our own time? Yet these questioners may be good Christians, and at the same time believe that the earth rotates on its axis once in twenty-four hours.

Again: The earth has, since the time of Copernicus, been given its true place among the planets as one of them, and found to be in very many respects similar to the others. All these bodies revolve about the sun in the same direction in elliptical orbits, the vector of each describing equal areas in equal times; all rotate on axes in the same direction; all are elongated at the equators, and flattened at the poles; nearly all have satellites moving in the same general direction; and from evidence derived by aid of the telescope, the spectroscope, the photographic plate, and meteoric stones, regarding the constitution of matter far beyond the solar system, these planets are almost universally considered to have a similar chemical composition. Jupiter, at least, gives evidence of a highly heated condition, though he is more than 480 millions of miles from the sun, and the shape and internal condition of the earth not unnaturally suggest the idea of a slowly cooling globe. Such facts, together with a study of the earth's physiographic features and processes, of fossil and petrified remains of animal and plant life, and of the relation of character, magnitude, and extent of various deposits to the dynamical agencies at work, have led many, some more and some less religious, to the conviction that the earth not only rotates on its axis, but has been rotating a longer time than any human chronology can fix; and, moreover, to the belief that the earth has been fitted for man's habitation and use by long periods of progressive development. Here, again, some of those who believe that the word translated 'day" in the first chapter of Genesis is correctly so translated, and has its full literal meaning, raise the cry of a conflict between religion and science.

In the first place, the promulgation of a few theories, which may, in reality, or only apparently, conflict with certain statements found in the Mosaic account of creation, does not constitute science. Nobody will question that the forces of nature operate in accordance with certain laws, chemical and physical, many, at least, of which it is possible for human intelligence to formulate, and surely, in the light of the wonderful developments made in the field of natural history and geology during the last quarter of a century, it must be recognized that nature's vast library contains inexhaustible volumes written in granite, in marble, in sandstone, and in clay, and illustrated by nature's own wonderful fossil remains, and even electrotypes. All of these things and all that go to establish the facts which underlie them is not inconsistent with the deepest piety and the most orthodox religious beliefs. Indeed, if it was something to David for the heavens to 'declare the glory of God,' should it not be something greater to those who enjoy and appreciate the blessings of the gospel that science has extended the vision and revealed creations and harmonies of which most likely David knew nothing and, best of all, explained to man his own physical nature, and how to apply to its needs and comforts a thousand helps and blessings for centuries unknown? If now, in the course of this scientific study, some conclusions seem to be inconsistent with certain passages in the Old Testament, the difficulty need not be saddled onto some critic's hobby of a "conflict" between religion and science.

In the second place, those who hold extreme views concerning the literal interpretation of the Scriptures may ignorantly shut out the real truth, when a less narrow view, consistent with their faith, might lead to the entertainment of facts which would enforce and adorn the teachings of the Scriptures.

In the next place, if prominent scientists have expressed skeptical and atheistic views in championing certain theories of their own or of another, either their theories have entered the annals of science as mere curiosities, or these men are opposed to religion in spite of their science, and not because of it. For example, the Roman poet, Lucretius (B. C. 98-B. C. 52), in his "De Rerum Natura," foreshadowed some modern scientific doctrines, among which may be mentioned: the correlation of physical forces, the atomic constitution of matter, and the relations of anabolism and katabolism in youth and old age. But he also claimed the eternity of matter, and was one of the first to champion the doctrine of natural selection. This poet of the old world denied a future life in the name of his scientific and unscientific theories, and has been called the "high-priest of atheism,"

"Who dropped his plummet down the broad,
Deep universe, and said, 'No God,' Finding no bottom."

Yet his doctrine of the eternity of matter was a mark of ignorance and blind superstition, and not dependent on scientific proofs, such as, for instance, establish that fundamental law of chemistry, the law of the indestructibility and conservation of matter. His denial of Providence and a future life, it has been suggested, was due to the condition of religion about him and its hollow teachings regarding the future life, and to the fact that "the Romans had no genius for religion." However this may be, it was certainly not because there was a conflict between religion and science. Most of the world's greatest scientists have been Christian, and many of them devoutly religious.

William Pengelly (1812 1894) England's great anthropologist, who may be called the father of the science of geology, was a man of strong faith as a Christian. It is said that on one occasion Pengelly was present at a reading club, of which he was a member, when the subject for the evening was 'Dicks' Christian Philosopher." The reader, coming to a geological section, remarked that "as geology was very likely to be extremely dry, and as many good people thought it dangerous, if not decidedly infidel in its teachings, he would propose that the selection should not be read." This was passed by acclamation, and the reader passed on to astronomy. As to the controversy of his time between geologists and theologians, Pengelly said, "For myself, I am satisfied that science can do nothing for the salvation of the soul, and that the Bible is able, through God's grace, to make me wise unto salvation."

The great physicist, Clerk-Maxwell, said that he "had scrutinized all the agnostic hypotheses he knew of and found that they, one and all, needed a God to make them workable."

Lord Kelvin, one of the greatest masters of physical science the world has ever produced, said, about thirty years ago, in closing an address before the British Association, "Overpoweringly strong proofs of intelligent and benevolent design lie around us, and if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific, turn me away from them for a time, they come back upon me with irresistible force showing to me through nature the influence of a free will and teaching me that all living things depend on one everlasting Creator and ruler."

Harvard's great botanist of the past century, Asa Gray, said, "However we may differ in regard to the earlier stages of religious development, we shall agree in this: that revelation culminated, and for us most essentially consists, in the advent of a Divine Person, who, being made man, manifested the divine nature in union with the human."

Yale's worthy geologist, James Dwight Dana, in his seventy fifth year (six years before his death), in writing to a clergyman, expressed his "faith in Christ as the source of all hope for time and for eternity," and said, "It is beginning to be seen more clearly than ever that science can have nothing to say on moral or spiritual questions; that it fulfils its highest purpose in manifesting more and more the glory of God."

The eminent scientist, George John Romanes, when quite young entertained skeptical notions about the existence of God, and later endeavored to prove that "the existence of God is wholly unnecessary to explain any of the phenomena of the universe." Before his death, however, he came to himself and to God, and wrote several essays on the relations of science and religion, expressing his faith in the Christian religion.

Hence we see that all this talk of a conflict between religion and science is as ill-founded as would be the claim of conflict between truths of conscious experience and truths of conscious observation. Fundamental facts can not be out of harmony, whether they be the truths of revealed religion, or facts written on the face of nature, both real for all time, but made a part of human knowledge by personal experience or observation. If there is any discrepancy, it must be between the errors of human ignorance and the verities of Divine Omniscience. May it not be said that if the deductions of science are true, they will stand, and if false, they will fall by the way, whatever theologians or anyone else may say of "a conflict," just as the great truths of the Christian religion have stood, and will forever stand, whatever scientists—credulous as to theories regarding natural phenomena, but skeptical towards the tenets of Christianity—may say?

The century just gone breathes to this one a great scientific impulse, which it behooves all interested in higher education to encourage and foster. Whatever, therefore, may be unduly claimed for the doctrines of science, the fact of the importance of the highest development of scientific theory and practice, both as a matter of pure knowledge and of industrial and commercial value, still remains.

"Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell;
That mind and soul according well,
May make one music as before,
But vaster."

OUR SUPERANNUATES.

MR. EDITOR: In the issue of the ADVOCATE, of JAN. 23, I notice an article headed, 'Our Superannuates." It is with the deepest emotions of veneration, love and pride that we look upon these words. As the world regards its heroes, distinguished in battle, soldiers who have braved hardships, and who have endured, without complaint, the fortunes of war, so we look upon our superannuates. We honor them, we love them, these veterans of the church; but in what way do we show this? As the Winter snows hem them in, and the sleet taps with icy fingers upon the window-panes of their comfortless homes, what assurance have they of our love?

When little more than a child, in the city of Vicksburg, an incident occurred which made a lasting impression upon my mind. A number of horses had, for many years, been in active service in the fire department there. They were intelligent, well-trained animals, whose faithfulness and sagacity had contributed much to the success of the department in saving life and property. When these horses were no longer able to work, they were superannuated, or, as I was told more explanation of the word, they were allowed to retire on a pension, having grown old in the service of the city, and having been useful in saving life and property.

When 'Firemen's Day' came around, with its annual procession parade, a thrill ran from my head to my finger tips at sight of the superannuated horses, hung with flowers, and wreathed in garlands of laurel and bay. They stepped out proudly, if feebly, and cheer after cheer went up wherever they came into sight, as the procession moved along. These horses were as well cared for as when they pulled the engines to scenes of heroic effort at all hours and under any conditions. They tell us that it is some time before they can realize that they are no longer on duty, and they are seen to hasten toward the engine-houses at every alarm of fire.

Old soldiers tell us that it was not the danger or the hardships of war that they most dreaded; it was the fear of receiving a wound that might disable and disqualify them for service. Probably none but a soldier can properly appreciate the feelings of our heroes of the cross when they are brought to realize that they can no longer engage in active work. How hard it must be to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord!

To a man accustomed to a busy life, this sudden dropping out of the ranks, what must it mean to him? He goes back to his home. Home? He has no home. Since he entered the ministry he has known only temporary abodes, and even this is now denied him. The little pittance that is sent from the Conference collections is expected to keep soul and body together. The energies of his young manhood and the strength of his middle life have been given unreservedly to his church and his God, and he is left in his old age and broken health without the comforts of life. But he goes back; he looks about and finds at last a comfortless place. It is badly located and out of repair, but it is a sort of shelter, where he may tarry until the death angel comes to take him away from the sorrow and the desolation of it.

Can the church look upon this picture and fail to recognize her obligations? Can we sit by our cheerful firesides, knowing that theirs are cheerless? Can we enjoy a bountiful meal, knowing that they have barely the necessities of life? God forgive us, and help us, as a church and as individuals, to do our duty in this matter. CHAMPION.

A Glance at Our Domestic Mission Territory in the North Mississippi Conference.

It is rather painful to take a casual glance at facts and figures recorded in the Minutes of our last Annual Conference. The men who served and are serving these hard and difficult fields in our Conference, do not get too much sympathy or encouragement in the prosecution of their work; and the greatest is, perhaps, in a financial way. No man can preach as he should, when he knows that wife and children are in need, and may be suffering for the want of food or clothing. While he is duty bound to meet his requirements as a pastor, and being so engaged, necessitates his absence and help, that oftimes the wife and mother's life is like widowhood, and the children orphans.

Economy is a stinter, not expected to die even with old age, and has reigned with a steady hand, and will continue to do so a long while yet in these fields of long cultivation. But neither because of that, nor other phenomenon, will these fields be neglected. God has called and sent forth many to become faithful ambassadors of the cross from the homes of his humble poor. Perhaps another section is so productive of preachers; yet, in looking over these figures and considering these facts as they are, the question is, How can these men live on such meager salaries, especially those who received so small a recompense as the minimum, with others of close approximation? We find that twenty-four charges were aided by the Domestic Mission Board. The total sum paid ranged from $660 down to $162 (this includes the amounts paid by the charges they served).

Then there were nine other charges that were set aside by the Board that ranged from $181 50 down to $37 80 all of the nine being served by supply exception. Many of the charges that certainly need more help than they get. I hear, 'A word to the wise is sufficient, for goodness sake,' a word may be as good as a deed; by your silence, we all like friends who speak for the help we need here. The domestic mission assessment should be raised in full, and all the needy charges aided at the earliest possible moment. Will not all rally to this end? H.

Fidelity, not success, regulates the final reward.—G. R McDuff.

All Stuffed Up

This is the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FOWLES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss

To Whom All Communications For This Department Must Be Sent.

Mississippi Conference Sunday-School Convention.

This Convention will be held at Utica, Miss., on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 24, 25, 26, 27. The opening session will be on Monday night. Prof. Hamill will be in attendance, and will hold an Institute from Monday night to Wednesday night, inclusive, and on Thursday there will be a Convention for miscellaneous business, reports, etc.

The Sunday-school Board preferred another date, but they were anxious to have Prof. Hamill, and owing to the pressure upon his time this was the best date he could give.

Prof. Hamill furnished a programme, which is an exceptionally good and interesting one, and the Sunday-school Board, in assigning the different subjects, tried to get the best local talent to be had in the Conference. They desired to place no one on the programme who would not promise to make preparation and be present, unless something unforeseen should prevent their attendance. We think those who have been asked to prepare papers or talks ought to make some sacrifice, if necessary, in order to be present. No pains will be spared to make the occasion instructive, and the prayers of all Christian people are asked that it may be thoroughly spiritual. The programme will be published at an early day.

EXAMINATION

A competitive examination on the Book of Acts will be held at the Sunday-school Convention which meets at Utica, as above noted. The contestants must not be over eighteen years of age, and the examination will be upon the first sixteen chapters of Acts. That will cover the Sunday-school lessons up to July 1, and the examination will be not only upon the lessons themselves, but also upon the intervening incidents mentioned, the intention being to get at the purpose, or object, the historical setting and the lessons taught by that portion of the book.

The first prize will be a five-dollar gold piece, and the second prize a Teacher's Bible. The object of the examination on the part of those having it in charge is to stimulate Bible study by our young people. If it has that effect, they will feel amply repaid for the time and money expended.

REPORTS.

A blank will be sent to every pastor and superintendent in the Mississippi Conference whose name and address is known, and they are requested to have it filled out, and either take or send it by their delegates, or by mail, to the Sunday-school Convention at Utica. The secretary of the Board, Rev. Jno. D. Ellis, Newton, Miss., has endeavored to get the name and post office of every superintendent in that Conference, but so far has failed to hear from all the pastors. We hope this will stir them up to send in the names.

The Sunday-school Board need the statistics asked for in the blanks to aid them in their work. They sincerely desire to be useful to the schools of the Conference, and they need the information to give them an intelligent idea of the condition of the schools of the Conference. Let there be a general response to Bro. Ellis' request.

Every pastor and superintendent in the Mississippi Conference is a member of the Sunday-school Convention, by virtue of their office, and the schools are entitled to one delegate besides for each twenty-five pupils enrolled, but schools with a smaller enrollment are entitled to a delegate. We hope every school in the Conference will be represented. Let's tax the entertaining capacity of the good people of Utica to the utmost.

We trust our readers in the Louisiana and North Mississippi Conferences will pardon us for devoting all our space to the Utica Convention. We will be glad to serve them in a like manner, and hope they will use us at any time for their conventions.

The Conference Minutes.

Two months have elapsed since Conference, and still they are not published. Other Conferences bring theirs out in three or four weeks, but ours are delayed until about one-fourth of the year has expired. This delay is caused by a superabundance of surplus matter which has no relative bearing upon what the Conference does in its session.

The "Annual" is a misnomer. The name Mr. Wesley gave to the records of his Conferences was Minutes. The American Conferences have held on to this good old name until this day, and do not let us go back upon this good old Methodist usage. The word "annual" embraces much more than what the Minutes are intended to contain. They are certainly not intended to be a photograph album; not biographies, but memoirs; not a book of travels, but facts as to what the preachers have done—nothing more. It is time to cut short further advance in this direction; so all thinking people will conclude. If there is a desire for the likenesses of all the preachers, and a short biography of each one, do as the North Georgia Conference has done: Prepare such a volume, and sell it for what it is worth; but please do not lug these into the Minutes.

The next Annual Conference ought to say by resolution what should be included in the Minutes, and about what length of time they will give the publisher to bring them out. They should rescind their action years ago, requiring the preachers to take up a collection for their publication, and do as the North Georgia Conference: Let every preacher subscribe for as many copies as he wants, and let him take the risk of selling them. Asking the membership to pay for their publication, when they get little benefit from them, does not seem just to any unbiased judgment. Each superannuate should be furnished with one copy.

The Woman

Who is discouraged by a condition of ill-health which fails to yield to the treatment of local physicians will be glad to know she can consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. In a little more than thirty years, Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., assisted by his staff of nearly a score of physicians, has treated and cured hundreds of thousands of weak and sick women. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"After being subjected for some time to an annoying female trouble," says Mrs. Minnie Tilloison, of Potomac, Vermillion Co., Ill., Box 150, "I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, who at once understood my suffering, and advised me to take his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and use also his 'Lotion Tablets' and 'Suppositories.' After using his medicines eight or nine months I was completely cured.

"I am grateful to Dr. Pierce for his advice and the kind and encouraging letters he wrote to me. I would advise any woman suffering with female disease, to consult him. Prompt and respectful attention will be given and good advice received by so doing."

Fannin, Miss.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I am entering upon my third year as pastor of the people of Fannin charge. The outlook is encouraging, especially in and around Fannin. Our Sunday-school, prayer and class meetings are all moving off well, and are well attended.

Feb 6 we organized a Woman's Home Mission and Parsonage Aid Society, with ten names to start with. The good Lord was with us, and consequently we had a real spiritual time.

Our first Quarterly Conference which came off Jan. 11, was well attended, and reports were good. Our faithful presiding elder, Bro. Holloman, whom we all love, was with us in the Spirit of the Master. Pray for us.

Your brother, H. P. LEWIS.

P. S.—I second Bro. Armstrong's move to "promote Circuit Rider," and request him to have his articles on baptism published in pamphlet form," etc. H. P. L.

We can not make the world quiet about us; its noise can not be hushed; we must always hear its clatter and strife. We can not find anywhere in the world a quiet place to live in where we shall be undisturbed ourselves. We can not make people around us so loving and gentle that we shall never have anything harsh, unkindly or unkind to offend us. The quietness must be in us, in our own heart. Nothing else will give but the peace of God. We can have this peace, too, if we will simply take it.—Westminster Teacher.

All one's life is a music, if one touches the notes rightly and in time. —John Ruskin.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1902.

A correspondent of the Southern Churchman touches his brethren of the Episcopal Church in a tender place when he tells them that the pulpits of other denominations are closed against them because of the prejudices which have been engendered against them by their own restricted pulpits. He says, "We have no right to grumble, for we reap as we have sown." The whole trouble, he informs us, "lies in the question of ordination." Certainly. And could they show themselves to be decended in an unbroken line of succession from the apostles, there would be very little trouble about ordination.

The good Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church who has been sent to the Philippine Islands desires it understood that he has not gone there to proselyte the Roman Catholics, but that he "will receive those worthy who decline to accept the sacraments" at the hands of Romish priests. As his hands will not be full in attending to such, he proposes "to devote much of his time and attention to arrivals from the United States, who settle in the new possessions," the great majority of whom are, doubtless, good Protestants, not of his faith. Of course, he will not proselyte them!

The Epworth Era says: "The man who suddenly becomes rich is likely to experience some sudden changes of opinion along with his altered fortune. This will not argue the correctness of either his former or latter thinking, but will illustrate the fictitious grounds of most human judgments." Just so. The loud-mouthed socialist, in the day of his poverty, plead for a community of goods, but when, by inheritance, he came into possession of a few hundred dollars, suddenly adopted the idea that every man had a right to enjoy his personal fortune, and turned from his old companions. It is not stated that his old friends were converted to his new views.

There are some who hope to see their way back to the undivided days of the Apostolic Church. We have noticed that this hope is expressed by those who cling tenaciously to opinions which close the door against both organic union and Christian fraternity. It has always seemed to us that, if union were as desirable as it is supposed to be by its advocates, they would at least take some steps in that direction. There are several denominations that indulge such a hope, but they are vain enough to suppose that all other churches are going to unite with them. It is a pity that intelligent people will allow themselves to be deceived with the idea that they are the only scriptural models of faith and practice.

HE GIVETH MORE GRACE.

God gives grace to men as they need it, and the store from which he draws is inexhaustible. We think this quite in keeping with the sense of the Holy Scriptures. St. Paul said: "Unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." "The Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." St. James said: "He giveth more grace." There is no reason why any man, saint or sinner, should conclude that, so far as he is concerned, his grace has been spent, and that it is impossible for him to receive a fresh supply.

Sometimes under stress of temptation, or the weariness of the flesh, the moral skies of Christians are darkened, and they lose their joy and peace, and come to the conclusion that their trouble is caused by the Spirit being grieved. At the same time they are conscious of having done no wrong nor omitted any duty. No matter what has produced this feeling, there is no reason why one should give up in despair under the impression that God is displeased, and is about to withdraw his presence. The sun in the heavens is often obscured by clouds. It is necessary as well as antecedent to refreshing showers. But the sun is still shining, and will again show his face when God's purpose has been accomplished through the medium of the clouds. So occasionally the moral skies of Christians are darkened, but that does not prove that God is angry and about to desert them. He tries his children. They ought to know that he will not try them, nor suffer them to be tried above that which they are able to bear.

David seems to have suffered under spells of despondency. Whether he could account for them or not, or looked upon them as part of his schooling, he never lost heart or hope, nor did he charge God foolishly. He maintained his faith: "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God." Why should not Christians be as trustful and as hopeful as this holy man? Religion is worth but little to us if we can not trust God as well in the dark as in the light. "We walk by faith, not by sight." The Lord giveth grace.

Often real trouble comes and men need sustaining grace. They lose their health, and life becomes a burden. They lose their property, and without resources or credit, they must apply themselves to manual labor, which is the hardest kind of a trial to one who all his life has been blessed with plenty. His friends forsake him. This is crushing to his sensitive spirit. Those nearest and dearest to him sicken and die. He lays his loved ones in the grave. The light of his home has gone out—his hopes are blasted forever. These are troubles indeed In the anguish of his soul he cries out: "My burden is heavier than I can bear!" But his cry is the expression of the faithless and doubting heart. May he not trust God and look for grace?

Christians pray for deliverance from sorrow, pain, affliction. So did St. Paul, who had "a thorn in the flesh." Paul meant not to express any feeling of rebellion. Neither do Christians. The Lord did not answer Paul's prayer as he desired, nor does he always grant the requests of good people to day, but he says to all as he said to the apostle, "My grace is sufficient for thee." That assurance should give relief to any soul, even in the deepest sorrow. And when God assures us that he giveth more grace and strength according to our day, there ought to be real happiness. We ought to be prayerful and trustful whether we walk in the sunshine or in the shade. God will never leave nor forsake us.

A MEMORIAL.

The following memorial to the General Conference, in reference to the licensing of preachers, was adopted by the North Mississippi Annual Conference at its last session:

Amend Paragraph 164 of the Discipline by striking out "District," and inserting "Quarterly."

Amend Paragraph 165 by striking out 'Quarterly Conference of the Charge," and inserting "Church," and so changing the form of license as to make it conform to this amendment.

Strike out Paragraph 74 of the Discipline

Amend Paragraph 83 of the Discipline by substituting the following words: 'To license proper persons to preach, and renew their licenses annually, when, in its judgment, their gifts, grace and usefulness will warrant the renewal. All votes to license shall be by ballot."

Attest: T. W. LEWIS, Sec.
Winona, Miss., Dec. 9, 1901.

We heartily endorse the above memorial. It is evident after eight years trial that the law which transferred the licensing of preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference has not worked to the advantage of the church. It has resulted in the decrease of the number of local preachers, and has not succeeded in giving us a better class of men. We can, without loss of self respect or dignity, or in any other way, go back to the old law. The demands of the time are such that no man thinks of entering the ministry without proper educational qualifications. The Quarterly Conference, under the direction of a competent presiding elder or preacher-in-charge, is quite able to guard the door. Besides, the great majority of those who purpose entering the itinerancy take a college or university course, and this doubly assures the church of recruits qualified to meet the demands of the law and the times.

The local preacher has not yet ceased to be a useful factor in our economy. He is still needed. This our records show. The General Minutes give the names of four hundred and fifteen local preachers employed in the pastorate during the year 1901. This shows one local preacher employed for every fifteen in the itinerancy. These figures indicate that we can not afford to dry up this source of supply.

A REMINISCENCE

One of our most thoughtful and earnest preachers said to us a few days ago: "We seldom hear sermons now on the law. Future punishment is not often mentioned." The remark brought to mind one of the noted preachers of the Memphis Conference, who long since entered into rest, the Rev. John Moss. He had few superiors. In some respects he had no equal. He was equal to any occasion, anywhere and at any time. He had no hobbies, no favorite themes. He handled one subject about as well as another, and spared no pains in preparation. He preached with equal ease to a city congregation and a small backwoods crowd. He was as exact in the use of language and as dignified before the latter as the former. He excelled as a camp meeting preacher. On such occasions he delighted to dwell on the great doctrines of the gospel. The strongest sermon the writer ever heard on the direct influence of the Holy Spirit was preached by him at old Hickory Flat Camp Ground, twenty-five or thirty miles east of Oxford, Miss. It was, indeed, a great sermon.

He had one sermon on hell that he frequently preached during revival seasons. As a rule, the people who heard the sermon would sit and listen as if in terror, lest the earth would open and let them down quick into the pit. Nothing more terrific than his portrayal of hell and the agonies of the damned was ever heard. To his astonishment, and of all others present, on one occasion the people shouted under the discourse. Nobody could explain it. The preacher himself was at a loss to tell why a shout was raised. Only one man attempted an explanation; that was Arthur Davis. When informed of the strange occurrence he quickly replied: "There is nothing strange about that. The people are out of hell, and they are glad of it. They have a right to shout." A few such preachers as John Moss would do the church no harm now. Shall we see his like again?

THE FIRST DEACONESSES.

A good woman in Kentucky has discovered that all the women engaged in prayer in the "upper room" on the day of Pentecost, were deaconesses—"the first deaconesses of the church." Among these holy women was "Mary the mother of Jesus." This scholar calls these women deaconesses simply because they ministered unto the Lord—an order of deaconesses not at all objectionable. We have hundreds of thousands of such in all our churches. Every wise man is married to one. If he is not, he ought to be. But our sister also finds that the command, "Go ye into the world and teach all nations" (being a Greek scholar, we presume she has the commission properly translated), quite as binding on the women as on the apostles. Else she says, "Why, then, was the power of the Holy Ghost come upon all of these?"—the women who were in the upper room. It is hard for some of our sisters to separate preaching from the work of the deaconess. And the whole movement for the order of consecrated deaconesses tends in that direction just as certainly as does the work in the Salvation Army.

The leaders in this movement disclaim any intention to inaugurate a class of women preachers Some of them say: If this is to be the outcome, we will have nothing to do with it. Then they had better instruct their followers how to write, or what to write, for the public prints, and stops such utterances as this: "Like Peter and John, deaconesses first received their authority in the upper room, on that memorable day when the Spirit gave them boldness" What folly some people are guilty of in their efforts to sustain an idea, or to advance a cause.

A FORCED RESIGNATION.

Prof. Charles W. Pearson, who has for a long time occupied the chair of English in North Western University at Evanston, Ill., has been forced to resign his position. A few weeks since he took occasion in a public way to deny the truth of miracles as recorded in the Scriptures, affirming them to be purely mythical or allegorical. Prof. Pearson being a Methodist, and engaged as an instructor in a Methodist institution, created a stir in all religious circles. Protests against his utterances were heard on every side. The Methodist press generally condemned his teachings, and questioned the wisdom of continuing him longer in the institution. The trustees have taken no action, and perhaps none will be necessary, as public sentiment has accomplished what the trustees would have been compelled to do.

The professor justifies his course. Indeed, if we rightly interpret his words, he sought to become a reformer. His published statement was to the effect that belief in miracles constitutes one of the drawbacks to the success of the gospel. He would advance the truth by knocking from under it one of its main supports. Such is the end of "higher criticism."

Prof. Pearson purposed a reform in religion, possibly in the Methodist Church, but he says his principles were not welcome. The proposed reform is something like the reform Drs. Parkhurst and Rainsford, and Bishop Potter propose in New York, a reform in the interest of irreligion. The learned professor having joined the ranks of the enemy, of course, will do his reforming outside the church.

PRAYER FOR NEWSPAPERS.

Not long since the chaplain of one of the Houses of Congress offered a prayer for the newspapers of the country? This was thought to be of sufficient importance to be made known, and accordingly the fact was telegraphed all over the United States. The matter was treated respectfully, if not seriously, by some papers, and was made light of by others. But why should not prayer be made for newspapers? They are not conducted by men who are sinners above all who dwell in the land, but they are not sinless nor infallible. They are largely the moulders and directors of public opinion, and stand shoulder to shoulder with their fellow-citizens in sustaining the public and private enterprises of the country. They need all the help they can get. They would be the better off if all good people constantly kept them in mind and carried them to the throne of grace. It would be in exact accordance with the apostolic injunction that prayers and thanksgiving and supplication "be made for all men." It ought to be a satisfaction to editors to know that, though many are careless and indifferent themselves, and neglect their known duty, there are thousands of good people everywhere praying for them every day.

OUR HELPING FUND.

A dollar added to our helping fund is often a timely relief. A few days ago there came a letter from an aged subscriber who had been a reader of the ADVOCATE for many years. But notwithstanding it had been a welcome visitor so long, the letter requested us to discontinue the paper, as the writer no longer possessed the means of paying for it. The next letter we opened, from a dear and valued lady friend, contained money for the renewal of her own subscription, and three dollars for our helping fund. That friend is not rich in any worldly sense, but, as we happen to know, is constantly laying up treasure in heaven. She will be rich in the future. May the Lord increase the number of such generous souls! We thank this friend and several others for thus remembering the needy.

THE WERLEIN PIANO HOUSE.

We again call the attention of our readers to the Werlein Piano House of New Orleans. This is one of the oldest institutions of the kind in the city, and has a long and honorable record. Mr. Werlein offers pianos on the most favorable terms. Turn to his advertisement and read the particulars. We hope those in need of a good instrument will correspond with Mr. Werlein. His club offer is unexcelled.

AN INTERESTING BOOK.

"Twenty Months in Japan," by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of the Mississippi Conference, is a little book of great interest. It presents in a charming way what Bro. Hawkins saw and what he did while a missionary in the 'Sunrise" Kingdom. It tells much of the social life and the religious condition of Japan. A reading will instruct and please both young and old. We hope it may have an extensive circulation. See notice in another column. The book is made up of eighty-six pages with sixteen illustrations. Price, cloth binding 40 cents; paper covers 25 cents. Address the author, at Centerville, Miss.

BOOK NOTICE.

SUGGESTIVE ILLUSTRATIONS ON THE GOSPEL OF JOHN For the Use of Pastors, Sunday school Teachers, Leaders of Prayer Meetings, and the Home. By Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D. D. A. J. Holman & Co., Philadelphia

The author of this book of more than five hundred pages is well known to the Sunday-school workers everywhere as the author of Peloubet's Select Notes on the International Lessons. The purpose in this volume was to bring together the notes and illustrations on the Gospel of John that have heretofore been brought out in the Annual notes, thus forming a compact and permanent commentary. The illustrations are numerous, and will be found helpful to everyone who desires to study the Gospel by St. John.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Lambuth, from all accounts, has been doing good work in the West, visiting the churches and encouraging the preachers.

The address of Rev. W. W. Graves, pastor of Westville charge, Mississippi Conference, is Jackson, and that of Rev. R. W. Thurman, junior preacher is Whiteville, Miss

Rev. N. F. Heffernan is comfortably located in his new charge at Campti, La., and is "having a good time." We understand by this that he is prospering, soul and body.

We thank Rev. B. P. Fullilove for a kind and pressing invitation to visit his charge, and to the hospitalities of his home. We hope to enjoy the privilege some time during the Summer.

Bishop Galloway's services are as much in demand at home as abroad, and are quite as much appreciated. A recent sermon preached by him, at First Church, Jackson, Miss, is spoken of by his friends as equal to any he ever delivered in that city.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens and wife will leave this week for New York. Brother Ahrens goes to New York as representative of the Daily Picayune at the Press Reception in honor of Prince Henry of Prussia. May they have a pleasant time, and a safe return.

We are in receipt of a delightful personal letter from Dr. Chas. F. Evans, of Versailles, Ky. His many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi will be glad to learn that he is still active and useful, and planning for larger work and success in the future.

Rev. M. B. Corrigan, recently transferred to the Louisiana Conference, but who declined to serve the appointment to which he was assigned, has entered upon the practice of medicine at Camden, Ark. He was a successful practitioner before entering the ministry.

Bishop Morrison spent Sunday, the ninth, in Birmingham, his special mission being to re open St. John Church, which had been remodeled. He preached morning and evening, the Alabama Christian Advocate says, with fine effect. The same Advocate says the Bishop will make his home in Birmingham.

A pleasant note from Dr. T. B. Holloman, the presiding senator (Twentieth Century New Testament in Modern English) of Jackson district, brings good tidings. The brethren all at their posts, good representation at Quarterly Conferences, noticeable increase in pastors' salaries in some cases—everybody hopeful. The only drawback has been the bad weather.

North Mississippi Conference

To the Missionary District Secretaries of the North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: I understand that we are to be item gleaners and reporters in our respective districts for the ADVOCATE on the subject of missions. We are also to be agitators and missionary fire-builders. We shall need the enterprise of faith—that is, to have the art of doing things, and suggesting a variety of methods to do things, and when all human plans fail, to fall back upon the divine plan. We are to be mediums of communication between our co-workers. If anyone of them should have or discover a successful plan, we are to pass it on for the benefit of the brotherhood. We must urge specially the adoption of a system of giving that will secure the assessments in full as the minimum. If we work a commendable system at all, we could hardly pay less than the assessments. They amount to so little per member to be expected of a liberal people who have any business methods at all.

I suggest the following system as worthy of trial where the pastor, Official Board and people have the proper respect, confidence and consideration for each other and the cause of Christ: Let the pastor, with the Official Board, apportion the assessment to the membership, including every man, woman, and child in the church, to cover the amount with a margin. Assess, of course, with consent, prorating on the basis of assessment made for the salaries by the Board of Stewards. By having a good conscience and a good system, and doing gladly as from the heart the work assigned us by the assessments for missions, we will do as much good, no doubt, in increasing the prosperity of the church at home as the money sent abroad could possibly do for the nations lying in heathen darkness.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will not make new lungs, but it will cure incipient consumption and lung affections. Price 25c.

Change of Date.

On account of Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention at Utica last week of March, Bro. Adams has changed date of our District Conference to April 23 27.

ADVOCATE OFFER.

Magic White Soap, advertised in our columns, is manufactured in New Orleans by a responsible company, who can be relied on to do what is promised. The soap is what is claimed for it. There is none better on the market. A fair trial has been given it at the home of the editor, and the good wife, who knows what soap is, says "it is about the best she ever used." Our lady readers would do well to give this soap a trial. Send for a box of twenty bars—one dollar; charges paid by the manufacturer.

We make the following offer: We will furnish one box of this soap, and the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for one year, for $2.50, to new subscribers. We make the same offer to all who will pay up back dues, and send $2.50 additional. Cash must accompany the order. Address

Inducements to Churches to Buy Bells

The C. S. Bell Company, of Hillsboro, Ohio, are offering special inducements to churches and schools to buy bells. Notwithstanding that for the past several months the materials used in the manufacture of bells have steadily appreciated in value and the finished product has correspondingly been advanced, this company is disregarding the market in selling bells to churches and schools at the old rate. They are also offering to churches large donations on all orders received and furnish free blanks for taking up subscriptions. A large increase in business has naturally been the result.

The Bell Company is one of the largest bell founding concerns in the United States. They cast all kinds of bells—church, school, alarm, farm and factory, and from 50 to 3,000 pounds in weight. Their great reputation has been built up by their casting formula—a mixture of pure steel with the well known Crystal Metal mixture. It is claimed that these steel alloy bells cast by this formula have a more beautiful and clearer tone, perfect pitch and are much stronger than the ordinary bell. All these bells are fully warranted and a thirty days' trial allowed. The company will send, postpaid, their large illustrated catalogue to anyone intending to purchase a bell.

A Word to Our Friends.

This ADVOCATE is the official organ of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. As such, it appeals to all Southern Methodists in the two States for support. But its appeals can reach our people only through our preachers. We are absolutely dependent on them to present its claims, and to secure subscriptions and renewals. The editor, who is also publisher, has his hands full in looking after the business, and preparing and selecting matter for its columns. There is but little time to go abroad and canvass personally. To do so might add a few names to our subscription list, but it would prove detrimental to the paper, for no man can edit properly and publish a paper such as is demanded by our patrons, and at the same time spend one-half or one-third of every week in drumming for business.

The present method of supporting our church papers was inaugurated generations ago. It is kept up still, and is universal in Methodism. Hence our appeal to our preachers is nothing new or strange. They have stood by the old ADVOCATE in the past, and when we tell them that it still needs their help, we believe they will stand by it now, and in the future. At the recent Conferences the paper was commended, and pledges made in its behalf. We pray that the pledges may be redeemed, and that the brethren will begin at once.

We would be glad could the ADVOCATE be put into every Methodist family within our bounds. That we know, though, is next to impossible. But it is not too much to ask our preachers to urge every official member to become a subscriber.

Dear brethren, remember the ADVOCATE; bear it on your mind and heart, work with the editor, and let us make the year 1902 the best in our history.

With prayers and best wishes, I am,

Your friend and fellow-servant,
JOHN W. BOSWELL.

INTRODUCING AND ADVERTISING

THE WERLEIN PIANOS

In placing the WERLEIN PIANO on the market, one month ago, in order to introduce and advertise it, we set aside 100 for that purpose—forming the WERLEIN PIANO CLUB; in other words, to advertise the Werlein Piano, we

Furnished Club Members $350 to $400 Pianos for Only $262.

No piano ever had such a reception, and we have found where WERLEIN Pianos have been used in a home they brought in other orders. In forming the Werlein Piano club we did not take into consideration the wide scope that could be reached from this city through the daily papers, and the Werlein Piano was put on the market by advertising, with the reputation of the WERLEIN HOUSE back of it.

We find in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi there are 249 towns with a population of 1000, 115 with a population of 2000, 45 towns have a population of 5000, and 21 with a population of over 10,000. In fact, in above towns there are over one million people, not counting the country and smaller places. All these people should know what the Werlein Piano is. Orders come pouring in for WERLEIN'S under the club plan, and at present writing about sixteen or seventeen members have subscribed over the 100. AT A MEETING of the PHILIP WERLEIN, LTD., yesterday it was decided to offer to the public in general, and ESPECIALLY towns not represented in Werlein Piano Club No. 1

Werlein Piano Club No. 2,

Of 100 Werlein Pianos for 100 Club Members at Only $262.

To introduce and advertise the Werlein Piano we saved in clean cash for members of Werlein Piano Club No. 1, $13,800, as follows:

100 Werlein Pianos, regular price	$400 each	$40,000
100 Club Members secured them at	$262 each	$26,200
Net Saving to Club Members	$138 each, or	$13,800

AND EVERY MEMBER IS SATISFIED. Many have written in the interest of friends to secure instruments under the club plan. For and on account of above reasons the company decided to offer Werlein Piano Club Number Two, and in doing so will state plainly that the factory can only furnish one carload per week—about fifteen pianos. Orders will be filled as booked, and shipped or delivered in the city as promptly as possible. The terms under the club plan for $350 to $400 Werlein Pianos are

Cash or on payments of Twenty Dollars Cash and $1.50 per week (monthly if desired), 6 per cent interest. No discount for cash, except saving of interest. The only piano ever sold in the South at

ABSOLUTELY ONE PRICE.

We sincerely thank the public in general, and all members of WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER ONE for their confidence in the piano that bears our name. We will carry out every statement made in our announcements, and the WERLEIN PIANO will bear us out in every promise made in our endeavor to give you the most value for the money.

The books are now open for subscription in WERLEIN PIANO CLUB NUMBER TWO. Kindly place orders as quickly as possible, and make first and second choice as to woods—mahogany, walnut or oak—remit first payment, and order will be filled as promptly as possible.

KIDNEY TROUBLE, LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM

CURED BY SWAMP-ROOT

To Prove what the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, will do for YOU, Every Reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root, investigated by "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speaks in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

T. F. McHUGH.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 29th, 1901.

DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—It gives me great pleasure to add my testimonial to that of hundreds of others regarding the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root. I had a lame back three years ago before leaving North Dakota for the coast. Soon after my arrival in the Puget Sound country it became very much worse. I felt certain that the coast climate had given me acute rheumatism, and came to the conclusion that I could not live in this climate. Later I became convinced that what I really had was kidney trouble; and that the rheumatism was due to my kidney trouble. The lameness in my back increased rapidly, and I had other symptoms which indicated that I would soon be prostrated unless I obtained relief quickly. Noticing your offer of a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, free, I had a friend write for one, and began taking it immediately. Within three weeks the lameness in my back began to disappear. During that Fall and Winter, I took three one-dollar bottles of Swamp-Root, with the result that I became completely cured. I no longer have pains in my back and can exercise violently without feeling any bad effects. I have recommended Swamp-Root to several of my acquaintances who were similarly affected, and without exception they have been greatly benefited by its use.

Yours very truly,

T. F. McHugh

701 E. St., South.

Lame back is only one symptom of kidney trouble—one of many and is Nature's timely warning to show you that the track of health is not clear.

If these danger signals are unheeded, more serious results are sure to follow; Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble, may steal upon you.

The great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

EDITORIAL NOTE—Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, and has proven so successful in every case, that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives to the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing, be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Home Circle.

His First Half-Dollar.

The celebration of Abraham Lincoln's birthday has caused the relation of many stories connected with this great man. Here is one he used to tell himself of how he earned and lost his first half-dollar.

It was after Mr. Lincoln's father had removed his family to Indiana and had made a home in a log cabin not far from the Ohio river. A steamboat was passing and the boy Lincoln, standing on the bank, heard a passenger calling to him to come out with a boat. Lincoln did so and received half a dollar from the passenger. However, he said, he lost the money in the Ohio soon after, so it did not afford him much enjoyment.

Lincoln as a boy was not much of a hunter, although game was plentiful in those days. It is told of him that he shot a wild turkey when he was only eight years old. He was standing in the home cabin looking out through the cracks between the logs, when he saw a number of turkeys flying low and approaching the house. Much excited, he seized the old gun standing in the corner, poked the muzzle between the logs and fired. One turkey fell and was brought in as the small boy's trophy.—Selected.

"Number One."

"He is a number one boy," said grandmother, proudly. "A great boy for his books; indeed, he would rather read than play, and that is saying a good deal for a boy of seven."

"It is, certainly," returned Uncle John, "but what a pity it is that he is blind."

"Blind!" exclaimed grandmother, and the "number one boy" looked up, too, in wonder.

"Yes, blind, and a little deaf, also, I fear," answered Uncle John.

"Why, John! What put that into your head?" asked grandmother, looking perplexed.

"Why, the 'number one boy,' himself," said Uncle John. "He has been occupying the nice easy chair in the room all the afternoon, never seeing you, nor his mother, when she came in for a few minutes' rest. Then when your glasses were mislaid, and you had to climb upstairs two or three times to look for them, he neither saw nor heard anything that was going on."

"Oh, he is so busy reading," apologized grandmother.

"That is not a very good excuse, mother," replied Uncle John smiling. "If 'Number One' is not blind nor deaf, he must be very selfish indeed to occupy the best seat in the room, and let older people go up and down stairs while he takes his ease."

"Nobody asked me to give up my seat or to run on errands," said "Number One."

"That should not have been necessary," urged Uncle John. "What are a boy's eyes and ears for, if not to keep him posted on what is going on around him? I am glad to see you fond of books, but if a pretty story makes you forget all things except amusing, 'Number One' better run out and play with the other seven-year-old boys, and let grandmother enjoy the comfort of her rocker in quiet."—Youth's Evangelist.

A Son's Prayer.

"No, she isn't stingy, she's just selfish," said an old woman, speaking of a relative. "She'll give money if it's needed, she'll give a share of anything that grows in her fields or her orchards, but the one thing she never gives is a mite of herself.

"I'd expect her to send broth and jellies if I were sick, or blankets if I were cold, but I wouldn't ever expect her to come and spend an afternoon with me because I was lonely, or to be really interested in any troubles I had—or any joys, either, for that matter. I'd never think of carrying her any of my boy's letters to read, as I do to little Mrs. Sloane at the corner. Tom's been away nine months now, on a voyage, and Mrs. Stone has heard every one of his letters. We've hunted up together in her big atlas the places where he'll go, and when she comes across anything about one of them in the newspapers, she always remembers and tells me. She doesn't do it just to please me, either; she's interested.

"Mrs. Stone scarcely has a spare dollar to share with anybody, but you never think of that. I guess it's as much what folks'll let you share with them as what they share with you that counts."—Wellspring.

Don't Seek Sympathy.

A friend who has had her share of illness and worry, if not of more tragic troubles, has an unsympathetic bit of advice, which she is fond of giving in season and out of season: "Never let anyone pity you." I have come to think of it as the distilled essence of wisdom.

Cross the street rather than meet that friend who will screw her face up into an expression of pity and tell you "how pale you look." Hide yourself from that other who is always bewailing your hard lot as the oldest sister in the family, to whom all childish woes gravitate to be comforted, all baby hearts and dolly heads come to be mended, while a hundred little household cares find you the handiest person in the world to attend to them.

These friends mean well, but they are making you grow old and wrinkled. They are drawing down your mouth corners, pursing up your lips as if for martyr fires, training your brows to worried wrinkles. Put a stop to that instantly! Say to yourself a dozen times a day: "I am a happy woman—a lucky girl—if ever there was one!" Aren't you? Make an inventory of your bright things.—Ladies' World.

Do you know what lamp chimneys are for?

MACBETH'S are forever, unless some accident happens.

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

The Unused Bank Notes

A poor old widow, living in the Scottish Highlands, was called upon one day by a gentleman who had heard that she was in need. The old lady complained of her condition, and remarked that her son was in Australia and doing well. "But does he do nothing to help you?" inquired the visitor. "No, nothing," was the reply. "He writes me regularly once a month, but only sends me a little picture with his letter." The gentleman asked to see one of the pictures that she had received, and found each one of them to be a draft for £10. That is the condition of many of God's children. He has given us many "exceeding great and precious promises," which we either are ignorant of or fail to appropriate. Many of them seem to be pretty pictures of an ideal peace and rest, but are not appropriated as practical helps in daily life. And not one of these promises is more neglected than the assurance of salvation. An open Bible places them within reach of all, and we may appropriate the blessing which such a knowledge brings.—Selected.

Religion is no more possible without prayer than poetry without language, or music without atmosphere. In the dumb heart it invariably dies, and wherever it lives it is in the habitual faith that, as we "give good gifts unto our children, much more will the Heavenly Father give his Holy Spirit to them that ask him."—John Hamilton Thom.

Jesus is not a subject of study; he is a revelation to the soul.—Ian Maclaren.

In Good Health

A woman makes her toilet with care and content. But in bad health it often happens that the gratification of being well attired is lost. There is hardly strength to brush and dress the hair, and there is small courage to make the effort to keep up appearances.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, by making them well. The common cause of feminine weakness is found in a diseased condition of the womanly organism. "Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. The tonic effects of this medicine are remarkable; it soothes the nerves, encourages the appetite, and induces refreshing sleep. It gives comfort and courage to prospective mothers, and practically does away with the pains commonly experienced at maternity.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Women suffering from disease in aggravated form are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All letters are read in private and womanly confidences held in absolute secrecy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

It Surprised Her.

"I enjoy good health; thanks to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. J. J. Schuetzer, of Pontiac, Livingston Co., Ill. "Have taken six bottles of each kind. I was taken sick last February and the doctors here called it 'Grip.' I lay for four weeks in bed, and then when I got up I found I had 'displacement.' Had such aches and pains in my back and limbs could not stand any length of time. I knew that our home doctor would insist the first thing on an examination, and that I would not submit to, unless I was dangerously sick, and then it would be too late to do any good. My son had your book, Common Sense Medical Adviser, and I thought from reading it that Dr. Pierce's medicines would do me more good than all the home doctors—and so it has. If any one had told me it would do me so much good I would have said 'Oh no, not that much good.' I can say truly I was surprised at the benefit I received. I can do all my washing and also tend my flower garden. In fact I am on my feet most all the time. An old friend of mine said to me, 'Why, what is the matter with you? You are getting young again.' I told her I had taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicine, and that if she would do likewise she would feel ten years younger, too."

Five Physicians Helpless.

"I feel it my duty to write to you and let you know how much your medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. Wm. Hackett, of Breesport, Chemung Co., N. Y. "It is one of the best that I ever used in my life. Before I began to use your medicine it seemed as though I would never be well again. Could not stand on my feet five minutes without fainting. Could not walk to my neighbors. Would have a vomiting spell that would last three hours at a time. My limbs would tremble so I could not even wait on myself. Then I had a severe time of chronic inflammation of the liver, then uterine trouble, then heart disease. I had five of the best physicians that could be found. They said to my friends 'there is no help for her.' One said I could not live the winter out, one told me that if I got temporary relief that was all that could be done. My mother said to me one day when she was there, 'Do you know you cannot get well?' I told her I did. She said 'What are you going to do about the baby? Do you want me to care for her—or some one else?' It seemed as though she had pierced me with a sword, to think of leaving my little girl without a mother, it seemed as though I could not stand it, and when my friends were telegraphed to that I was dying and seeing them weep by my bed, that seemed as though I could never stand to hear them repeat that they would take care of the baby and give her a good home. I think if ever any one has been through with such a terrible thing they can sympathize with me.

"There are a great many ladies that I have begged to use Dr. Pierce's medicine and told what it has done for me. With the first two bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' it seemed as though I was getting worse. With the next two I was feeling so well that I could do my work and be real jolly. With the next two I felt like a new being."

AUNT MARTHA ENOCHS, as she was universally called and known, the daughter of Prof. and Catherine Neely, was born Nov. 7 1827. She was married to Enoch A. Enochs, Sept. 24, 1846. She was the mother of nine children, only four of whom survive her. She died at the home of her son-in-law, Dr. D. B. Crowley, near the old home in Rankin county, Miss., Oct. 6, 1901, aged seventy-two years, eleven months and ten days. It is needless to say that she was a faithful and loving daughter, or that she honored father and mother, because many days are promised to those that honor father and mother, and her many days in the land that the Lord her God vouchsafed to her fully establishes this. Her devotion and sacrifice as wife and mother were truly remarkable, and unmistakably declare that she was an helpment indeed. When the word went out that Aunt Martha Enochs was dead, a friend who had known and known of her for years remarked, "The poor and afflicted of the community in which she lived have lost their best friend." St. James 1, 27 says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." This enunciation of the inspired writer encircles and covers the whole life-history of this good woman as impressed and stamped on them in mory of those who come in contact with her during her long life. Sitting by her a few days before her death, when we all thought that the end was nearer than it really was, I said to her: 'Martha, if I thought that I would alarm or excite you, I would not talk to you about dying;' but before the remark was concluded, she replied with animation: 'No, no, Jim, I know that I am almost gone, and it does not excite or alarm me. I am soon to be at home, and I would have been disappointed if you had not talked to me.' She talked to me very forcefully of her strong faith and trust, and the anticipated meeting with loved ones gone before. I might write pages on the life-work of this devout Christian woman. I tell of the many times that the gentle touch of the hand that was ever ready to help and lull'd the writer to quietude and sleep, when racked with fever and pain. I might tell of her devotion and liberality to her church and the 'prophet's chamber,' that was a part of her home, and call the prophets to witness its comforts and thoughtfulness. But why enlarge, when these things are indelibly stamped on the memory of all who knew her, and are recorded in the Lamb's book of life? JIM ENOCHS.

Crystal Springs, Miss.

MRS. EUGENIA AUGUSTA HARDIN was born in Madison county, Miss., Aug. 22 1839. She was the daughter of the Rev. O. H. P. Davis, "a useful and much-beloved Methodist preacher." Sept. 11, 1855, she married the Hon. John M. Hardin. Unto them were born eight children, of whom five and their father (who died in 1884) departed this life before she fell on sleep in Jesus—Jan. 17, 1901. In early life she was converted, and was received into the fellowship of the M. E. Church, South, and remained a member thereof to her translation into the church triumphant. There was some disease of the heart which troubled her for several years, but of which she never complained to anyone, and seldom referred to even in the family circle. As the pastor of Trinity Meridian in December with her soon, the Rev. Paul D. Hardin, on the way from Shubuta circuit to Hend'rson, she spoke to her mother of the trouble, and said she expected to die suddenly—as suddenly, that it would be a great shock to all loved ones; but she was ready to go at any time. After reaching Henderson, she suffered for some days with a severe cold and cough, apparently la grippe, but not severe enough to keep her in bed. Friday morning, Jan. 17, she arose, dressed as well, and was sitting with her son and his family about the fire, talking. Death came, and she fell from her chair erect, living a life could catch her and present the fall. It was "a great shock" to them, but she was "ready to go." The tireless worker was at rest. One who knew her best and loved her devotedly writes this estimate of her: "She loved the Lord with all her heart, and delighted greatly in his service. Religion with her was a conscious, joyous experience. Often I have known her to shout aloud the praises of God. My precious mother was the most unselfish person I ever knew. She truly gave her life for her loved ones and others whom she could help. She seemed never to think of self in her anxiety to help others. Her influence was always for good. The memory of her purely life is to us a beacon light to illumine the way from earth to heaven. Every one who knew her loved her. She counted her friends by her acquaintance." As this writer can, I LEE.

MR. ELIAS RONSAVALLE was born in Greene county, Feb. 4 1815. He died in Pike county, Miss., near the place of his birth, March 8 1901. He was converted in early life and joined the Methodist Church at Greensboro, Ala., but afterward moved to Pike county, Miss., where he resided until his death. He was successful as a business man, and left behind him many friends to follow on when the fatal summons came. He was ever ready to help a needy one. He was a liberal supporter of the church, always ready to help in the finishing of churches. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the Spring of 1901, and lived a consistent Christian life up to his death. He was never heard to complain or murmur while upon a bed of sickness. He was tenderly cared for by in his last hours of sickness by loving, dutiful children, and other relatives and friends. Three sons and a daughter are left behind to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate father. Weep not for him who has departed from you, or your loss is his gain. Would we be his last rest, rejoicing that his troubles are all over. May the bereaved and broken-hearted children of Mr. Ronsavalle look to God for love, purity and righteousness, and be so blest that we be friendless, and pick up him for a space of thirty or forty years.

W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.

MYRA KELLAM (nee Powell) was born Aug. 29, 1875, and departed this life after a protracted illness of Oct. 12, 1901, at the home of her father, J. S. Powell, in Pike county, Miss. Sister Kellam was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and lived a beautifully consistent Christian life. She was the mother of four children, three of whom preceded her to glory. One Sabbath morning, a few days before her death, she was thought to be dying, and while in the entranced state had a most remarkable vision of heaven's glory, the full peril of which she told me afterwards with such a glow of enthusiasm that I shall never forget. Her prayer was answered and her life spared for a while, that she might see once more her precious baby, who was absent at the time. After the fullest realization of her heart's desire, having given her baby kiss once more, and taken her last farewell leave of her and other loved ones, those beautiful gates reclosed, and her triumphant spirit went to be with those who had gone before, where now she waits with welcome to greet her husband and baby Hazel, to part no more forever.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, took from her earthly home on Nov. 13 1901, our dear friend, MRS. MAGGIE FLOWERS, who has been an active member of our Ladies' Aid Society at Alamo, Miss.; be it

Resolved, That at the death of Mrs. Flowers we have lost an acting will—one that can never be filled; and that our society can lose one of its most faithful and beloved members; but our loss is her eternal gain.

2. That while we sadly deplore the loss of our friend and sister member, we humbly submit to the will of God, "who doeth all things well."

3. That we imitate her virtues, and double our diligence to advance the cause of Christ, and pray that a double portion of God's Spirit fall upon our society.

4. That we extend our deep sympathy to the bereaved family, and point them to heaven, where their loved one is "waiting and waiting" for them. May God's blessing overrule upon the little motherless children is the earnest prayer of our society.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the bereaved family, put upon the Minutes of the Aid Society, and a copy be sent the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.

Christians must not, by their conformity to the world, give worldlings cause to talk that they have been losers since they have become Christians. The church has too long used the world as a background for under-strapper sign, and thong Christianity were a hearse to carry on the dead, instead of a chariot in which the living are to triumph. Go and make the experiment of Christianity. Try it, and you will find what all men have found who have tried it—a happiness which the world can not give.—Madison C. Peters, D. D.

G. F. P. GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA FOR WOMEN

REGULAR and PAINLESS

monthly periods mean more to a woman than all the wealth of the world, for such a condition means health. Irregular and painful periods are unnatural; they mean that the regulating forces of the system are out of order, and they are warnings of still more serious troubles which are sure to result unless Nature is given the aid she needs to set things right. G. F. P. gives this aid because it furnishes pure, rich blood to every part; it is more than medicine—it is concentrated health.

FOUND PERMANENT RELIEF.

MRS. M. J. HARTNESS, Armfield, N. C., tells her experience with G. F. P. in a few brief sentences. She says:

"After three years of suffering from menstrual and womb troubles and many unsuccessful attempts to find relief, I began using G. F. P. I felt relieved within a week. I have taken four bottles and in consequence the tired feeling has left my limbs, the heaviness is gone from my stomach, my appetite is good, I sleep and rest well, and am better every way. G. F. P. is peculiarly adapted to the ailments of women."

An Appeal to Our Friends.

We make a special appeal to our friends who owe us on subscription to send us the amount due. We need the money. The amount each one owes is small, but the aggregate amounts to hundreds of dollars. Our friends must see that it is embarrassing to us to withhold the money. Please look at the label on your paper, and if you are behind, send us the amount due. We will greatly appreciate it.

AS FIRE SPREADS in dry grass, so does an inflammation in the throat, grow down into the lungs. Deal promptly with a cold as with a fire, and when you begin to cough use Allen's Lung Balsam.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

Emperor William Discovers

AMERICAN BUCKWHEAT CAKES AND SENDS HIS CHEF TO LEARN TO MAKE THIS DELICIOUS BREAKFAST DISH

From the New York Herald.

That good old American buckwheat cakes, with maple syrup, can tickle an imperial palate is the latest discovery made by William II. of Germany.

The Emperor learned the appetizing qualities of American cookery during a visit to the new Hamburg-American yacht Princess Victoria Louise, to which, for the occasion, the noted chef of the crack steamer Deutschland, Herr Fahrenbein, had been transferred.

An American breakfast was prepared for the Emperor, which he liked so well that he stayed for another. His Majesty especially praised the buckwheat cakes, which he declared had proven extremely palatable, and finally sent his own chef to the Deutschland, where he took a two days' course in American cookery during which, the Deutschland's chef says, he was taught how to make American buckwheat cakes and other typical American dishes.

The American buckwheat cake as served on the Deutschland, and which is to be hereafter a part of Emperor William's menu, is made in the following manner: Two cups of buckwheat, one cup of wheat flour, two tablespoons of Royal Baking Powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, all sifted well together. Mix with milk into a thin batter and bake at once on a hot griddle.

Cures Weak Hearts

Palpitation and other heart irregularities are nearly always caused by a weak stomach and a disordered digestion. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy cures weak stomachs, regulates the gastric juices, builds up the appetite and invariably cures palpitation, intermittent pulse, and other heart irregularities. For this purpose it has no equal. It cures all stomach troubles and insures good health and sweet refreshing sleep.

A GOVERNOR'S OPINION.

Governor Robert Taylor, of Tennessee, says "I find Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy an admirable aid to digestion. It imparts a vigor and easiness of feeling which is very desirable. It is a first-class remedy for aiding digestion."

Glances at the World.

President Roosevelt has rendered his decision in the Schley appeal ease. To us it does not look as much like a decision by a court of appeal as a decision by a court of trial. If we have read aright, after the President had placed in his hands Admiral Schley's appeal, he held a council with officers of the Navy Department, and also with naval captains. If he called in and consulted with any persons known to be friendly to the Admiral, the fact has escaped our notice. He sustains the finding of the majority of the Court of Inquiry in reference to Admiral Schley's conduct previous to the battle of Santiago, but utters no word of censure because the Navy Department had condoned the offenses, as did President McKinley by promoting him to the rank of Admiral. He commends the Admiral for personal bravery, yet intimates that he lost his nerve at the time he made the famous loop. The loop, he says, was an error; yet, as no harm resulted, no censure need be passed. The President apparently favors both Admirals Sampson and Schley on the question of command, the one being technically, the other actually, the commander. And yet he says it was "a captain's fight." That is to say, nobody was in command of the squadron, the captain of each ship doing as he felt disposed—paying no attention to anything except the enemy's boats. If it was a captain's fight, then neither Sampson nor Schley was in command, and this would rob Sampson of all credit except for the general planning in advance of the fight, for he was not in the battle, nor near it. It would give Schley credit, for he was in the battle, and his ship did the biggest part of the fighting, and received the greatest number of the enemy's shots. The President's decision is a curious document, and will please the friends of neither party to the controversy.

More than ordinary interest has been aroused in New York over the question of Sunday closing of the saloons. During the recent canvass it seems to have been understood in some circles that the "reformers," who were elected by large majorities, let it be known that moderate views would be taken concerning the enforcement of the excise laws, and that efforts would be made to have the law so amended as to allow the saloons of the city to open certain hours on Sunday. The District Attorney elect boasted that he could draw up such a law, and get it through the Assembly. His bill was prepared, and in due time he proceeded to the seat of government, but to his surprise it was with difficulty that he could get any member to join him. After an effort, one member agreed to take it, provided it was understood that he presented it "by request." This was quite a set-back to Mr. Jerome. It also cast a damper over the saloonists. Now they are agitated over the sending of about thirty inspectors to New York to secure evidence against the violators of the Sunday-closing laws. The inspectors reached the city some time on Saturday, and by midnight every Raines-law hotel and saloon man knew of their presence. The Raines-law hotels complied at once with the law, and the owners of regular saloons took fright, and shut up their houses. It would always be that way if faithful officers had charge of the affairs of the city—in New York or any other city.

The Republican members of the lower House of Congress held another caucus on Feb. 17 in the interest of the Crumpacker movement to reduce Southern representation in Congress. Of one hundred and ninety-nine Republican members, only eighty-six were present—a considerable number less than a quorum. This fact is taken as an indication that the majority of Republican members are either opposed to Mr. Crumpacker's bill, or are indifferent to its fate. This view is confirmed by the fact that the caucus, instead of devising a way of getting the bill before the House, adopted a resolution asking the Committee on Rules to report a resolution providing for a Committee of Eleven to investigate the validity of election laws, and the manner of their enforcement, or whether citizens are denied the right to vote, or the right in any manner is abridged except for crime. The resolution was supported by the mover on the ground that it was preliminary with a view to ascertaining facts. When facts were ascertained, then the remedy needed, if any, could be applied. The resolution was adopted without dissent. It will probably be a long while before the Committee on Rules makes a report.

The question of establishing an embassy by the United States at the Vatican is again to the front. In spite of all that has been said on the subject by way of condemnation, hope is still entertained at Rome, and, doubtless, by Romanists in this country, that soon or late our government will be represented at the Vatican, and the Vatican be represented at Washington. It is said by certain correspondents that the Pope is negotiating with Mr. Roosevelt "for the recognition of the apostolic legate at Washington as an embassador to the United States." This can not be. Possibly the Pope may have expressed such a desire, or even gone so far as to request it, but we do not believe that the President would betray the trust reposed in him by encouraging anything like negotiations. Our government can look upon the Pope of Rome in no other light than as head of the Roman Catholic Church, and, as such, can have no dealings with him save in matters pertaining to the church. The Holy Father may rest his case right there.

KENTUCKY LETTER.

BY DR. S. A. STEEL.

MR. EDITOR: What I wrote in a former letter about the type of preaching given us by Vanderbilt University has elicited unfavorable comment in some quarters, while meeting approval in others. The editor of the Midland Methodist thinks what I said was "a kick at the bub." But he is mistaken, and transcended his privilege when he called in question my motive. What I said, whether true or false, whether wise or otherwise, applied to Vanderbilt University, irrespective of the location. I have no grudge against "the bub," and am not kicking at anything. Nor did I mean to assail Vanderbilt University. But I do not take back a single syllable I wrote in condemnation of the increasing habit of reading sermons in the Methodist pulpit. I think it exceedingly unfortunate that any of the Vanderbilt professors should set such an example before our young preachers.

A writer in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, in an article styled "A Plea for Vanderbilt," which was evidently aimed at my strictures, tells us that both the matter and manner of preaching are different from what they used to be; that Kavanaugh and Pierce, and the preachers of their time, preached about "repentance and regeneration, heaven and hell, and called men to their knees;" but now ministers preach about "the love of God" and "call men to their thoughts." That is the very thing I censure. Just what the writer means by calling men to "their thoughts" I do not know that I fully understand. But I do understand one thing, and am sure I am not mistaken, and that is, that whatever others may do, Methodist preachers are sent to preach on "repentance and regeneration, heaven and hell," and to "call men to their knees," not to "their thoughts."

It is true that the forms of expression change just as the style of dress. But I do not believe the gospel preached in the vivid and picturesque language of Kavanaugh's emotional eloquence, or the polished and classical speech of Pierce's matchless oratory, would lack for listeners now. The stilted culture of some of our academic theologians would be far more effective if it had some of the throbbing emotion of Kavanaugh's gushing thought. It is true that a plain, direct, matter-of-fact mode of address is more in keeping with the practical and commercial spirit of the time than the imaginative style of certain great preachers. I am not pleading for any particular style of speech, but for speech versus manuscript in the pulpit.

I yield to no man in appreciation of a cultivated ministry. To be candid, I am ashamed of many of our Methodist preachers. They haven't read a new book in ten years, and have pretty well forgotten what they may have known about the old ones. They are heavy drawbacks to our progress—"gum-logs" the Bishops call them—that will neither burn themselves nor set anybody else on fire. One of these clerical deadbeats, with tobacco stains on his shirt front and no neck-tie to his collar, when asked at Conference where he thought he would be sent, replied, "I don't know, but the Bishop is bound to give me something." That is one of the weak points in the admirable system of the itinerancy. That man, if he had to depend on a "call," would have to wait forever. And it is a positive infliction to send him to any work. The preacher who does not study, and keep on studying, can never "fill" a community, and, unfortunately, we have many preachers who either never did study or have quit so long ago that instead of lifting others, they are dead-weights upon the system—parasites, and nothing more.

Speaking of study, many years ago, while chaplain of the University of Virginia, I took a cue from Dr. Gildersleeve, then the professor of Greek in the university, and since then professor of Greek in Johns Hopkins University—one of the great scholars of the day. He said he made it a practice to read through once every year Conybeare and Howson's "Life of St. Paul." Many of our preachers have read the book once, but this great student and scholar read it every year. The consequence was, he was perfectly familiar with all that scholarship could tell about the life of Paul. Such accurate and extensive knowledge was the basis for a still wider range of reading and study in a field that expands indefinitely. A Methodist preacher—yes, sir, I will say it; every Methodist preacher—ought to read the Bible through every year at least four times. He ought to read the life of Christ by Farrar, the life of Paul by Conybeare and Howson, and the life of Wesley by Tyerman. Every year? Yes, sir; and that is only a start. But if he did that, he would be sure to do more. By the way, he would be sure to want to read Gladstone's "Life of Whitefield." This author tells an anecdote of Wesley that I had never seen before. Maybe you have. Whitefield and Wesley differed on the subject of predestination. The difference led to their temporary estrangement. They never agreed about the doctrine, but happily the breach was healed, and their fellowship restored. Soon after they had made up, they staid all night at the same house, and had to sleep in the same bed. Whitefield turned in without saying his prayers, whereupon Wesley said, "Ah, George, is that your Calvinism?" When Wesley got ready to get in bed, he knelt down to say his prayers, and, being very tired, fell asleep on his knees. When Whitefield awoke and found him in this posture, he aroused him, and said, "Ah, John, is this your Arminianism?" The anecdote serves to give a very human touch to men who loom so lofty through the gathering mists of time that they seem little less than demigods.

I don't wonder Wesley went to sleep at his prayer. I never read of a more incessant and prodigious worker. I am always busy. For nearly forty years I have conscientiously tried to be always "usefully employed." But when I read the life of Wesley, I am ashamed of myself. His system, his inflexible adherence to it, his diligence, his quietness of spirit, and yet his sustained ardor of zeal, and the results he accomplished, fill me with amazement. I think we would turn him out of the church now on more than one ground, but I wish we were all more like him.

I am very much interested in the poor white boy of the South; I mean the industrious, honest, ambitious boy who is too poor to pay for an education. The little smattering of knowledge he gets free at the public school is better than none, but that is about all you can say. It is totally inadequate to equip him for the battle of life. We have institutions enough to teach all those who want academic education, but the boy I have in mind wants an industrial training that will enable him to succeed in life. Booker Washington is educating hundreds of young negroes—so are other educators of the negro—but he is the industrial superiors of Southern white boys who have not had such training. Skilled labor is the key to the economic situation. In Boston or Cleveland or Pittsburg, no matter how skillful a negro may be, he can not get into the labor organizations, and is largely debarred from industrial competition with the whites. But in the South no such difficulty is in his way. No matter what is the color of his skin, the man who knows how to do it gets the work. This is true of every calling among us. It is high time we were looking to the industrial education of our white youth. I have been so impressed with the importance of this work that I gave up one of the most delightful pastoral charges I ever had to undertake it. Circumstances—I trust providential—sent me here as president of Logan Female College, and I am pleased with my work, and happy in it. Now, I am offered in Mississippi a fine body of land, and other considerations, to establish a school for the industrial training of boys and girls—a school where they can work their way through. I have not decided yet on site location, but when I do I shall expect you to help me push it to success. Viewed from the economic standpoint, it is of paramount importance to the South especially. We have no such school, except in reformatories or semi-reformatories, while our Agricultural and Mechanical Colleges and Technological Institutes are beyond the reach of the class I want to help.

The chief event of recent interest in Louisville Conference Methodism was the dedication of the splendid new Fourth Avenue Church in Louisville. This is a credit to us, and we have long needed it. As it is the consummation of an enterprise I advocated in two sermons that produced a commotion in old Walnut Street years ago, I naturally felt a bit of personal satisfaction in the achievement. The building of this fine church is only one part of the work and policy I urged. The other part was to sell both Walnut Street and Chestnut Street, consolidate the two congregations, and build a strong church in the heart of the city. They can't see that yet, but they will have to come to it. Until we do it we will limp where we ought to leap, and give others the advantage.

NOTES FROM YAZOO CITY.

BY REV. W. B. LEWIS.

In the January number of Go Forward there was a paragraph in regard to the missionary contribution from Yazoo City which was inaccurate at two points, viz: The Sunday-school is credited with only $5. It should be $75. The church is given credit for having paid $153 85 above the assessment. It paid only $143 85 more than assessed. But this indicates growth in grace. It is said that years ago their custom was to pay up everything else, and then, whatever they had left went to missions. Now the great cause of missions is in front.

I have been asked to state how it was done. It was an easy thing to do. In the first place, the spiritual state of the church is good. In the second place, we put a copy of Go Forward into every Methodist home in the city. In the third place, the stewards, who are godly men, co-operated with the pastor, and the thing was done, and everybody felt better.

This year we hope to do more. Of course, the full amount assessed will be paid by the stewards out of the regular collections. Then the Sunday-school promises $100 this year, and the Epworth League $75. Last year the Sunday-school paid $75, and the Epworth League $43. So these departments are growing in grace. We can, therefore, count on $175 above our apportionment this year for the great cause of the world's evangelization.

I will add, as the result of my experience, that the first thing to do to bring a church up to her duty in this matter is to get the people to be thoroughly religious. To this end the pastor himself ought to be a thoroughly godly man. Let him "allure to brighter worlds, and lead the way." And he need not be afraid that either he or his people will get too much religion. It is a pitiable thing to see a Methodist preacher nervous lest his people should get too religious. The power of the Holy Ghost coming on pastor and flock lubricates the machinery of the church as nothing else can. Then disseminate missionary information, circulate missionary literature, preach missionary sermons. There are two themes that I never tire preaching on, and never preach on without getting a blessing on my own soul: The doctrine of the Holy Ghost, and the evangelization of the world.

OUR ORPHAN HOME.

DEAR DOCTOR: Of late we have made trips in the interest of our children to Grenada, Lumberton, Oxford, and Tupelo, and at each place were greeted by larger congregations than usual, and they listened as we tried to tell them about the little ones, their condition, needs, affections, and hopes; and the people gave "with a willing heart," as they do whenever an opportunity is given for "the Home." The brethren at these places are hopeful and full of zeal, and their people much encouraged.

We wish we could visit all the pastorates, but this is impossible. If all the brethren would give an opportunity to their people, they would be surprised at their interest in the orphans, and it would help other collections rather than interfere. No better season than this ever comes to remember the little ones. They should not be left until the last.

We are encouraged that the number is increasing who give monthly. Some of the brethren take a hat collection at every sacramental service "for the poor," and send to the children. Some few Sunday-schools do this monthly.

We now have eighty children—all we can take until more beds are secured, and money sent to feed them. We have a number of applications.

Yours for the children,

W. T. GRIFFIN.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Rev. E. A. Tabor, of Arkansas, was assaulted and beaten a short time since at Bald Knob, Ark.—a thriving town on the Missouri Pacific railroad north of Little Rock. He had been in a hard fight against the liquor business. He drove whisky out of the town, and notwithstanding his bruises, he was happy.

There were 1,905 more suicides in the United States in 1901 than in 1900, the number reaching in the latter year the enormous figure of 7,245. It would be worth something to know the moral character and social standing of each individual whose murder was self-inflicted. The causes, in the majority of cases, are never known.

A preacher in Maine, who is a strong prohibitionist, was last year elected sheriff of one of the counties, and he has succeeded in suppressing the illegal sale of liquor in his territory. Any resolute and courageous officer can do it anywhere, if he determines to do it. It is a reflection, both on the people and their officers, to say the law can not be enforced.

Christian Advocate.

INCREASED PROVISION FOR SUPERANNUATES.

BY W. F. VANDIVER.

That the provision made by our church for its superannuated preachers, widows and orphans, while greater than that of any other churches, is inadeqnate, has been long felt by all who have taken the trouble to look into the question, and it is cause for congratulation that recently the thought of many is turning to the need of these deserving pensioners of the church, with the desire to better their condition by increasing the fund for support.

In several Conferences, movements are on foot for providing homes, or otherwise attaining the end songht. A recent article in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) has directed the attention of the church generally to this object, and it is hoped will provoke such discussion as will lead to wise action by the General Conference soon to meet in Dallas.

As to the end in view, there will hardly be a dissenting voice; as to the means to attain that end, there may be various opinions, and a discussion through the church press may result in great good to our superannuates, and in the saving of much valnable time to the General Conference.

The writer is decidedly of the opinion that whatever action is taken in the matter should be general, not local, applying to all superannuates of the church, and consequently should be by the General Conference, and not by the several Annual Conferences with a view to providing only for those within the bounds of each.

Our connectional system moves upon the Pauline theory that the strong should help the weak, and as our Conferences differ greatly in financial ability, as well as numerical strength, the only way to work the theory successfully, and to recognize the eqnal claim of all superannuates to an augmented provision, is through a general fund which can only be attained by General Conference action. Separate action by Annual Conferences will not only result in great ineqnality, but will not in any Conference, however rich it may be, effect so much as can be accomplished by general action of the church.

The writer would respectfully urge upon the consideration of the church some plan along the general line of the following suggestions:

1. Set apart a snm of, say, $150,000 from the fund now in the hands of the Book Committee, a special Superannuate Fund, to be invested in safe interest-bearing securities, the principal to remain forever intact, and the interest thereon to be added to the principal, until this fund, with additions to be made to it by means snggested below, shall have reached the sum of at least one million dollars.

2. After reaching the sum of one million dollars, 75 per cent. of the annual income from the investment shall be distributed annually through the different Conferences to their superannuated preachers, their widows and orphans pro rata, and 25 per cent. of the interest income shall go to the increase of the fund until same shall reach ten million dollars.

3. Let all who will, be invited to add by personal donations to this fund.

4. Let a collection, or rather a free-will offering, without assessment be taken in every congregation annually by the pastor-in-charge, for the purpose of increasing this invested fund, all the income from free-will offerings, and other sources, to be added to the original amount of $150,000 until same amounts to ten million dollars, after which let all the interest be paid to the Conference claimants, but continue to collect free-will offerings as provided above.

If it is objected that all this will take a long time, and tie up uselessly a large sum of money, I reply: It would tie up money which we would not otherwise obtain, and so would not cause the church to lose anything.

The time would not be so long as may be supposed. Many men of wealth in Southern Methodism would give largely to a fund for this purpose, managed in a business-like way, and certain in the long run to yield large and permanent returns.

The annual free-will offering to this object would commend itself to our people as hardly any other call would; would yield considerable immediate result, and would grow larger year by year.

This scheme would work no hardship to any present Conference claimant, as the same provision would be made by means of the Annual Conference collection as at present, and this would provide only for a future large addition to the provision still to be made by the Annual Conference.

The writer proposed a movement of this character to the General Conference at Baltimore in 1898, but the proposition was made late in the session, and failed of consideration for lack of time. It will be proposed again, with the general features outlined above, at Dallas, and with the single desire to aid those aged and now helpless and dependent ones, to whose labors and prayers the church owes so much of her present prosperity and future promise.

I close this communication by earnestly requesting my fellow-delegates to the Conference of 1902 to weigh this matter, make such suggestions as they deem wise, and be ready to aid in taking some step which will yield the result we all desire—i. e., a better provision for our worn-out preachers, their widows and orphans.

Montgomery, Ala.

EXPERIENCE OF AN AGENT.

In the year 18— I was agent of a college in the State of ———. In March I spent a few days with Rev. Mr. ———, who assisted me in procuring notes from members of his charge for the endowment of said college. After the service at 11 o'clock, on Sunday, at the town of ———, as Bro. ——— was about leaving for an afternoon appointment, and from thence to his home, he said: "You must call on Col. L. before leaving this community. Col. L.," said he, "is a peculiar man, but if you can get off on the right foot, you will get a liberal contribution, as he is fully able to help liberally."

I determined to see Col. L., and spent the night with Mr. C., making particular inquiry about the peculiarities of Col. L. I endeavored, however, not to excite the suspicions of Mr. C., as I desired to and did obtain a note from him the next morning. After breakfast, on Monday morning, I rode over to Col. L.'s (only about one mile) and introduced myself to Mrs. L., who informed me that the colonel was out in the plantation getting the hands started to work, and proposed to send for him. To this I objected:

1. Because she said "he would return in an hour or so," and I thought I could spare that much time waiting for a large prospective subscription.

2. Because I doubted the propriety of sending for "a man of peculiarities," that he might be subjected to the appeals of a college agent. I did not think that would be getting off on the "right foot," and, therefore, decided to await his coming. In the course of about an hour he came, and introductions being over, we entered into conversation on the various topics of the day. I tried to make a favorable impression on the mind of this man of "peculiarities," and really think he was agreeably entertained during this conversation of at least two hours.

Remembering the statement of Bro. ——— "that if I could get off on the right foot, I would get a liberal subscription," I did my best to succeed. I soon learned:

1 That the colonel and I were natives of the same State.

2 That the prominent men of that State whom I admired were favorites of his also.

3. That we each believed in the constitutional right of the Southern States to secede from the Union, but doubted the propriety of secession at the time and under the circumstances at and under which it was effected.

4. That we were in perfect accord with regard to the political, social, and financial condition of the South particularly, and the whole country in general, together with the means and measures best adapted for increasing and perpetuating the prosperity and happiness of all the people.

The colonel during all this time and conversation had not had the slightest intimation as to the object of my visit; nor do I believe he ever suspected it; nor had he even intimated a desire to know why I was there. I had good and sufficient reason, however, to feel that he was being agreeably, if not profitably, entertained. Simple entertainment, however, could not be consistently indulged in any longer. "Business before pleasure" had for many years been, and is yet, the motto of my life, and must be adhered to now. Being assured that I had thus far gotten off on "the right foot," I felt that I must move onward, and proceeded at once to direct the colonel's attention to the object of my visit. I suggested that "the only hope of keeping the whites of the South above the negroes was in giving them the advantages of a superior education;" "that 'sniffs' could excel the whites in a purely physical race in this climate," etc. To this proposition he readily assented.

"In order to do this," said I, "we must have colleges and literary institutions of high grade throughout the entire South." To this, too, he agreed without hesitation.

"Then," said I, "our colleges, to be efficient and permanent, must be liberally endowed." Without hesitation he endorsed this proposition also.

I then added, that "if all would assist, their endowment would be light on each, and of great benefit to all." He unhesitatingly assented to this. I certainly thought I had captured the colonel, and visions of a large subscription for the endowment of the institution that I represented were almost changed to a reality.

"Then," said I (with the assurance of almost certain success), "colonel, we have a good male college in this ——— which is greatly in need of an ample endowment, and if all will help, the endowment will be light on each, and of incalculable benefit to all the whites of this entire section." To this he assented with a hearty good-will. To say that I was highly elated at the advancement that I thought I was making would be putting it very mildly. I was very much enthused; indeed, I was almost sure of grand success.

Moving my chair nearer to him, I drew my note-book from my pocket, and said, "Colonel, I have been selected by the Board of Trustees and appointed by the Conference as agent for ——— College, and have been instructed to procure an endowment for it, and am canvassing the country for that purpose, and have called to get your subscription thereto." I then began to turn the leaves of my book and show him who of his neighbors and friends had assisted in sums of from $100 to $500. On reaching the first blank note, I said: 'Now, colonel, please give me your obligation for such amount as you feel able and willing to give to this important and beneficent enterprise. Remember, however, that the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

He replied, "I heartily endorse the enterprise and every word you have said; wish you abundant success, and would gladly assist you if I were able, but, unfortunately, I am not."

"But, colonel," said I, "the endowment of this institution within fourteen miles of your door would greatly enhance the value of your property; indeed, more than the amount expected of you."

"Will the land produce any more corn or cotton, peas or potatoes?" said the colonel in reply.

"No," said I, immediately, "but if you should desire to sell any portion of it, you could get a better price for it."

"But," said he, "I don't want to sell, and the enhancement of its value would only increase my taxes without any corresponding benefit."

I then appealed to his liberality in behalf of the young men of the present and coming generations, but without avail. At the rounding-up of every period in the argument the colonel would say, "I am not able."

Finally I said: "Well, colonel, if you will not give anything for the endowment of the college, you certainly ought to pay me for the lengthy and appropriate speech I have made you. You can't deny its being a good speech, and I am not able to pay my own expenses, and traverse this country, and make such speeches for nothing. But," said I, "pay me for the speech, and I will appropriate the amount to the endowment of the college." This expression was prompted by a desire to come out of the contest at least a seeming victor, and because also that I had once before secured a liberal sum from a seemingly incorrigible man, for building a parsonage, by the same course.

The colonel's ever-memorable reply to this humorous sally of mine was, 'I have no money, but I'll tell what I am perfectly willing to do."

Immediately the vision of a deed to a part of his twelve-hundred-acre landed estate flitted before my eyes, and I was greatly elated at my almost certain success.

"Well," said I, "colonel, what can you give?" with all the impulsiveness of my being.

"I am perfectly willing," said he, "to give you a certificate that your failure to get money from me is not due to any fault of yours. You have done the full measure of your duty, and deserve the approbation of your employers."

Never, I suppose, was agent so crest-fallen. I had confidently expected a note for five hundred dollars, or a deed to a tract of land worth equally as much, or more; but this munificent, though imaginary, gift had diminished to a simple certificate.

AGENT.

A PUZZLED SOLILOQUIZER.

Puzzle first: Why should a charge that never paid more than $85 or $90 for all general assessments be continuously assessed about $175, and why this same charge that paid only $47 last year for all these claims should have added to its assessment $64, making an assessment for all general claims of $240, being assessed more for foreign missions than the charge ever paid for all the claims? Then, if all the claims are not paid in full, the attitude of the Conference will say: The preacher was not interested in the matter, or he has no tact in gathering funds. What can I do, for the above is the condition of Pleasant Hill circuit, North Mississippi Conference?

Puzzle second: Why should a preacher be moved from a charge that paid him $629 to one that paid its former pastor only $329, with no special prospect of any improvement, while the preacher's responsibilities have increased by five orphan children, making a family of eight, instead of three, to live on the salary? The puzzle is not why I should be moved from Durant to Pleasant Hill, or from any one charge to another, but why should I be moved from the one class of work to the other just when, by a sad providence, my obligations had increased so much?

Puzzle third: This is the greatest of all puzzles to me just now. How can eight of us live on the prospective salary? We are in the midst of some noble people, but when they have made as liberal provision as they may, it will be far short of our actual needs.

The weather now gives us rain, sleet, and freeze, and to-night, while I write, everything is covered in ice; so you see I am snowed under in more ways than one.

While I write seven loved ones are snugly tucked in bed, and in trusting confidence, dreaming in perfect security that whatever I undertake will be all right; and, perhaps, if my spiritual eyes were open, I could see guardian angels watching helpless innocence in peaceful slumbers, or, perchance, see the sainted mother give the loving kiss as in days of yore, or, if my dull ears were open, I might hear the whirr of angels' wings, and catch the strain of heavenly music. These will all be well some sweet day, to be over there. But I am beset with stubborn realities; I must plan for the next load of wood, the next barrel of flour, or the next pair of little shoes. The martyrs may have all died in the early church, but if we can get through this year on the prospective salary, the days of miracles surely have not all gone. Will some one wise in planning suggest a way out of the dilemma?

With kindly greeting to all readers of the ADVOCATE, I close, asking that the Pleasant Hill parsonage be remembered in your prayers.

Yours in word and work for souls,

J. H. SMITH.

Teacher's Meeting.

BY A. M. MAYO.

Not every Sunday-school has a Teacher's Meeting; yet, without a Teacher's Meeting, there can be no true Sunday-school. This paradox represents a truth that can not safely be lost sight of in considering the Sunday-school and its needs.

In the very nature of the Sunday-school, a Teacher's Meeting is a necessity, and without a Teacher's Meeting a Sunday-school in name is not really a Sunday-school in fact. It lacks a prime essential.

The modern Sunday-school, in its integral parts, includes the grouping of children and others into separate classes, under individual teachers, for the study of the Bible, and the combining of those separate classes into a school whole for united work under a common influence. Without the combining of the groups into a common whole, there can be no unity of impression on the entire membership of the school. In a true Sunday-school there must be both class work and school work, class instruction and school instruction, class influence and school influence. All this can not be secured unless the leaders of the separate groups are brought together in order to secure a common understanding of their work, and a fullness of mutual sympathy and purpose in its prosecution, and for this a Teacher's Meeting is necessary.

Without a Teacher's Meeting there is no agreement possible in the teachings of the various teachers in a Sunday-school, nor is there any prospect of bringing up the poorer teachers in that Sunday-school to the standard of those best qualified. If the teachers are not brought together to compare the results of their separate study, and to quicken one another's mind by mutual suggestions and corrections, they are not likely, on the one hand, to be in accord in their understanding or their teaching of the lesson they are to teach, or, on the other hand, to be severally as well prepared for their teaching as if each one of them were possessed of the best thoughts and the wisest preparations of all.

Some will say, "That does not apply to our school—we are in the country;" "Where there is a will, there is a way." I know two Sunday-schools—one in the southern prairie region of Calcasieu parish, and another in the pinewood region of Sabine parish—that, for years, regularly held Teacher's Meetings.

Much more could be said, and but for your limited space should be said, for Teacher's Meetings; but I hope those who have discontinued them will revive them, and many will inaugurate and continue to use this very necessary factor in our much-beloved work.

Let me give you a programme that will assist in meetings until you find something better.

SUGGESTED PROGRAMME.

1. (5 min.) Prayer and praise.

2. (10 min.) Reports.

(a) By superintendent: What have I done this week to help the Sunday-school?

(b) By secretary: What have I done this week to help the Sunday-school?

(c) By teacher: 1. What have I done to help myself? 2. What have I done to help my whole class? 3. What have I done to help any one scholar?

3 (10 min.) Discussion.

1. Our School's Greatest Need.

2 How Best to Meet It.

4 (35 min.) Not So Much WHAT TO TEACH as HOW TO TEACH.

Lesson-text read over by some one person.

2 Lesson story told by some one person who shall state facts, persons, etc., in own language.

3. Ask anybody and everybody what was added, or omitted, by the person who told the story, in his or her own language.

4. Fix dates, persons, and the places mentioned.

5 What one thought in the lesson will most help the "converted" members of my class?

6. What one thought in the lesson will most help the "unconverted" members of my class?

7 Good stories or illustrations which will help impress these important truths.

8. Closing prayer for help and blessing on the teaching of this lesson.

The Louisiana State Sunday-school Association will hold a Convention at Natchitoches, April 22, 23, and 24. Prof. Hamill will be in attendance, and, we presume, hold an Institute. We trust it will be a profitable occasion, and will have more to say about it in our next issue.

Mrs. Sallie Trotter Walker.

The following tribute to Mrs. Sallie Trotter Walker was read before the Holly Springs (Miss.) Auxiliary, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, by Mrs. Rosa B Tyler, corresponding secretary:

To-day we realize with sorrowful hearts the uncertainty of human life. We meet, but there is a vacant chair, and it is impressed upon us that one is gone from our midst whom we shall sadly miss—one whose interest in this work was unabating, and who served the society as secretary long and ably, retiring from active work only when she felt the duties too onerous for her failing strength.

The sweet face and pleasant smile of Mrs. Walker will not again greet our coming together; the gentle voice no more be heard in earnest, fervent prayer for the cause so dear to her heart; but what words of mine can portray the beautiful character of this lovely Christian woman, whom to know was to admire and love? Always ready for the work of "Our Father," she quietly and unobtrusively wended her way along the thoroughfare of life, doing those things nearest at hand, lightening the burden of a weary friend by words of encouragement, dropping a tear of sympathy with those distressed in mind or body, and extending more substantial aid to the poor and needy, whom we shall always find in our midst; speaking unhesitatingly, in season and out of season, for the cause that was a part of her life. Possessing a bright intellect, cultured and refined, yet withal so retiring, a stranger would pause, surprised at the forcible thought so clearly expressed, and turn again to the gentle woman whose dignity of mien marked the thorough lady, daughter of a talented father whom our community had respected and honored.

The whole life of our dear friend was passed in our town, and her friends are legion, and found alike among the lofty and the lowly. A person of unusual industry, her hands were ever full of work for her church, her children, her family, her friends.

Sufferings patiently borne, and a calm surrender of herself to the Lord whom she had trusted, marked her last years of life. When prostrated by disease, and the weary ascent of Calvary had begun, she still felt there was much to be done. To her dear ones she said: "I do not fear death. For many years I have striven to be ready for the summons, and while (God willing) I would remain yet awhile longer, I can and do trust my Savior to be with me even to the end."

At the close of a wintry day, in the arms of a dear son, like a weary child, she fell asleep, to awaken in that better land, where no shadows fall across the pathway, where no tears dim the eye, no words of parting are spoken, but where the Christian finds the full fruition of every hope in hearing the "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

We must be deeply read in the Bible, taught of the Bible, living by the Bible, lighting our path with the Bible, if we are to do much for the salvation of men.—Sir William Dawson.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It perfects all the vital processes.

W. P. Keeton, Woodstock, Ala., took Hood's Sarsaparilla to make his blood pure. He writes that he had not felt well but tired for some time. Before he had finished the first bottle of this medicine he felt better and when he had taken the second was like another man—free from that tired feeling and able to do his work.

"A NEW VERSION,"

BY REV. L. CARLEY.

MR. EDITOR: I have read your criticisms of the above-named work, and also those of your correspondents, with a good degree of interest. But I must confess that, in spite of your insinuations that those who produced it were influenced by a desire to make money, and that those who like it are led astray because they "are looking for something new," I am still an enthusiastic admirer of The Twentieth Century New Testament. I believe it is the best translation that was ever made into the English language, and that it is destined to find its way to a high place in the esteem of intelligent Christian people. That it is faultless no one can affirm. The same is true of the Authorized and of the Revised Versions. These are all human productions, and the limitations of human knowledge and skill are manifest in each of them. Blemishes are found in every English translation of the New Testament, and it is freely admitted that The Twentieth Century New Testament is no exception. The progress of biblical learning had made the faults of the Authorized Version so manifest that the Revised Version of 1881 had become an actual necessity. When one places these two versions in comparison, and then lays by their side the best Greek Testament, it is impossible for him to say "the old is better." As an almost literal translation the Revised Version has not been surpassed. But, as The Twentieth Century New Testament translators say, "no purely literal rendering can ever adequately represent the thoughts conveyed in the idioms of another language." And, therefore, as they further say: 'In this translation not only every word, but also the emphasis placed upon every word, has been carefully weighed, and an effort made to give the exact force and meaning in idiomatic modern English." The result, instead of being subjected to ridicule, deserves appreciation and commendation.

The fact that in some places this Version is like some other one, is no argument against it at all. There are some texts that suggest to every preacher that uses them the same divisions and the same lines of thought. And because two preachers happen to handle such a text in the same way is no evidence that one or the other is a plagiarist. So it is in the translation of the New Testament. You will pardon me for saying that, to my mind, some of your other criticisms are without force. What you say as to Hebrews xii, 2, I think, is worthy of attention. I suppose Dr. Tigert, whom you have appealed to as to the correctness of the translation, will answer and give satisfactory reasons for or against it. So to the omission of I. John v, 7, you answer your own criticism when you say: "True, the verse is regarded as spurious." For the same reason it was left out of the Revised Version. No explanation was given in either case, doubtless, because the translators were not writing a commentary on the Authorized Version.

Your complaint that The Twentieth Century New Testament uses in Revelation the word "senator" in the place of "elder" will no doubt prove to be quite a popular objection to it. Bro. J. W. Cunningham has fallen into line, and says it occurs to him that it "was an absurdity." Possibly, however, it is not an absurdity at all. Originally the Greek word in question was an adjective in the comparative degree. It became a noun, and is so used in the New Testament, having the meaning of an adjective in only two or three places. It is used in speaking of the Jewish Sanhedrin. The members were called "elders." Then the term was applied to an order in the Christian ministry, and has so continued to the present time. In The Twentieth Century New Testament this word is translated in four different ways, according to its meaning in each place. These words are 'ancestors," "councillors," "officers," 'senators.' When the word means the Jew's ancestors, that is the word used; when it means the Sanhedrin the word "councillors" is used; when it means an order in the ministry the word 'officer" is used. In the Book of Revelation the word is used in a peculiar sense. It does not mean ancestors, nor a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin, nor an order in the ministry. What, then, does it mean? And how ought the word to be translated?

The answer to this question is vitally connected with the question as to who "the four and twenty elders" were of Rev. iv, 4. Do they belong to the glorified church? The opinion entertained by some that they do is based upon a corrupt text in Rev. v, 9, 10. The correct text, as given in the Revised Version, shows that the 'four beasts" and the "four and twenty elders" were not among those who had been redeemed "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people," but belonged to a different order of beings entirely. The elders sat, however, upon thrones, and had on their heads crowns of gold, and in some sense they may have been like the Jewish Sanhedrin. As the Sanhedrin was called a senate (Acts v, 21), it seems appropriate to call these "elders" senators. They certainly were not "elders" in any sense of the word applied to officers in the visible church, and Bro. Cunningham's "facetious references to 'local senators,' 'pastoral senators,' and 'presiding senators,'" are simply unfounded imaginings.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I have written from a sense of duty. I have found so much genuine pleasure and profit from reading and studying The Twentieth Century New Testament that I regret to see opposition to it from any quarter. I believe that, instead of this work proving to be a "passing sensation," it is here to stay, and that it will bring untold blessing to the church of God.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA.

At the Conference in New Iberia, I was returned by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald to this "Lake City," the metropolis of northeast Louisiana. After spending several days very pleasantly in Mississippi with friends and relatives of my wife, we are once more domiciled in our parsonage home, and notwithstanding the unusually severe weather, have been looking after the interest of "the kingdom."

The future of the "Lake City," in a material way, was never so hopeful as at present. The Gould system is now constructing a road on this, the west bank of the Mississippi river, which, when completed, will be the most direct and shortest line from New Orleans to St. Louis, and will place Lake Providence in touch with these great centers of commercial life.

The natural resources of this section of Louisiana are unsurpassed. The soil is as rich and fertile as "the valley of the Nile," producing corn, cotton, hay, fruits and vegetables in abundance, where the farmer gives only ordinary attention to cultivation. East Carroll parish is also rich in cypress and other timber, and Lake Providence now boasts a manufacturing company which can furnish all classes of lumber to the local trade, thereby saving to the consumer the high freights which were paid in the past. This company will also manufacture furniture out of home material, and hence will give employment to a number of laborers.

We now have a population of some fifteen hundred, which is double that of 1890, and, with the coming of the Gould road, we expect a population of from three to five thousand in four or five years. A $16 500 courthouse has just been completed, and contracts for water-works and electric lights have been let, with also encouraging prospects for an ice-plant and oil-mill in the near future. Our local bank is doing a fine business, and the mercantile houses are especially prosperous this season, as crops were unusually fine and the prices fairly good.

The outlook for our church is not so encouraging, though we are hopeful that an influx of new blood and new ideas with the coming of the railroad will greatly improve the religious status of the church, and also bring an increase in numbers and material strength. We hope to be ready to welcome and attract all new comers who are Methodistically inclined, and to that end we are now striving to remodel and beautify our church building.

During the past year we succeeded in repairing and furnishing our parsonage by the persevering industry of our Ladies' Parsonage Aid Society, and can now boast as neat and cozy a preacher's home as can be found in the bounds of the Conference. Many kindnesses were accorded us during the year previous, for which we are grateful; and since entering upon the new, have received tokens of appreciation not a few. Only last week the dray of Mr. J. S. Millikin, a prosperous merchant of this town, came freighted with an abundant supply of good things for the parsonage larder, all of which being an expression of his own generosity and appreciation for the preacher and his family, though himself not a member of the church. To this worthy gentleman, and others too numerous to mention by name, our ecclesiastical hat is respectfully off.

J. E. DANSON.

Nervous Prostration Cured by DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

"I am an engineer by trade and the hard work and worry of running a large engine brought on nervous prostration," writes Mr. Chas. F. Dixon, of Arbuckle, Colusa Co., Calif. "A friend recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to me and I bought one bottle; thought that it helped me so continued the use of it until I had taken six bottles. I feel better than ever in my life. Am not a particle nervous, can work hard all day and sleep sound at night. I not only think so but I know that the 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me and therefore I will recommend it to others."

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1902.

It is a singular kind of Christian fraternity and fellowship that will draw back and hesitate to proselyte a Philippine Roman Catholic, yet seize with avidity the opportunity to proselyte an Evangelical Protestant at home. The difference between the two lies in the fact that the Filipino is supposed to have had a touch of the hand of St. Peter's successors, while the other has been in touch with the sects.

Archbishop Keene, of Iowa, has given notice that the Roman Catholic clergy of Dubuque will take part in the coming municipal election with a view to the overthrow of the saloon. We wonder if the saloonists and liquor lovers will turn against them as they do other ministers who fight the liquor curse! By the way, is not Iowa a prohibition State? The victory will probably be easy in Dubuque. We would be mightily pleased to see the Catholic clergy of St. Louis or Cincinnati turn with heart and hand against the whisky devil. They dare not undertake it in the strongholds of the enemy.

Zion's Herald seems to be of the opinion that it is not altogether right to leave to the doctors the blessedness "that comes from ability to minister to the body's immediate and crying needs," and would have theological students taught something about medicine and surgery—how to abate a fever and set a broken limb. The Herald asks, "Why not?" We repeat the question. It might lessen the doctor's bills of the parishioners. Besides, in our cities, the doctorate would not be a misnomer as it so often is under the present limited attainments of so many of our preachers. By all means let us insist on graduating all our young preachers in medicine!

We are in trouble. With Brother Carley after us on one side, and the good women of the Home Mission Society, who think we are naughty because we do not agree with them on the question of deaconesses, on the other, we have our hands full. We did not intend to utter another word about the Modern English New Testament, save to present some of its gems, but we must be allowed to say here that if "the progress of biblical learning had made the faults of the Authorized Version so manifest that the Revised Version of 1881 had become an actual necessity," and if the Twentieth Century New Testament, with its blemishes and faults, as admitted by our correspondent, "is the best translation that was ever made into the English language," then the Authorized Version is scarcely more than an attempt at translation, and utterly misleading. We are greatly surprised at Brother Car-

A NEGLECTED THEME.

The early preachers of Methodism dwelt often and with marvelous success on the future punishment of the wicked. This was not because of necessity growing out of any peculiar condition of society, nor because of any sin that particularly exposed the men of their generation to danger, but because of a well-settled conviction that the doctrine was part of the gospel, and as such, the duty of preaching it was included in their commission. And they were right. In this they followed the instructions and example of the Master.

St. Paul so understood his commission, and there can be no doubt that he moved many hearers to repentance by calling their attention to the retributive justice of God. No one can read his epistles and fail to notice his scathing denunciation of sin, and his faithful warning of the dangers to which sin exposes the soul in the future state. The apostle loved his fellow-men, especially his "kinsmen according to the flesh," and "knowing the terror of the Lord," he persuaded them to turn from sin and save themselves from its consequences. Judgment, justice, and the perdition of ungodly men, were often the themes of his public discourses. Even before Felix, when in bonds, he did not refrain from declaring the certainty of "judgment to come," and so powerful was his reasoning that the Governor trembled. Fidelity to Christ requires every man who pretends to obey the call to the ministry to warn his hearers of the justice and judgment of God, as well as to proclaim his mercy and loving kindness.

But the subject is seriously neglected; we might say criminally neglected. There has been no change in the terms of the commission. It is the same as when delivered to the apostles and is still accompanied by the declaration: "He that believeth not shall be damned." And human nature remains the same. It has not changed one whit since St. Paul wrote the first chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. Under the influence of sin and the wicked one, men do the same things now they did then, and are equally exposed to the wrath of God. Have men found a better way of reaching the people? To say that is to impeach the wisdom of the Lord, who not only commanded the preaching of future punishment, but set the example. Yet, while our preachers have not discarded the doctrine, they have to a large extent set it aside, and are trying to save the world by dwelling almost exclusively on another phase of the gospel.

We hear much of love, obedience, practical religion; of the Fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man; and not infrequently we hear of the "All-Father," coupled with the false statement that "mercy is the darling attribute of God." If now and then one ventures to warn the wicked against future punishment, he does it timidly as though he were treading on doubtful ground, and would apologize for the plainness of the gospel. He proceeds on the principle that the people are too cultured to tolerate the language of the Bible, else are not such sinners as to need the old-time preaching. Not so. The trouble is with the man in the pulpit. He is either afraid to speak out, or afraid he will say something wrong.

Many years ago, when the refinements of modern society began to show themselves among our preachers, there happened one of the most refined to occupy the pulpit of Taylor's Chapel, perhaps the best country church in West Tennessee at that time. The preacher took occasion to speak of future punishment—the place, the sufferings, etc. He appeared to be afraid to say "hell," "damnation," and like scriptural phrases. He would say "doom," "condemnation," and possibly "hades," or "gehenna." Dear old Uncle Ed. Taylor, the patriarch of the church, who could not tolerate such squeamishness, bore it as long as he could, and then looked up and said: "Preacher, I would say 'hell,' if it killed me." The lesson was a good one. Do not some of us need such reproofs?

No man can excuse himself by saying: "I preach the truth," or "I am in line with the teachings of my church." That is not disputed. The point is: Do you declare the whole counsel of God? There is such a thing as lulling the souls of men to ease under fair speeches—so impressing men with the goodness of God, as to lead them to believe that he will not punish them for their sins. Thousands of souls to-day are dwelling in carnal security. They need to be aroused to a sense of their danger. It would be well for us to try the effect of a few sermons on future punishment. "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men."

A COMMON HYMNAL.

The joint committee on federation authorized by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, and our own General Conference, which met in 1897 or the early part of 1898, among other things submitted the following:

"That we recommend the taking of prompt steps for the preparation of a common catechism, a common hymn book and a common order of public worship, and that other branches of Methodists be invited to co-operate in this undertaking."

This action of the committee was approved by the General Conference of our church in 1898. Bishop Walden says the General Conference of the M. E. Church did the same thing in 1900. But the General Conference of the M. E. Church, according to a statement of Bishop Walden in the Northwestern Christian Advocate of Feb. 19, also authorized a new hymnal. To prepare such a hymnal a committee was appointed, and that committee has been industriously at work.

Now our Northern brethren find themselves embarrassed. They have discovered, perhaps too late, that their action, and the work of the "Hymnal Committee," will probably defeat the proposed common hymnal. To avoid this, which Bishop Walden says, would "bring disappointment and grief, and ought to be by all means prevented," the Book Committee of the M. E. Church, at its annual meeting two weeks since, though without authority to act, took the liberty to suggest that the Hymnal Committee suspend its work until after the meeting of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in May. Whether the committee will heed the advice, remains to be seen.

The attempt to explain the matter, in view of all the facts, is weak. Bishop Walden says the action of the General Conference authorizing the hymnal was taken "prior to that concurring in the approval of a common hymn book." Suppose it was; the report of the committee on federation was before the body, and distinctly provided for a common hymnal. If they had been anxious for a common hymnal, and had inadvertently voted to authorize a new hymnal, when it was found that the two actions were in conflict, the previous action could have been reconsidered without difficulty.

The Bishop further says: "No one thought the previous authorization of a new hymnal would interfere with the production of the common hymn book." Perhaps not. And maybe no one down South would have thought so had the action of the General Conference authorized an abridgement of the hymn book instead of "a new hymnal." But a new hymnal in face of the action approving a common hymnal as recommended by the committee on federation, to us, looks like an effort to force on us a hymnal of their own making. The Book Committee and the Bishop ought to have intervened a year ago.

Again: the Bishop says the report of the committee on federation "was adopted by an almost, if not quite, unanimous vote." Yes, the report, not of the joint committee, but of the committee of the General Conference of 1900. If we have been correctly informed, the report of the joint committee, approved without alteration or amendment by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was amended by the General Conference of the M. E. Church. It naturally follows that the report must go back to the M. E. Church, South, for approval before it becomes the action of the two churches.

Candidly, aside from our views of federation in general, and the propriety of a common hymnal in particular, we do not like the action of our brethren across the line. It brings to mind previous history—the treatment accorded Dr. Lovick Pierce, our representative at the General Conference of the M. E. Church in 1848; the incident in Memphis in 1870, and the embarrassing circumstances under which Dr. J. C. Morris delivered his fraternal address in 1896, and other things that might be named.

We do not care to make an issue of anything in the past. For things of the present we make demand in full. If in this matter of a common hymnal we take part, we must do so on perfect equality. Our brethren of the M. E. Church, whether their committee on the new hymnal suspends or completes its work, must not thrust the work done before us and ask its adoption. It must be a common hymnal prepared by a joint committee. To us this is a serious and painful matter, but we must maintain our self-respect.

Our offer to club with the Methodist Illustrated Magazine was withdrawn long since. We occasionally have calls for "specimen copies." We can not comply with request, as we do not keep the Magazine on hand. We make this announcement that our friends may know why we fail to answer their requests.

These studies are the fourth in a series printed in the Epworth Era, during October and November, 1901, and are published in pamphlet form for more general and permanent use. In this form the classes and reading circles organized since the course appeared in the Era have within easy reach the suggested readings, hints to classes, and supplementary facts with regard to the work of our own church. The charts will be of service in League meetings. For further information address the author, Nashville, Tenn.

LASTING HYMNS. A new song book, suitable for revival and social meetings. Hy Lee & Porter, New Orleans and Cincinnati.

We are in nowise a judge of music, and can not pass on the merits or demerits of any piece. We can only tell after hearing it whether it agrees with our sense of melody or not. The "Lasting Hymns," prepared by an active pastor of New Orleans, is a volume of 246 songs, many of them from the best hymn writers of the day; some of them we know to be the most popular airs in use. Lovers of sacred song will do well to correspond with Rev. J. A. Lee, author of the song, and the book advertised in another column. Address him at 7921 St. Charles avenue, New Orleans.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Preachers in Charge—

DEAR BRETHREN: Two months have elapsed since the Annual Conference adopted Governor Jones' amendment to the report of the Joint Board of Finance, requiring the appointment of a layman in each pastoral charge to collect money and subscriptions for the Conference Endowment Fund; and several weeks have gone by since my card appeared in the ADVOCATE respectfully urging you to make the appointments at once, and to advise me, as president of the trustees of Endowment Fund, of your action in the premises. Two pastors—one of them a member of the Joint Board of Finance—have written me announcing appointments; neither is in the Forest district. The mover of the resolution, or amendment, has also failed to answer an inquiry from me. This is my last appeal in the matter.

Yours faithfully,

T. L MELLEN,
Pres. Conf. Fund Trustees.

REV. J. A. RANDOLPH.

DEAR BRO BOSWELL: The following from the Bible Society Record will be read with interest by Brother Randolph's brethren and friends:

Rev. J. C Goodrich, agent for the American Bible Society in the Philippines, writing of the work of Bible translation and circulation, says: "We have in hand the Gospel of St. Matthew in the Visayan de Cebuan, translated by Chaplain John Randolph with the assistance of competent native helpers. Chaplain Randolph presents this without any expense to the society, and wishes that whatever value is placed upon the work, may be credited to the North Mississippi Conference of the M E Church, South. We are greatly indebted to Chaplain Randolph for this careful translation of that Gospel." G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss., Feb. 6 1902.

GOOD SEED.

D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich., are among the most extensive seed growers in the United States. For many years past we have used their garden seed, and have always found them reliable, true to name and character as represented. They can be fully trusted. Ferry's seeds can be found in almost every town in the country. They also raise and sell flower seeds by the million. Send for their catalogue. We acknowledge from them the receipt of a package, with thanks. We have no garden ground in this big city, but we shall place the seed where they will do the most good.

PERSONAL.

Bishops Wilson and Candler are now in Cuba, where they will hold a Conference with our missionaries who are at work on the island.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, of Mer Rouge, La., in a letter to the editor, says, "I have a delightful work, and the outlook for the year is very promising."

A note from D.. C. W. Carter, of Crowley district, informs us that though improving, he is not yet able to resume work. See notice from him in another column.

Rev. W. B. Lewis, the excellent pastor of our church at Yazoo City, gives us some interesting notes from his charge. They stimulate. Read and ponder. It will do you good.

We had a pleasant visit last week from Rev. E C. Bett, of Port Vincent, La. He is working with energy to build a parsonage, and will succeed. The outlook in his work is good.

Bishop Granbery passed through the city, on Monday last, on his way home from Mexico. He was not well, and remained in his room during the day. He left in the evening for Virginia.

A kind note from Rev. J. W. Crisler, Newton, Miss., closes by saying: "We are moving off far better on this charge now than we did last year. We expect a gracious year for the Lord."

Rev. Thos. Carter preached last Sunday at Felicity Street Church for Brother Drake, who was out of the city. Brother Carter is often in demand for the pulpit as well as work in the Epworth League.

We have received a letter from Rev. W. G. Evans explaining the delay in getting out the Minutes of the Louisiana Conference. We will publish it next week. It reached us too late for the present issue.

Dr. S. A. Steel will soon begin a lecturing tour in Mississippi. He will be welcomed by hundred of his old friends, and many new ones will be added to his list. Sorry we have not the dates and places at command.

A pleasant note from Rev. W. C. Lester informs us that he has been well received by the good people of his charge, Houston and Wesley, and hopes to do a good year's work. We thank him for kind personal expressions.

Dr. Talmage, the famous preacher, filled the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, in this city, on Sunday last. The house was packed. It is said that hundreds failed to get even inside the house. The sermon was characteristic.

Rev. W. W. Drake is engaged in a meeting at Mansfield, La. He is having much success. The services are being held in the college chapel. Naturally the girls in the school are sharing in the benefits of the work. We hope to have full particulars later.

Rev. A. C. Millar, president of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., after fifteen years of faithful service, has resigned. No reason, as far as we have seen, has been given. Rev. Stonewall Anderson, an alumnus of the institution, has been elected in his stead.

We have had the pleasure several times of meeting the Rev. J. A. Lee, the newly installed pastor of the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church. He is a pleasant and intelligent gentleman, and has made a fine impression in the city. We trust that he may have a happy and successful pastorate.

Rev. Geo. Needham, an occasional correspondent of this ADVOCATE, who spent some years in the West, but who has recently labored in Kentucky, has failed in health, and will go to Los Angeles and try to recuperate. We expect to hear from him after he gets located and rested. We hope he may be fully restored.

Important to the Seashore District.

The most of the pastors have been written to, and probably all of them have learned of the District Sunday-school Convention to be opened in March. It has become an annual meeting; will most likely continue yearly in all the districts, grown essential and so recognized. This district occasion contemplates a cordial assistance from each preacher, and from laymen sent to represent the individual schools. Discussion in papers, addresses, and general, with preaching will engage the time. The range of the programme, prepared and assigned, is designed to go far and stimulate interest in channels leading to and from the Sunday-school.

The convention will meet at Hattiesburg, Main Street, on Wednesday, March 19, continuing work until Friday evening following. Preachers to whom subjects are sent will understand that transference of the assignment may be made to competent lay brethren in their charges. This action may result in increasing the number of workers present. Some will come, if responsible for definite work, who might feel less able to come without this spur. Brethren are expected to use their best judgment in this.

Members of the Programme Committee here who have communicated their subjects to the brethren are desirous of hearing immediately from them. If the subjects can not be undertaken, let it be known promptly for readjustment. It is hoped, however, that hearty assent to appointment will come cheerfully up from all.

With this known, in the ADVOCATE following this one can be printed the convention programme, with completeness of detail as to subjects and speakers.

Address either Rev. W. M. Sullivan or W. H. Huntley.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Feb 22, 1902.

Mississippi Conference.

To the Members of the Various Examining Committees, and to the Members of the Several Classes of the Missis-sippi Annual Conference, etc.

DEAR BRETHREN: Your attention is called to the following paper, which was handed me at McComb, last December, as the result of a meeting of the members of the Examining Committees:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that a Summer Normal be held for the undergraduates of our Conference.

"2. That this Normal be held at Millsaps College as soon after the commencement as practicable, provided the use of the buildings can be had for this purpose.

"3. That the Revs. T. L. Mellen, L. Carley and D. W. L. C. Hannicutt be appointed a Committee of Three, with plenary powers to arrange for next Summer's Normal, and that they be requested to report to us at the next session of our Conference a plan whereby we may make the Normal permanent."

These resolutions were signed by representatives of each committee and, I am assured, met with the approval of all others.

The Rev. B. F. Lewis informed me that the Rev. D. Murrah said there would be no trouble about getting the use of the Millsaps College buildings at the time designated. We are promised board at very reasonable rates, though no definite arrangement has yet been made, but will be at an early date.

The Rev. L. Carley is requested to correspond with the Rev. Gross Alexander, of the Vanderbilt University, and get the details of the plan which has wrought so well for the undergraduates of the Tennessee and adjacent Conferences.

The undergraduates of the Mississippi Conference are requested to prepare their studies, and be ready for their examinations. Those passing at the Normal in June will not have to be examined at the session of Conference. They will be free during the protracted meeting season. Opportunity will, doubtless, be afforded those who have failed in past examinations to bring up the course of study for two years.

It is hoped that we may be able to co-operate with the brethren who are adopting a post-graduate course of study. Their act must surely meet with the endorsement of every committeeman and others who desire to see our preachers thoroughly qualified intellectually, as well as spiritually, for the great work whereunto God has called them.

At an early date a programme for the Normal and other information will be made through the columns of the ADVOCATE and the indulgence of Dr. Boswell.

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN.

The Commoner

(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to each for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

"Blymyer" Bells

INTERESTING BOOKLETS ABOUT BELLS AND INDUCEMENTS TO BUYERS.

The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, makers of the famous "Blymyer bells," have issued two nicely printed and finely illustrated little booklets that tell all about "bells that speak," the casting of them and their use from ancient to modern times. Engraved on the covers are two beautiful illustrations in colors—"Ring Out the Old; Ring In the New," and "Turn Again, Dick Whittington, Lord Mayor of London." These interesting little booklets will be sent for a two-cent stamp to anyone interested in church bells.

The "Blymyer bell" is the result of over thirty years' experience in bell founding, and their reputation has become worldwide. The composition of these bells is entirely unlike that used by other founders, being in large part an extra fine quality of steel, insuring richer and sweeter and greater volume of tone than is possessed by any other bell. Strength and durability is also a leading feature with these famous bells.

The manufacturers, to show their confidence in the superior merit of the "Blymyer" bells, offer them for free trial, leaving the buyers to be both judge and jury.

Any one interested in the purchase of a bell should send for a catalogue.

DID NOT KNOW SHE HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Gertrude Warner Scott Cured by the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root.

Women suffer untold misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood; in many cases when doctoring, they are led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for their ills, when in fact disordered kidneys are the chief cause of their distressing troubles.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle sent free, by mail.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root investigated by "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speaks in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

Vinton, Iowa, July 15th, 1901.
DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—In the summer of 1900, I was taken violently ill. My trouble began with pain in my stomach and back, so severe that it seemed as if knives were cutting me. I was treated by two of the best physicians in the country, and consulted another. None of them suspected that the cause of my trouble was kidney disease. They all told me that I had cancer of the stomach, and would die. I grew so weak that I could not walk any more than a child a month old, and I only weighed sixty pounds. One day my brother saw in a paper your advertisement of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. He bought me a bottle at our drug store and I took it. My family could see a change in me, for the better, so they obtained more and I continued the use of Swamp-Root regularly. I was so weak and run down that it took considerable to build me up again. I am now well, thanks to Swamp-Root, and weigh 148 pounds, and am keeping house for my husband and brother on a farm. Swamp-Root cured me after the doctors had failed to do me a particle of good.

Can We Help Unlovely Children?

We all know "unlovely" children—unlovely in disposition and character. They are the "possessed of evil" many times, and a source of heartache and perplexity to those who are responsible for their training.

I have known such children. One comes especially to my mind. Twenty years ago a more unlovely, perverse, unsmiling child it would be hard to find. Strange as it may seem, these traits appeared strongest when she was with her mother. For her to be punished, as was absolutely necessary at times, was enough to give the whole family hysteria. To most people, seeing only the seeable side of the child without caring to look for what might else have been found, she was almost utterly without a "sweet side" in her whole make-up. But what an injustice, and an injustice to helplessness!

There was a friend whom this child loved with all the intensity of a silent, deep, misunderstood little heart. To this friend alone she revealed the possibilities of her nature. To be with her softened and sweetened all the "hatefulnesses" that were so glaring to most eyes.

She had a little sister very near her own age with whom she often quarreled, it is true, but towards whom there was never visible a trace of jealousy or ill-will because of the love and admiration called forth by her exquisitely beautiful nature. I remember one day the two little girls were standing together when a caller was taking her leave. Like many other thoughtless people, the lady stooped down and fondly kissed the little sister, saying, "You are the sweetest child I ever saw." And then she went away, leaving one smiling little face and one on which there was a pathetic little shadow.

As the door closed the elder sister, with rare self renunciation, put her arms around her little sister, saying, 'She is sweet."

"Little sister" is with God, but there still lives on the earth tho un'ovely elder sister—no longer unlovely. She has ripened into a deep hearted, quiet, beautiful woman, loving and beloved.

Another child comes to my mind, so unlovely in nature that the most generous almost depair of finding a place to begin to love him. In many, many, almost indescribable ways he was forbidding. People generally set him down as a "disagreeable," "bad," a "general nuisance," according to their own temperament.

But who dares to desert such a child? "Who helps a child helps humanity." Who helps such a child does even more—he saves. Recognizing his own unloveliness, this boy receives with an astonishment that has many a touch of pathos in it any of the small kindnesses so lavishly bestowed on attractive childhood. The sweetnesses that seem to belong so naturally to other children are denied him, except on rare occasions when someone pityingly or with a deeper and kindlier discernment bestows them. It can only be through long, loving-hearted and unsleeping, unwearying patience that the best his nature is capable of will be revealed and the unlovely child become at last the useful and respected man, with some keen sense, let us hope, of the deep need of pity, patience and kindness to all childhood, but most of all to that which seems unlovely.

Again, let us plead for unlovely children, for those who, recognizing their own unloveliness, are powerless to overcome what must be hateful to themselves and whose tender hearts must often hunger for some stray morsels of the love lavished on sweeter natures, until to them life becomes something of a tragedy. Let us keep a watch abroad for these little ones, so often misinterpreted, and if for awhile they seem unlovely, let us never let a little child realize that it is unlovely.—Belle Sparr Luckett, in Sunday-School Times.

A Good Reference.

John was fifteen, and anxious to get a desirable place in the office of a well-known lawyer, who had advertised for a boy, but doubted his success, because, being a stranger in the city, he had no reference to present.

"I'm afraid I'll stand a poor chance," he thought, despondently; "however, I'll try to appear as well as I can, for that may help me a little."

So he was careful to have his dress and person neat, and when he took his turn to be interviewed, went in with his hat in his hand and a smile on his face.

The keen-eyed lawyer glanced him over from head to foot.

"Good face," he thought, "and pleasant ways."

Then he noted the neat suit—but other boys had appeared in new clothes—saw the well-brushed hair and clean-looking skin. Very well, but there had been other there quite as cleanly. Another glance, however, showed the finger-nails free from soil.

"Ah! that looks like thoroughness," thought the lawyer.

Then he asked a few direct, rapid questions, which John answered as directly.

"Prompt," was his mental comment; "can speak up when necessary." "Let's see your writing," he added aloud.

John took a pen and wrote his name. "Very well, easy to read, and no flourishes. Now, what references have you?"

The dreadful question, at last! John's face fell. He had begun to feel some hope of success, but this dashed it again.

"I haven't any," he said lowly; "I am almost a stranger in the city."

"Can't take a boy without references," was the brusque rejoinder, and, as he spoke, a sudden thought sent a flush to John's cheek.

"I haven't any references," he said, with hesitation; "but here's a letter from mother I just received. I wish you would read it."

The lawyer took it. It was a short letter.

"My dear John: I want to remind you that wherever you find work, you must consider that work your own. Don't go into it, as some boys do, with the feeling that you will do as little as you can, and get something better soon; but make up your mind you will do as much as possible, and make yourself so necessary to your employer that he will never let you go. You have been a good son to me, and I can truly say that I have never known you to shirk. Be as good in business and I am sure God will bless your efforts."

"H'm!" said the lawyer, reading it over the second time. "That's pretty good advice, John—excellent advice. I rather think I'll try you, even without the references."

John had been with him six years, and last Spring was admitted to the bar.

"Do you intend taking that young man into partnership?" asked a friend, lately.

"Yes, I do. I couldn't get along without John; he is my right-hand man," exclaimed the lawyer, heartily.

And John always says the best reference he ever had was his mother's good advice and honest praise.—Sacred Heart Review.

To seek excellence rather than praise is not only to lift one's work above the vicissitudes of external fortune, but it is also to diminish that baleful self consciousness which stands in the way of the growth of so many aspiring people.—Southern Churchman.

Walking Where We Live

When Paul wrote to the Colossian Christians, he spake of their old life and its setting of earthly ideas and selfish, sinful practices, "in the which ye also walked aforetime, when ye lived in these things." But now, he writes, you have a different home, a different citizenship. You are risen with Christ, you are in another sphere; the roots of your life are deeply hidden in him. "As ye have therefore received the Lord Jesus, so walk ye in him."

Walk in your own domain, live in your new estate. Repudiate the manners and diet and doings of Egypt, and cultivate those of the land of promise. Have the mind and speak the language of Christ. So shall you walk in wisdom toward non-citizens, redeeming the time, glorifying the true citizenship and attracting men toward it.—The Wellspring.

The man who thinks out what he wants to do, and then works, and works hard, will win, and no others do, or ever have, or can. God will not have it so.—Elbert Hubbard.

In this life there is but one sure happiness—to live for others.—Leo Tolstoi.

Temperance.

THE ONLY HOPE.

Some Incidents Which Show Where the Drunkard Can Find Certain Deliverance.

There is in memory a dear friend, once one of the ablest judges on a supreme bench. His learning was vast and thorough. When he was himself he was a prince in social life, but he loved the cup. At last he was persuaded to enter a temperance fraternity and he finally became the chief of the order in his state. For years his experience was the old story. At times the right had the mastery, and I wrestled with him to decide "As for me I will serve the Lord." But he waited for a more convenient season, and at last this star of science and jurisprudence went out in the darkness, for he died dead drunk, alone, in the hot hold of an Atlantic coasting steamer.

Another, who stood at the head of his profession as a mechanical engineer, had the genius of the order which has produced some of those marvels of invention for which our country is famous. Though he was much my senior, our mechanical tastes drew us together as brothers. Intemperate habits gained power over him till he was the terror of his lovely wife and daughters, and of his gray-haired mother. He would listen to the writer, however, even when writhing in mania potu. I grappled his case, entering into it with so much interest that it haunted me in my dreams, and I would cry out in my sleep. As often as he fell I rescued him from horrid drink dens. At last I met him when his eyes showed that he was then in one of his sprees. He grasped my hand and assured me he had just pledged himself, under oath, before a magistrate, never to drink again. I held his proffered hand and, lovingly looking him in the face, said to him: "John, it's of no use for you to sign pledges, or join societies. You will come to Christ, or a drunkard's grave will be the door of hell to your poor soul." He had a wild revel that night, but those words kept ringing in his ears, and he accepted refuge on the Rock from which no temptation can move him.

Another case was a sea captain, whom I found at a meeting for sailors in Boston. He rose with others for prayer, and at the close of the hour I singled him out for conversation, but he was so drunk it seemed of no use to speak to him. I therefore wrote the warning on a card, verbally made in the other case, and put it in his pocket, where he found it when he was sober. That arrow, too, went home and he became noted for efficiency in Christian work among seamen.

These and other thrilling experiences have led me to the conviction that the grace of God is the only hope for one in the charmed circles of social tippling, or of "moderate" drinking. Temperance societies may be the advance guard to halt the march of the enemy, but the only force able to rout the rum fiend is commanded by the "still small voice." The Gospel of Jesus of Nazareth is the only hope, in thousands of cases, of which these are types. Drunkards often die suddenly with so-called heart disease, or something else. Each of them, the same as every other human soul, is to meet One in judgment who says: "No drunkard shall enter the kingdom." A hundred thousand are yearly marching to eternity. Thousands of them via the madhouse, which gets a big majority of its recruits through intemperance. We say to those of them still here: "Come to Jesus just now," by deciding in earnest to serve Him, and daily and regularly reading the Bible and praying for help. Pray for help to decide. Every moment of delay to decide is one of rejecting Him, and makes one stronger to reject and weaker to accept.—George May Powell, in Union Signal.

OBITUARIES.

Mrs. Z PORA MISSISSIPPI CROSSLEY was born in Concordia parish, La., Jan. 28, 1862, and died in the Methodist parsonage at Walnut Grove, Miss., Jan. 23 1902. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church in her girlhood. On the twenty-sixth of March, 1885, in McComb City, Miss., she was married to Clerance M. Crossley, to whom she was a faithful, devoted wife. In 1892 her husband, yielding to the call of the Lord, entered the itinerant ranks of the Methodist ministry. She cheerfully went with him into that, to them, untried field. How nobly she stood by him in his work, and how faithfully she labored in her new sphere, can never be fully appreciated here. Soon after their itinerant life began Sister Crossley professed the experience of entire sanctification, and lived the experience. Hers was a day-by-day life of faith. In December, 1901, Bro. Crossley was appointed to the Walnut Grove charge, Forest district. The results of that year's work were the most remarkable in the history of the charge, and the good wife deserves no small credit for the success, and will receive no small share of the final reward. During her last illness, which was of short duration, though suffering much pain, she never murmured, but would often grow happy and praise her Savior aloud. About three hours before she died, turning to her husband, she said: 'Pepe, they have taken away the light, but Jesus is here. Look, don't you see him?' He said, "As you pass down the valley, and get to where you can't speak, if Jesus is still with you, indicate it by raising your hand." Every few moments she would raise her hand. When too weak to do that, she still made the effort. Just at the last she whispered, "Jesus, blessed Jesus." Sister Crossley's remains were brought to McComb for interment. The funeral services were conducted from the Methodist Church by Rev. J. W. Chambers and the writer. Six little girls mourn with their father, but several of these little ones have learned to trust their mother's Savior. B. F. LEWIS.

Mrs. ELIZABETH J. DRAKE was born in Jefferson county, Miss., June 21, 1836, and died near St. Joseph, La., Jan. 28, 1902. Most of the life that lies between these dates was passed in Tensas parish, where her parents, James Miller and Catherine Moser, had been among the early settlers. She was educated in Natchez at the school of Dr. Spaer, and was married Sept. 21, 1852, to H. W. Drake, eldest son of Rev. Dr. B. M. Drake. Three children of this union are still living. By training and inclination a Methodist, she early united with the church, in whose communion she lived and died. Retiring and undemonstrative, she was yet always ready to join in the work of the church, and in her home the preacher was a welcome guest. She was called to pass through much sorrow. Her parents, husband, sisters and several children were taken from her by death, her health failed, and the shadows hung heavily over her latest years. When the last weeks of painful illness came she seemed at first not able to exercise the full trust she longed for, but later she could say she had overcome all fear, kindered, and added, "Now I want to go home." Pain, weakness and stupor prevented her from speaking much after this, but we felt there was no need of more dying testimony, and when the labored breathing was stilled, and the face settled into lines of peace, we could give thanks in the midst of our grief that she had entered into rest. A. G. D.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst Bro. C. C. Doss, of Macedonia M. E. Church, South, who died at his home in Calcasieu county, Nov. 28, 1901; And, whereas, Bro. Doss, by his fidelity and untiring energy in the cause of Christ, and as a faithful steward for upwards of twenty years, greatly endeared himself to his pastors and church, we realize that his demise has indeed made a vacancy that can not be filled; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we have lost from the church a good and consistent member and a faithful steward, and his family a loving and devoted husband, a kind and affectionate father, therefore, we meekly bow in submission to the will of God, who is too wise to err and too good to do wrong.

2. That we, as a Quarterly Conference, tender our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to the grace of God.

3 That these resolutions be spread upon the Quarterly Conference Record, and the same sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Respectfully submitted.

DRURY E. COOK was born in Pike county, Miss., Oct. 3, 1860, and died at his residence near Magnolia, Sept. 15 1901. Bro. Cook was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for several years. He was in ill health for five or six years, and for more than six weeks during his last illness was confined to his bed. His life is known better, perhaps, by others than this writer. I visited him in his last illness as his pastor, and learned from his own lips this testimony, "I am not afraid to die." When at last the parting hour had come, he called his wife and mother to his bedside, and after kissing them farewell, gave them the same assuring words. He was always kind to the sick and devoted to his mother. May the abiding presence of the Lord comfort the hearts of those who weep! H. L. W.

Brother ALLAN CROCKER, son of Rev. Nick Crocker, L. D., died at the residence of his father, near Calcasieu, La., Friday, Jan. 24, 1902, aged twenty one years six months and twenty days. Bro. Allen was religiously inclined from his youth, and connected himself with the M. E. Church, South, very early in life, and remained faithful to his vows unto the end. His disease commenced with a severe case of catarrh, resulting ultimately in consumption, which carried him off very rapidly. He seemed to fully realize his condition, and made due preparation for the end. Had he lived, there were many years of usefulness before him as a citizen and efficient member of the church. He exerted a wholesome, religious influence over his associates, and there were many at his funeral services, thus testifying, by their devotions, to his moral worth. His last words were a source of comfort to his parents, brothers and sisters, and sorrowing friends. His loved ones are sorely afflicted, but they joyfully look forward to a happy reunion. PASTOR.

WILLIE M HOLYFIELD, son of N. K. and L. C Holyfield, was born Oct. 22 1884, and died Jan. 8, 1902 When the spirit of this noble young man separated from its earthly tenement to take its flight, the home lost one of its loveliest charms, and the community one of its most delightful observers. He was the pet of the household, and the favorite of all. I do not remember ever to have witnessed a deeper gloom pass over a home. He was a model of obedience to his parents, kind and affectionate to his brother and sisters, and polite to all. He never used a profane word, nor drank a drop of liquor. The large congregation that attended his burial was an evidence that he was loved and respected by all who knew him. Although the message came so early in life, and so unexpectedly, too, yet he was ready. Death was robbed of its terrors. "He knew whom he had believed, and was persuaded that he was able to keep that which he had committed to him against that day." He was conscious to the end, and passed out without a struggle. W. W. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Mr. Spurgeon, a few years before he died, went to visit a friend who had built a new barn, on which was a weather-vane, and on that weather-vane the text, "God is Love." Mr. Spurgeon said, "Do you mean that God's love is as changeable as the wind?" "No," said his friend; "I mean to say that God is love whichever way the wind blows."—D. L. Moody.

We don't really get inside ourselves, even, into the closet of us, where the Lord tells us to go in and shut the door and speak to him. We act in a hurry, as the outside, according to the way things touch us and people seem. We even say our prayers outside. It's the reason of all the wakefulness and the pain and the trouble.—Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The older I grow—and I now stand upon the brink of eternity—the more comes back to me that sentence in the catechism which I learned when a child, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes: "What is the chief end of man? To glorify God and enjoy him forever."—T. Carlyle.

Her Christ visited you and freely taken all your sin away? It shows, you think, that you had need of the Lord; yes, but it shows also another thing—that the Lord has need of you. —William Arrot.

If religion has done nothing for your temper, it has done nothing for your soul.—Clayton.

Seek Relief!

The great proportion of women who suffer never make a serious effort to benefit themselves. The most of them go on paying no attention to their little menstrual disorders, believing they will eventually wear off. They grow worse and worse every day. At the period of menstruation a woman is peculiarly susceptible to cold and other external influences and it is also the most favorable time for the development of hidden disease germs which may be lurking in the system. Any physician knows that disordered menstruation, falling of the womb and leucorrhœa are blighting lives in almost every home. No woman should neglect herself a moment after she sees indications of female diseases. Almost instant relief can be secured by the use of

WINE of CARDUI

It will relieve you right in your own home. Will you accept the testimony of Mrs. Beigler and thousands of other women and really seek relief today? All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

100 Chicago Street, Fort Wayne, Ind., March 27, 1900.

Your Wine of Cardui has done a world of good for me. I have used five bottles of the Wine and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught. And since I have started to use it I will not be without it in the house. It helped my sister in Toledo, who did not menstruate as she ought. She was sixteen years of age and nothing else helped her. I was in a very bad state myself before I used your medicines, but I found relief in three days. And now I feel like a new woman and do all my housework and washing, which I could not do before I took Wine of Cardui. I would be very glad to write any poor woman and tell her how I suffered before I used Wine of Cardui.

We Have It at Last

For many years we have been trying to get a Bible containing exactly the features which, to our mind, would constitute as nearly as possible especially for the use of preachers and teachers. We have contracted for a large number of a Bible which we believe to be the nearest to a perfect book we have ever seen. It contains the AUTHORIZED VERSION, DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES, SUBJECT INDEX, CONCORDANCE, AND MAPS. The type is long primer, self-pronouncing. It is 6x8½ inches, and only 1 inch thick. Bound in the best levant morocco, divinity circuit (overlapping edges), calf lined to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges. By reason of the large number contracted for we are selling this splendid Bible at only a little more than half its regular price.

Our Price, Only $5.00

Postage 20 cents additional, if mailed.
Patent Thumb Index, 35 cents extra.

White Wyandottes.

BRED TO LAY.

I want you to know that BOSWELL'S White Wyandotte hens lay in the winter, when eggs are most in demand. Why go on raising common fowls when you may have these standard-bred birds and increase the egg-production so as to startle you? Mine are the world-famed Duston stock, vigorous and prolific, correct in every way. Enough said. Send me an order for eggs now, and hatch your fall-laying pullets.

White Wyandottes Exclusively.

EGGS, $2 PER 15.

R-I-P-A-N-S

I had been troubled with the sick headache for years until I started taking Ripans Tabules. I have experienced such relief from their use that I would not be without them in my house. I find them good for sickness at the stomach and dizziness in the head.

At Druggists.

The Five-Cent packet is enough for an ordinary occasion. The family bottle, 60 cents, contains a supply for a year.

Catarrh and Consumption

I have spent nearly 50 years in the treatment of the above named troubles and believe I have effected more permanent cures than any specialist in the history of medicine. As I must soon retire from active life, I will, from this time on, send the means of treatment and cure as used in my practice, Free and post-paid to every reader of this paper who suffers from these loathsome, dangerous and disgusting diseases. My treatment will positively give prompt relief and cure in the worst cases. This is a sincere offer which anyone is free to accept. Address, PROFESSOR T. A. GENERAL NEWS.

Statistics prove that paupers are increasing in London.

Miss Ellen M Stone has at last been released, and has arrived at Strumitza, Macedonia, in good health.

Great Britain has purchased in the United States for service in South Africa 82,427 horses and 95,450 mules.

Prince Henry, of Prussia, after a stormy voyage, has reached New York City, and is now the guest of the United States.

The fourth International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement for foreign missions will meet in Toronto, Canada, this week.

The riots in Spain have not been quieted, yet the situation is improving. National poverty and hunger are said to be the real causes of the trouble.

On the twenty-second of this month a disgraceful scene occurred, when Senators Tillman and McLaurin, of South Carolina, engaged in a fist fight in the United States Senate chamber.

The Youth's Companion tells us that a leading manufacturer declares that prosperity and pianos go together, there being sold in the United States in 1901 one hundred and fifty thousand—twenty-five thousand more than in 1892, the year of the "next best second."

The Nashville Banner gives us in a recent issue an elegant picture of the proposed new Methodist Publishing House at Nashville. If the General Conference gives the Book Committee authority to build in accordance with the proposed plans, we will have one of the finest and most convenient publishing concerns in the South.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

AT THE FIRST SIGN of a cramp or other pain in the bowels take Perry Davis' Painkiller in hot water, sweetened, and you have mastered the difficulty. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis.' 25 and 50c.

ANOTHER NOTICE.

Requests for special copies of the ADVOCATE come to us so often that they are burdensome, and we again remind our friends that in making such requests they must send FOUR CENTS for each copy. We can not afford to "send bill," as we are sometimes asked to do. Please, friends, bear these things in mind.

At the Capitol,

I have just taken the last of two bottles of Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir for nervous headache, indigestion, with diseased liver and kidneys. The Elixir cured me. I found it the greatest medicine I ever used.

J. H. MENNICH, Attorney,
1225 F. Street, Washington, D. C.

President National Bank,

McMinnville, Tenn., writes: From experience in my family your Lemon Elixir has few if any equals, and no superiors in medicine for the regulation of the liver, stomach and bowels. Your Lemon Hot Drops are superior to any remedies we have ever been able to get for throat and lung diseases. W. H MAGNESS.

To Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta.

Something extra rich in the Epworth tone

Epworth pianos possess that rich, sweet, sympathetic tone of the old-time German pianos.

Epworth sounding boards are made by hand after the time-tested German method.

This not only gives the piano greater resonance when new,—it insures the tone lasting.

You can depend on the Epworth. It is thoroughly well made throughout.

Our catalogue explains how to save the middle profit; also how to order on trial so you are sure to be suited.

Giant Flowering Caladium

Grandest foliage and flowering plant yet introduced. Leaves 3 to 5 feet long by 2 or 2½ feet broad; perfectly luminous, and make a plant which for tropical luxuriance has no equal. Added to this wonderful foliage effect are the mammoth lily-like blossoms, 12 to 15 inches long, snow-white, with a rich and exquisite fragrance. Plants bloom perpetually all summer in the garden, or all the year round in pots. Not only is it the grandest garden or lawn plant, but as a pot plant for large windows, verandas, halls, or conservatories, it rivals the choicest palms in foliage, to say nothing of its magnificent flowers. Thrives in any soil or situation, and grows and blooms all the year, and will astonish every one with its magnificence—so novel, effective, free growing and fragrant.

Fine plants, which will soon bloom and reach full perfection, 25c. each; 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00 by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition.

OUR GREAT CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare New Fruits, profusely illustrated; Large Colored Plates; 128 pages; FREE to any who expect to order. Many great novelties.

Glances at the World.

A short time ago President Roosevelt was officially invited to attend the Charleston Exposition, which he accepted. But since the list-fight in the Senate between the two South Carolina senators, which occasioned the withdrawal of the President's invitation to Mr. Tillman to attend the Prince Henry reception dinner at the White House, and the letter of Lieut.-Gov. Tillman to the President, the propriety of attending the Exposition is under consideration. The foolish idea that Mr. Roosevelt would be in personal danger in Charleston has obtained to some extent, and is having a little bearing on the subject. But the general sentiment in South Carolina is that the President would be heartily welcomed in Charleston. The White House, it is said, is "being flooded with letters, telegrams, and editorial comments from Southern newspapers, assuring the President that the fair-minded persons of the South have no sympathy with the performances of the two South Carolina senators in the Senate, and also deprecating the rude action of Lieut.-Gov. Tillman in connection with the proposed presentation of a sword to Major Jenkins on the occasion of the President's proposed visit. . . . Official statements from the managers of the Charleston Exposition is to the effect that they disavow any responsibility for Lieut.-Gov. Tillman's officious telegram to the President." We hope the President will attend the Exposition, and that the good people of the Palmetto State will show him all due courtesy, as we believe they would.

The case of Admiral Schley will not down, nor is it likely to be shelved without great effort. The Admiral himself declines to be interviewed. He keeps his own counsels. But his friends talk. A strong effort will be made to get one of the resolutions offered, and now in the hands of the Committee on Naval Affairs, before Congress. It will likely be the resolution extending the thanks of Congress to the Admiral for the victory at Santiago. If the resolution gets before Congress, it is likely to be made a party measure, and a bitter fight will ensue. The friends of Admiral Schley say they "will get the case before the country effectively." If it is not already before the country in all its fullness and detail, we do not know what is. And the people are for the Admiral, notwithstanding the opposition of the Administration. It may be the people are not able to see distinctions where the Administration says there are differences, but they are firmly persuaded that a man who takes part in a fight, and gains a victory, deserves more credit than does one who was far away and out of sight. Common sense and common honesty are bound to triumph.

Prince Henry, brother of the German Emperor, arrived in New York on Sunday morning, Feb 23, a few hours later than he was expected. He had a stormy voyage across the ocean. He was cordially received by naval officers, and made his way as quickly as possible to Washington, where, in due time, he was received by President Roosevelt. Since then there has been reception after reception, and every possible mark of respect shown the Prince as the representative of a friendly power. And, as we understand, the respect shown him is not because he is of the blood royal—a prince, in fact—but because he is the representative of a government. No doubt a representative of the French Republic would have been as cordially greeted had he come to our shores on a like mission. We see no reason why there should be any adverse criticism of the President or the government. It is worth all it costs to entertain a foreign representative, if, by so doing, we can cement friendship and preserve the peace of the world.

Now that Miss Stone, the missionary who was kidnaped by brigands and closely confined for months past, has been released, and will soon be restored to her friends—if, indeed, she has not already reached them—it is in order for the government to make investigation, and determine who is responsible for the outrage, and seek redress. The object of the kidnaping was to obtain a large sum of money, the brigands believing her friends would raise any amount demanded for her release. They realized a good deal, but not as much as they expected. It is to be hoped that the payment of this ransom will be taken as a precedent, and other outlaws inspired to commit such outrages. Nor is the kidnaping to be used as an argument against sending women missionaries to the heathen. This was only an isolated case. Another may never occur.

AWAKENED MEMORIES.

BY REV. J. W. CUNNINGHAM.

The editorial in this ADVOCATE, of Feb. 6, on "The Passing of the Evangelist," moves me to write what may follow.

When on my first circuit in upper Kentucky, in 1844, a local preacher put in his appearance at a principal church without previous announcement. He was in middle life; had been an itinerant, but "located" to become a more widely circulating "revivalist." The term "evangelist" was not then in use in Methodism. He was an Englishman, with some peculiarities in person, speech and actions suggestive of his nationality. He was a good preacher, excellent singer, and taught the people to sing many of his revival hymns, printed in a ten-cent pamphlet, which people eagerly bought. He spent a week at each of three churches, to which people and the preacher-in-charge cordially welcomed him. I never knew him to call on a congregation for a monied compensation for his services. He seemed satisfied with the profit on the small song books sold by him. There was no special revival at either place. That was before the organization of the M. E. Church, South. After that event he operated in Ohio.

During the twenty-five years I was in the itinerant ministry in the Kentucky and Louisville Conferences, the man whom I have mentioned was the only itinerant local-preacher revivalist of whom I heard in any part of the State; but I often heard of a celebrated Irish "revivalist" who had in previous years been in several principal towns of the State. I think his last visit was to the Fourth Street Church, in Louisville, in 1838. Absalom Woolliscroft, the Englishman, and John N. Maffit, the Irishman, constituted the migratory revival force of Methodism during the quarter century I have indicated.

"Evangelist" was a term appropriated by a considerable number of proclaimers of the "ancient gospel" of Alexander Campbell, who were extensive travelers, and whom Methodists and others called "Campbellite proclaimers." "Evangelistic services" was a term I never heard till in recent years in Missouri.

I knew an eloquent Baptist preacher named Thomas J. Fisher, who traveled extensively over many States, but mostly in the South. He was friendly with Methodists and Presbyterians, and made them, as far as possible, co-workers with him in his revival meetings. He was of medium size, and dressed genteelly. His nose appeared to have been broken and somewhat flattened. He was small-pox marked to an extent that marred his visage, and was cross-eyed. In repose he was not handsome, but appeared such in his eloquent flights of fancy in the pulpit. In 1866 he was struck down at night by an unknown assassin on a street in Louisville, within a hundred yards of where I lived, and he never regained consciousness.

Another "revivalist" of the Fisher period, and later, was a rugged specimen of a man, with little education and small abilities as a preacher, but who had wonderful success in bringing people into his church, even in some of the best towns. When he was an old man I found myself seated by him on an Iron Mountain railway car. I knew him, but he did not recognize me. He asked me where we had met. I said: "The last time I saw you, you were in jail, and I would like to know how you got out." He replied: "Oh, they had to turn me out to keep me from breaking up the camp. I had the biggest kind of a revival in there." I said: 'I don't refer to your Camp Chase military imprisonment in Ohio. It was a later one in Kentucky. You told me that an angel put you in prison.' I then said: 'I had read of an angel getting a preacher out of jail, but I never heard of one of the 'heavenly host' putting a preacher in jail. You explained by saying that a 'United States marshal named Angel' had arrested you under the charge of making 'moonshine whisky,' and now I would like to know how you got out." The only defense he made was that he made "the stuff" for medical purposes, and that it cost him $5,000 to obtain his freedom again. He further confessed to other misdoings whereby he had gotten out of his church, and had been some years an "outsider," but he claimed that he was "all right again," and was going to "hold a protracted meeting down South." I asked, "Do your departures from the way of righteousness ever confront you when you are preaching in new places?" He said, "Yes, but I make short work of the complaints by saying, 'Let him that is without sin cast the first stone.'" He gave me names of men in the business and political world that I was familiar with, whom he claimed as converted under his revivalistic labors. One had been a governor, one a United States senator, another a wholesale merchant. The latter, he complained, did not visit him during the several weeks he had been in jail for illicit distilling of whisky. He said his conscience smote him once, when in the evening he called on a druggist to whom he had sold in the morning a barrel of whisky, and found him drunk on medical whisky he had made and sold. When we were approaching the place where we should separate, I said: 'You were accustomed to preach, 'Once in grace, always in grace.' I suppose you do not preach that way now." He replied, "Yes, I do." I asked, 'Do you think you were 'in grace' while, for years, you were leading the wicked life you have confessed to me?" His reply was: 'There is a sin unto death and a sin not unto death. Mine was not unto death.". I asked, "How do you make that out?" He replied: 'Because I did not die in my sins. If I had died in sin, it would have been proof that I was not in grace, and I would have been lost. But the fact that I did not die in sin is proof that I was still in grace.' When we separated, I said to him, "You may be a very good man, but you are a teacher of very bad doctrine." Since that parting I have never heard of him. If living, he is ninety-five years old. He was eighty when the foregoing interview occurred. I do not intend to intimate that he was a sample of "the passing evangelist" of this period.

St. Louis, Mo.

WASTED FORCES.

BY PHILOS ANDROS.

"Beware of little expenses," said Franklin; "a small leak will sink a great ship." Rev. A. H. Bizz, in a recent issue of the Christian Advocate, calls attention to a no inconsiderable leak in our great ship of Southern Methodism, which, though it has not yet really endangered the safety of the vessel, has greatly damaged its cargo.

I do not know Brother Bizz; I never heard of him before. He may not as yet have won a high degree of fame. His name may never become a household word in the nations of the world. But this much is sure of him: He is a practical Methodist preacher. He himself possesses the common sense to which he appeals in his article. He has discovered a great defect in our church polity, and on this point, at least, he deserves to be heard by the church in general, and by the law-makers soon to convene in Dallas in particular. I have added to, subtracted from, rearranged, and, in general, translated Brother Bizzle's article to suit myself; but the thought throughout, and the language in part, is peculiarly his own.

1. There are four ways of disposing of members in our church: by death, by expulsion, by withdrawal, and by order of Church Conference.

2. The present law of the church should be so amended as to reduce to a minimum the tremendous losses sustained under the head, "Dropped by order of Church Conference."

3 The ensuing General Conference can effectively accomplish this result by so amending the present law as (1) to require each pastor, unasked, to forward certificate of membership of each member in good standing removing from his pastoral charge, to the pastor into whose charge said member removes, as soon as his destination can be learned; and (2) to give each pastor authority to demand a church certificate at the hands of any other pastor out of whose charge a member may have removed, into his own, without asking the consent of the party so removing.

There are no good reasons, and only a single specious one, why this law should not be so amended, viz: "It would give offense." It is a sufficient answer to this objection to say:

1. The church is connectional. A member is not received into a particular house in a particular locality. He is received into an organization unbounded by geographical limits. A member of the church in one place is, in fact, a member of the church in every place. It is only for convenience that his name is inscribed on a certain register. When this convenience ceases the reason for holding said member's name in that given locality ceases. The convenience ceases when a member moves into another community. The church may, therefore, transfer his membership in form as he himself has already done in fact.

2. Persons join the church for life. This being married to the Lord Jesus is not the business of an hour. Though a member has a constitutional right to withdraw from the church for cause, I seriously doubt that he has any moral right whatever to take the step. Certainly he has neither constitutional nor moral right to withdraw by certificate. The practice, therefore, ought to be stopped. The church is entirely too free in issuing her spiritual divorces.

3 Such a change would offend but few at most. It would save thousands from making shipwreck of the faith. Moreover, the offense of those few would cease as soon as they become familiar with the law and its advantages. There is, therefore, no reason why the amendment should not pass.

The reasons in favor of this amendment are many and weighty.

1. It would cut off at once recruits to that already large body of Methodists who hold their membership in their trunks.

2. It would almost wholly stop that constant and heavy loss in our membership indicated on the registers by "gone," "lost sight of," "dropped."

3. It would greatly strengthen the financial resources of the church by keeping the pastor and the stewards constantly in touch with these drifting elements.

4 It would build up the church in numbers and in spiritual power by placing new arrivals under immediate pastoral care, and by bringing them at once into union, sympathy, and co-operation with the new congregation.

5. It would put an end to oft-recurring blunders—not to say glaring sins—in official administration. For 'Dropped by order of Church Conference' means one of two things: First, that far-reaching as the church is, said member has been allowed to drift beyond her pale, and always points to neglect of duty by somebody; or, second, that he has been received into the church somewhere else in an illegal manner.

6. It would throw the restraint, the influence, and the support of the church around those who need it most, and just at the time they would otherwise be most unlikely to receive it.

Let the brethren give this matter publicity; let the law-makers give it their attention. It will have a weightier influence on the destiny of thousands of Methodists than the electing of Bishops or the rectifying of Publishing House mistakes, et al., can ever have.

AFFAIRS AT CENTENARY.

BY PROF. E. P. LINFIELD.

We note the fact that no Conference Visiting Committee was appointed for Centenary at the last session of Conference, and the lack of such a committee is felt, inasmuch as we seldom have the pleasure of entertaining our preachers on this historic campus.

The Catalogue Committee—Profs. Sullivan and Carre and the writer—are well under way with the work of getting out a neat and attractive edition for this session. Some new features will adorn its pages, notable among them being a complete list of all former students of the college and a number of fine views of the campus. Cuts may be made of several groups and inserted, but the faculty, from sheer modesty, will exclude their own distinguished features from so public an appearance.

Three of the oldest living graduates of Centenary have visited the college within less than a year, Judge J. T. Barnard, of Tallahassee, Fla., who was a member of the class of 1848, and subsequently had the honor of being the tutor of C. G. Andrews when the latter was in the preparatory department here, came up from the Missionary Conference last Spring, and spent a few days here. The judge is a splendid representative of the fine type of men who managed affairs at Centenary in those good old days.

Within the last two weeks came D. J. E. Gibson, of Bissell, Mo., and Judge J. E. Elam, of Vidalia, La.—the former of whom graduated in 1856, and the latter in 1850. Instead of coming as spirits from the dead past, these venerable gentlemen brought to us a breath of vigorous life, for each seemed to grow young again as he visited the familiar scenes of youth's associations, and recounted boyish escapades. These visitors left with us the most delightful of impressions, and made us wish their coming were a permanent habit.

A fine meeting is in progress in the college Y. M. C. A. under the personal management of Prof. Carre, whom the boys requested to conduct it. Assisted in his work especially by Dr. Cooper and Prof. Northcutt, and by other professors and a score of Y. M. C. A boys, some fine results are being accomplished. There are some strong Christian characters among the students, and their personal work among their fellows is bearing rich fruit.

Mr. F. Herr, who is proprietor of The Feliciana, a paper devoted to the upbuilding of these two parishes, has generously made offer of a liberal portion of his space for the use of the college, and this space will be utilized in the publication of a series of articles by members of the faculty. The first of these appeared last week from the pen of Prof. J. M. Rosser, of the commercial department. The professor made a very sensible and practical discussion of the value of a business education to young ladies. The article is very favorably commented upon, and would grace the columns of any paper. Would that every Methodist in Louisiana could secure a copy of it for reference.

Prof. J. M. Sullivan, Ph.D., has recently been honored by a request to become a member of the faculty of the Vanderbilt Summer School. The Doctor's eminent scholarship is recognized at headquarters, and the fact that this important work is offered to him the second time, is evidence of his ability to teach.

Feb. 22 was duly observed on the campus as a patriotic holiday. As a fitting close to the day, the Franklins met the Unions in debate on the question of reciprocity treaties with other nations. The Franklins vanquished their opponents in a well-won field. They were represented by W. L. Doss and W. H. Nelson, while E. B. Cooper and E. A. Hoffpauir spoke in behalf of the Union side of the question. These fellows all knew their subject well, and treated it with consummate skill. Viewed individually, each speech was a success, but it remained for Nelson to carry off the honors, which he did as gracefully as if he were accustomed to such triumphs. His speech is spoken of as being one of the finest ever delivered here by a student, and he is very proud of his victory, especially in view of the worth of his opponents.

Be good, and then do good. You can not really do more than you are. —Spurgeon.

Christian Advocate.

REV. R. J. JONES.

At a memorial service held on Jan. 26, by the Epworth League of Crystal Springs, Miss., in honor of Rev. R. J. Jones, the following resolutions were read and adopted:

Recognizing the fact that our League owes its existence to the faithful efforts of our ascended friend in whose memory this service is held, remembering the deep interest always shown by him in our meetings, whether business, social, literary, or devotional, a feeling of loyalty impels us to give this expression to our appreciation of his worth.

We realize that our League has lost its best earthly friend; one who never thought any sacrifice of time or rest too great, if he could thus promote the cause of Christianity among the young. The members of the Council always found in him a sympathetic helper, a safe counselor; and every member of this organization looked upon him as a sincere friend. Conscientious in the discharge of what he considered his duty to the League, faithful in his attendance, always ready with an encouraging word to those who took part in the exercises, we feel that he was a power for good. As sorrowing children, mourning on account of the loss of a father, tenderly beloved, so we, the members of this body, mourn because of the loss of this dear friend and leader. We remember, with affection, his example of faithfulness in all things, and will strive to follow his wise counsels. To his sorrowing family this League tenders sincere sympathy, assuring them that we share in their grief, and that we will ever tenderly revere his many Christian virtues.

But mingled with our sorrow is a feeling of thankfulness that he was lent to us for a time; that for a period of two years we had the blessed privilege of listening to his loving counsels, and we rejoice in the belief that with him now "all is bright," and that he is "forever with the Lord."

"O happy, happy soul!
In ecstasies of praise,
Long as eternal ages roll,
Thou seest thy Savior's face.
Redeemed from earth and pain,
Oh! when shall we ascend,
And all in Jesus' presence reign
With our translated friend!"

TO THE MEMORY OF REV. J. P. DRAKE.

On Sabbath morning, Feb. 9, as we gathered at our lovely little church in Summit, to hear the first sermon of our new pastor, Rev. M. L. Burton, of Brookhaven, who has so kindly offered to fill the pulpit of our much beloved former pastor, Rev. J. P. Drake, who, only a few weeks since, was torn from us by the rude hand of death, a silent sadness seemed to pervade the church, and a sweet and holy influence was there, as the perfume of some sweet flower fills the air long after it has withered and gone, and although his grand spirit has "journeyed out" into the great ocean of eternity, and his lifeless form lies so quietly and silent in the "cemetery on the hill," where the "pale rose" shades his grave, and the bird sings his mournful notes in the branches of the weeping willow, which throws its arms so affectionately around this sacred spot, his spirit is basking in the sunlight of the Savior. His influence is still here, for, although dead, he still speaketh by the sweet memory of his noble deeds of love and mercy and his beautiful Christian life.

ONE OF HIS FLOCK.

FROM MERIDIAN, MISS.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Central Church, Meridian, passed the following resolution of sympathy on account of the death of Rev. J. P. Drake:

Resolved: That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family in their sore affliction, and commend them to our Heavenly Father for guidance and protection, remembering he has promised to be a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow.

DREAMS AGAIN.

I watched with great interest for the Joseph to interpret the good sister's dreams. I feel sure that Mrs. Hillebrandt's interpretation is correct. I, too, have lived twenty years among the French Catholics of Southwest Louisiana, and know somewhat of their dire need of the gospel. Like the good sister, this burden has been on my soul, and only God knows how I have longed to help them to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. My husband being a physician, I have frequently gone into their homes with him, and have watched for every opportunity where I might speak a word for Jesus. But I can not speak their language, and, oh, how it has grieved me that I could not do them any good, as I sometimes saw them go out into darkness, that meant eternal banishment from the presence of God, when they had been taught they must go into purgatory, where their friends would pray them out in the future. They are taught to respect holidays, and nothing can induce them to do any work on those days. But the Sabbath, the holy Sabbath day, is used by them for balls, horse races, card-playing, and anything else they desire to indulge in, after they have attended mass in the early morning. God has done much for this land. It is "beautiful for situation."

"Where every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile."

When we located here, much of this prairie country stretched out around us in unbroken plains of green grass. Herds of cattle and horses grazed unmolested, but to-day there is scarcely an acre of land that is not under fence, and narrow lanes separate one small farm from another, so that is like blocks in the city. Public schools dot the country all around, where the children are being taught English, so that very soon they will speak the English language altogether. They love our songs, so full of gospel melody, and never tire hearing us sing to them, and I have prayed that God would cause some seed to take root and bear fruit unto eternal life. But the power of the priest over his people is very great.

As long as our beloved Bro. Manly was physically able, he had a monthly appointment to preach in our home. Of course, we invited all to attend, which they did, and seem much interested in the services. But the priest found it out, and forbid his people attending the Protestant services, coming out in the country himself, and holding services at the same house in opposition to ours.

Now, if anything can be done to reach and save these poor deluded souls, and give them the pure gospel, let us know how and what to do, and, it may be, even we mothers, with little ones to raise, may have some small part in helping to teach them the way to Christ.

"NOT ALL A DREAM."

An article published in a back number of this journal has given us some thought and apprehension as well.

That God did in olden times utilize dreams to foreshadow his coming Providence, is universally acknowledged. That he may do so now is unquestionable. That he has done so in these dreams is very probable. We presume that he first designated the area of the country so much in need of help from the church. The two personages seen across the river arrayed in bright costume, carrying in hand a large white volume, are representative of the interest and effort made for the salvation of that area by the Son and Holy Spirit. Their call to the lady across the stream is an eloquent appeal to the church to come up "To the help of the Lord against the mighty."

The second dream points out the immense wickedness of the people and the apostacy of the church in the area covered by this dream. This dream, we think, embraces the entire Mississippi Valley. This valley is the home of the cotton plant of the South, and the chief means of support to the thousands of ignorant and superstitious negroes who produce it. Within this valley are crowded together more negroes than are to be found in any similar area in America; hundreds of these creatures are packed together on one plantation under the supervision of an agent, while the landlord is spending his Summer at Saratoga. The only moral instructor accessible to the plantation negro is the negro preacher, and those who are as familiar with him as we are, can come only to the conclusion that it is "the blind leading the blind."

That the Southern Church made a mistake when she withdrew her fostering arms from around the emancipated slave, and set him up "to work out his own salvation," we think she would not deny to-day. The negro is practically a heathen, and, as such, has claims upon the M. E. Church, South, which she can not ignore with safety. We are an old slave-holder, having known the negro for many years, both as a slave and a freedman. We can safely say that his moral status at present is far worse than when in bondage. This increased depravity has had its reflex action and influence upon the Anglo-Saxon race, and a corresponding degree of depravity has been the result. To such an extent has this gone that matrimony is fast becoming a thing of the past, and if anyone wishes to know the result of this state of affairs, we refer him to the history of the French Revolution, to say nothing of the fiery flood that swept the cities of the plains.

That the M. E. Church, South, has lost much of that unction and Holy-Ghost power that characterized her labors in former days, can not be denied. Dr. Richardson, in his autobiography, recognized this fact, and called for an explanation; but if any has ever been given, it has escaped our notice. In the ratio of this loss the demoralization of the country has increased, and to-day God is calling upon his people "to return to the old paths." The working machinery of our church to-day is essentially and fearfully different from what it was when I united with it in 1855. Then we had weekly prayer meetings, class meetings, and love-feasts invariably at quarterly meeting. Then we had conversions, happy conversions, glorious and shouting conversions, inside God's altar. Then we had a singing congregation that would warm the heart and invigorate the spirit and illume the mind of the pastor as he approached the church to fill his appointment. Then the way of salvation was set forth by the pastor with magnificent unction from on high. What we have to-day you can see without being told, and this dream is a call to the church of God "to return to the old paths." "God is no respecter of persons," nor of races, and he holds our church to a biblical responsibility for the salvation of all races within her borders.

Let Bishops, pastors, and all members of the church, read this second dream, weigh its threatenings, and fall upon their knees and cry mightily to Israel's God for help.

OCTOGENARIAN.

THE OLD SONGS.

"An Hour with the Hymn Book," by Fannie Minor Montgomery, set a tender chord of memory vibrating in my heart. I am now one of the "shut ins," but not shut out from God's presence, and next to my Bible, I find most comfort in the songs of Zion, and most especially those sung long ago around the family altar, and in the dear old church at Sharon, one of the centers of Methodism, when Methodism was young in Mississippi, where my aged mother still worships, and where, in that sacred city of the dead, the body of my father lies (Rev. D. M. Wiggins) awaiting the resurrection. The consecrated laymen then led the vocal music, the congregation all joining. The Methodist hymns were familiar to everyone then. Well do I remember Bro. Tom Hart, as faithful a steward as ever served in any church, who was the leader. Whenever he came in he was in a worshiping spirit, and so often he sang,

"Amazing grace! (how sweet the sound!)
That saved a wretch like me!"

and he would often be filled with the Holy Spirit as he sang. One of his daughters, who, I think, was the first organist in that church, still worships there, though not in the same house, as it has been replaced by a new one.

"Children of the Heavenly King," "A charge to keep I have," "When I can read my title clear," "Am I a soldier of the cross?" These, and dozens of others, were perfectly familiar. We, as children of Methodist parents, were required to commit them to memory. The songs in Capers' Catechism were as familiar to me as my alphabet; most of them I remember now.

I recall attending prayer meeting one afternoon. Rev. T. B. Holloman, one of our sweet spirited men, was pastor. His selection of hymns for his service were all old ones; songs I had heard my father often sing, and a sweet halo of glory seemed to overshadow me, and I never remember enjoying a prayer service more. The new songs are beautiful; many soul-stirring. I expect we, who are on the down-grade of life, enjoy them less because we can not manage our voices like we once did. They are becoming husky and harsh. I love to think that—

"The soul that on Jesus still leans for repose,
I will not, I will not desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake
I will never, no never, no never forsake."

A NOBLE MAN.

BY MRS. N. D. LIPSCOMB.

In a beautiful little town in Mississippi there lives a man whose example is worthy of emulation. Although his name is not written in blazing letters on the scroll of fame, and, perhaps, is scarcely known outside of the county in which he lives, yet, doubtless, God's recording angel has enrolled it on high in letters that will never fade.

Possessing wealth, and able to dwell in ease and luxury, he chooses rather to use his money in the best way to glorify God, and this he does by clothing and educating poor boys, thus giving them a chance to make noble, useful men. Numbers of young men in Mississippi, some of whom are promising ministers of the gospel, owe all to this noble, unselfish man. He, and his wife, a splendid Christian woman, have no children of their own; so they are always on the lookout for some poor, friendless boy whom they can clothe, educate, and equip for life's battles.

How gladly we honor and publish abroad those who, out of their millions, endow some college, or give a fabulous sum to found a great charitable institution; but when this great Christian character is gone, he will leave behind him a monument that will endure long after those of marble and stone have crumbled into dust.

SOME SEARCHING QUESTIONS.

Will some lover of God and his Word please answer the following questions:

1. Is it right to assess the churches extra to pay the preacher's tobacco bill?

2. Is it right for a preacher, or anyone else, to set the example of tobacco using before the young people?

3. Is it right for us to do anything that we would be ashamed to do if God were present in person with us?

I hardly think we would dare smoke or chew in his holy presence, much less ask him to join us in the useless, filthy habit. Does he not say, 'Abstain from all appearance of evil"? Does there not appear to be evil in the use of tobacco? Are we not apprised of the fact by our best scientific men that thousands of our boys are daily killing themselves smoking cigarettes? If this be true, is it not wrong for anyone, much less a minister of the gospel, to set the example? Then should we not practice what we preach, and be very careful not to preach anything that should not be practiced by the old and the young? Please tell me, Is it right for me, or anyone, to spend from ten to fifteen dollars a year for the filthy stuff, just to satisfy our fleshly lust? As Christians, should we not deny ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live wholly in the fear of God? How many poor, castaway boys and girls could we help into the way of respectability, and into the way of eternal life, with the money that is wasted, or worse than wasted, for tobacco? Please tell me how much farther we will have to go before we are satisfied with having wrought the will of the Gentiles, if it is a fact, as I have seen it stated, that for every five dollars expended for the missionary cause in the United States is equivalent to the saving of one soul, what will our answer be who are spending from ten to fifteen dollars a year for tobacco, to say nothing of many other things that the poor are compelled to deny themselves of, and of the example we are setting for the young? When will the church awake out of her sleeping lethargy and cease to run to the same excess of the world in the way of evil? May we, as members of the good old Methodist Church, try to live more after the example of the blessed Christ!

ONWARD AND UPWARD.

BY REV. J. H. BROWN.

Whether the "sun do move" or not, the world is advancing, and developments are being made. Towards the close of last year this scribe and many others (for it happened at a camp meeting) heard a certain presiding elder state in a sermon that he believed that the ministry had the power of absolution. That was certainly a long leap, but whither? Then the question of deaconesses! (Surely we are moving, yes, rapidly.) Oh, if we had that acquisition, we would surely be full-fledged. But how about the supreme power? It would not do to turn the whole herd loose on so rich a pasture. It would be too rich for some of our blood, for it has often been demonstrated that some of us, even men, can not stand much promotion. It affects the head. We should have to discriminate. I suppose some would be high-priests, and some not so high, low-priests. That would not be much of an advance in the estimation of some.

I recently heard one of them (a deaconess—not in our church, of course; I am glad we have none), in what some were pleased to call a sermon, attempt to prove woman's superiority to man, and she succeeded to the entire satisfaction of many of her hearers. She said: "God made man out of dirt, and some of them are mighty dirty. (He, he, he.) Then he took a nice clean rib out of the man and made a nice clean woman, and if you will give me half a chance, I will prove that a whole lot of women are superior to men."

Who says that women are inferior to men? No one should make such a statement, but admit, for it is true that many of them are far superior when morals and religion are concerned. I claim also that the fairer sex will average far above my own sex, but the pertinent question still confronts us, Do we need deaconesses?

Truly the field is white and teeming, ready for the harvest, and no godly, consecrated woman's hands are tied in our liberal and broad "M. E. Church, South." And until the work that may be done without this order is done, let us not go forward along this line.

Gilbert, La.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LIBRARY.

As the question of "how to best run our library" has perplexed the mind of almost every Sunday-school superintendent, and believing that we now have in use in our school a plan which will best meet the requirement, I take this method of giving it to any who may need help. The plan was originated by our former superintendent, Mr. H. J. Gregg, and has been found to not only facilitate the work, but give our library a more thorough circulation in the school. After hearing a report from our librarian, and an explanation of our plan at our last fourth Quarterly Conference, Rev. G. A. Guice, P. E., pronounced it the best he had ever seen, and requested that we "write it up" for the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

THE PLAN.

We furnish every member of the Sunday-school with a catalogue (a printed list of all our books and their numbers), from which they may select their choice by number. They are also provided with a card bearing the name of our school, with blank lines for name and class number. This card is ruled with a capacity for twenty books. The applicant enters in first column the numbers of as many books as he or she may desire, and the card is turned over to the librarian. The first number on the card is taken from the library, or if the first is out, the second, etc., entering the date in column opposite the number. Thus, during the services the librarian and assistant selects a book for each applicant, and at the five-minute warning-bell distributes them among the classes. In returning a book, the pupil turns it over to the librarian on entering the school, thus preventing any disturbance of the classes by the pupil during the recitation of the lesson. The date of return to the library is inserted on the card in the second column, opposite the number of the book. The librarian has her book ruled up so that she charges out and credits in every book in like manner as is done on the card. We have a few simple rules which we will not give here for want of space. We will be glad to correspond with anyone upon the subject, furnishing an exemplification of our plan in detail.

DANCING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The North Mississippi Conference, at its last session, amended the report of the Committee on Education by adding the following preamble and resolution:

We are sorry to note that in our State Industrial Institute and College for our young ladies, located at Columbus, where 200 of our Methodist girls are in attendance, that the practice of dancing is allowed among the students. And since many of our young ladies return to their homes poisoned by this dissipation, thus becoming centers of worldliness in our churches; therefore,

Resolved, That we express our disapproval of this amusement, and request the authorities of that institution to abolish this custom that is so hurtful to the Christian character of our young ladies.

(Signed) W. M. Young, J. D. Cameron, T. Cameron, W. S. Lagrone, P. E. Duncan.

The Mississippi Baptist quotes this action with its endorsement, and adds the following comment:

"It is nothing short of a palpable imposition and a gross injustice that a large percentage of the most pious, consecrated and loyal Christian men and women of the State should be taxed to sustain and promote the art and practice of dancing in our State college for girls. It is a travesty on true education and dignity, to say nothing of morality and religion, that men and women entrusted with the care and training of four or five hundred girls would prostitute time and money in unfitting our daughters for the moral and religious responsibilities of life.

"This course hurts and discourages more than 2,000 Christian ministers in the State, as well as many thousands more of men and women as good as the preachers. We appeal to the management of the I. I. and C. to consider the rights of some of the best Christians in the land."

Catarrh

The cause exists in the blood. It is what causes inflammation of the mucous membrane.

It is therefore impossible to cure the disease by local applications.

It is positively dangerous to neglect it, because it always affects the stomach and deranges the general health, and is likely to develop into consumption

Many have been radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses the blood and has a peculiar alterative and tonic effect. R. Long, California Junction, Iowa, writes: "I had catarrh three years, lost my appetite and could not sleep. My head pained me and I felt bad all over. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and now have a good appetite, sleep well, and have no symptoms of catarrh."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

GRENADA, MISS

MR. EDITOR: Throughout my entire ministry 'the lines have fallen to me in pleasant places." We arrived at Grenada, Dec. 17, and, despite the fact that the temperature was lingering lovingly about the zero point, our reception by these good people was truly warm-hearted and generous. As a consequence, we began at once to take on and take in that delightful foretaste of heaven—the home feeling.

Having left so pleasant a charge as West Point had proved in every way a less cordial welcome would but ill have prepared us to 'fit into" the new charge. Hence the open arms of Christian affection and kind words in regard to our coming to this field, while they in no wise dimmed our happy recollections of the friends we had left behind, yet they made us more highly appreciate the expressions of love and good-will from the new friends who welcomed us here.

Again are we made to realize the possibility of extending and, at the same time, intensifying love—"the greatest thing in the world."

Bro. T. Y. Ramsey did an excellent work here, and is strongly intrenched in the affections of these good people. The several departments of the church are moving off with promise of success. Our excellent women are vigilant and active in their Aid Society, manifesting real interest in the convenience of the parsonage and the comfort of its inmates.

The Foreign Missionary Society is also an active force for good. The training of the children in the missionary spirit is carefully attended to by a wide-awake Juvenile Society.

Since coming here we have organized an Epworth League of twenty-five members, and we are at present pursuing with both profit and pleasure a series of studies on the life of Christ. We have had thirty-four accessions to the church since Conference.

The presence of the intelligent, cultivated faculty and ninety bright students of our Conference college is a very great inspiration and help to our Sunday-school and church work generally. The harmony, good spirit and efficient work of the college are truly gratifying. Bro. McIntosh has accomplished much for Christian education. He and his noble Christian wife are greatly beloved in Grenada.

Let me here urge that the preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference send as much money as they can, and as early as possible, to J. C. Park, of Winona, that the long-needed and much-talked-of college annex may be built by the opening of next session. With liberality and concert of action we can put two hundred girls in this school next year. It has wrought well in the past, and hundreds of cultivated women have gone forth from its halls of training to adorn both the homes and schools of our State. We bespeak in behalf of this institution a speedy and liberal response to its call for funds for larger and more perfect equipment. Money put into Christian education is the best possible investment, and yields the largest dividends. May the Lord direct and speed this good work!

We highly appreciate you, Dr. Boswell, and your excellent paper, our ADVOCATE, in this part of the vineyard." The blessings of Heaven upon you and your efforts.

Truly yours, J. M. WYATT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

GREENSBURG, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Annual Conference at its late session held in New Iberia. There were nine others admitted at the same time, and I have longed to see a letter from each of them in the dear ADVOCATE; have only seen a letter from one, and a note of another.

Brethren, please write. I want to hear from you, for I love you as a brother in Christ and fellow-laborer in the gospel.

According to the appointment made by Bishop Fitzgerald, I am attending the Greensburg Preaching-school, and am very thankful to say I am progressing very nicely with my studies.

Greensburg is a beautiful little town, and I rejoice when I think of the privileges we have here. We have four splendid sermons a month; Sabbath-school, prayer meeting, and Epworth League weekly.

I Can do all My Own Work

"I feel it my duty to tell you what your medicines did for me," writes Mrs. Blanche Marshall, of Whiting, Jackson Co., Kansas, Box 139. "I was severely afflicted with kidney trouble and female weakness. In less than three months the trouble became so bad I could hardly walk around the house. I suffered almost everything. Seeing your advertisement in our paper concluded to write Dr. Pierce. After receiving your kind advice I immediately began taking your medicine. After taking two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' alternately with two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and using one box of 'Lotion Tablets' I am entirely cured. I can do all my own work without any trouble. I take great pleasure in recommending Doctor Pierce's medicines to all suffering women."

THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1902

When the critics of the Bible get through their work and give us a thoroughly expurgated edition, there will be nothing to hinder the most advanced literary infidel putting it in his library on perfect equality with Shakespeare and other inspired authors. And possibly they may be constrained to accept Christ as did Voltaire: "A virtuous revolutionist who lost his life between the jarring interests of contending factions." He is nothing more than that now to those who talk flippantly about the myths of the Bible.

One of the advanced ideas of the day is, that if a man discovers a new truth in opposition to the fundamental beliefs of his church, it is not his duty to leave the church, "but to bring all others to see the light and to change the church declarations on the subject." That is exactly what Professor Pearson, of Northwestern University, thought he would do, but he soon saw his mistake, and frankly confessed that his purpose did not meet with approbation, and he retired. Prof. Pearson surely had no conception of the hold the gospel has on the minds and hearts of the people.

"Help those women who labored with me in the gospel," was St. Paul's exhortation to a "true yoke-follow." The two women, Euodias and Syntyche, though good women, were at outs. The differences between them were sufficiently serious to attract the apostle's attention, and he much desired that they would get together and "be of the same mind." They needed encouragement and assistance, and the good offices of the apostle's yoke fellow were invoked to help bring about a reconciliation. Yet there be those who use Paul's exhortation to inspire the brethren to help the sisters in gospel work.

It has been asserted that "Methodism exists for the maintenance of certain dogmas." True; and in maintaining the dogmas, we maintain and propagate the truth. This is not saying that all truth is embraced in the dogmas of the church, nor that nothing new is true. There is nothing in Methodism, either in its dogmas or Discipline, to forbid a man accepting truth whenever and wherever he finds it. But if in his researches he finds and proclaims anything in opposition to the fundamental doctrines of Methodism, even though he may think it is true, the church is bound to withhold its endorsement. Methodism stands for something, but not for the vagaries of men miscalled advanced thinkers.

OUR CHILDREN.

All parents, except those who are absolutely destitute of moral sense, are more or less concerned about the welfare of their children, for this life, and the life to come. Many fathers and mothers, indifferent and even reckless as to their own interests, do not care to put in jeopardy the interests of their little ones. They are not only anxious to give them the best social advantages, but to have thrown around them proper religious influences. This is natural. The mistake they make is, transferring their religious training from the home to an outside institution.

And is this not the mistake that too many Christian parents make? Do they not depend too much on the Sunday-school? Is it not a fact, that well-nigh all the religious instruction many children receive is given by the Sunday-school teachers? How many parents take time and trouble to help their children learn the lessons? We do not assert that parents shirk duty to that extent. We have heard that such is the case. But we are fully persuaded that sin lieth at the door of many professedly Christian households. Otherwise some evils would not be so manifest.

Let a man stand at the door of any of our churches when the children are dismissed from the Sunday-school, and he will see troops of them leaving for home, not to return after a short intermission, but to be turned loose for play the remainder of the day. If those children had the proper religious instruction at home, and that instruction was enforced by proper example, coupled with parental authority, they would be found, save in exceptional cases, in the public congregation. They would there be impressed with the importance and solemnity of divine worship, as they never can be in the Sunday-school. We utter our solemn conviction when we say that the main supporters of the church of the future will be found, not among those who are trained in the Sunday-school, but among those Sunday-school scholars whose training included home instruction and attendance on public worship.

Some wrong notions prevail among our people. One is, that it is requiring too much of children to send them to Sunday-school, and then hold them for public preaching. This is only a notion. Many children are required to do both, and they learn to love both. We have never known one tired to death, or even made sick. What many can do, all can do. Another notion is, that it is wrong to enforce obedience in such matters. Then it must be wrong to enforce obedience in anything. Certainly those who thus speak have forgotten, or never knew that obedience to parents is a primary duty—one of the strong pillars of society and government—and that parents are bound by their duty to God and the State to enforce obedience. The Lord has set his seal upon children who obey, and upon parents who understand and perform their duty. "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." "Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him. For I know him that he will command his children, and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment."

Our children sustain a very near and tender relation to our Lord. They are his by virtue of the purchase of his blood. They are the lambs of his fold, and he will hold us responsible for the manner in which we train them, and hold them in the good and right way. There is no reason why they should be turned loose as soon as they are large enough to think and act and understand moral responsibility. They are not only to be taught, but guarded, and have continually before them the godly example of those in whom they repose the greatest confidence. If we, as parents, were as quick to see and provide for the spiritual care and nourishment of our children as for their temporal good, instead of a family here and there, and parts of families in the church, and living lives of obedience to God, the ungodly or divided family would be the exception, not the rule. The Lord will hold us to a strict account for our negligence. May we take warning in time!

COST OF ADMINISTRATION.

Now and then the question of cost in administering the affairs of the church is up for discussion. It is always interesting because it is practical. Everybody can figure on it and reach definite conclusions. We have recently read somewhere that the preachers and people in a certain Conference are almost, to a man, in favor of reducing the number of districts and presiding elders, thereby greatly reducing the cost of administration. The presiding eldership, together with the Bishops, it is said, costs the church too much. Let us look into this matter a little.

The Conference named has nine districts. Each district has a presiding elder. Together the nine districts are assessed for presiding elders $11,655—an average of $1295 for each man in the office. If the districts should be reduced from nine to six, the size of each would be enlarged one-third. The presiding elder's responsibility and work and expenses would be increased considerably, though, perhaps, not proportionately, save in anxiety and care. In justice to him, the salary should be increased. And the increase would be allowed. If each man's salary is increased from $1295 to $1500, which is scarcely a fair allowance, considering the increase of his responsibility, the aggregate for the six is $9000. That is a saving in the cost of administration of $2655, so far as the presiding eldership is concerned. We leave out of the calculation the cost of Episcopal supervision, for, unless the number of Bishops is greatly enlarged, the additional cost to each Annual Conference would be so small as not to be appreciable.

But our brethren who figure out a great saving to the church by reducing the number of presiding elders, leave out of their calculation one large and costly factor. Not one, as far as we have ever seen, has made any provision for the ex-presiding elder. He is eliminated—no longer to be considered. This is not true. Unless he is old and worn out, he is still on the effective list, and almost as costly as he ever was. He simply goes out of the presiding eldership into what is called the regular pastorate. Everybody knows that these presiding elders in going out, unless circumstances are peculiar, receive appointments of the best class in the matter of pay, the average of which in the Conference is $1022. At these figures the three ex-presiding elders will cost $3066. Then the cost of administration will stand thus: Six presiding elders, $9000; three ex-presiding elders, $3066; total, $12,066, as against $11,655 for nine presiding elders, making the cost of administration under the proposed change $411 more than under the present system.

It is clear from the above that the enlargement of the districts means no saving to the church in money, and certainly the value of the presiding elder's service is not enhanced. There is but one way to save money, and at the same time retain the presiding eldership; that is to double or thribble his work and reduce his salary. This would practically kill the office. Nothing could be saved even if the presiding eldership were abolished, unless at the same time there should follow a general readjustment of salaries in the larger and stronger appointments. None of us, laymen included, would favor that. If, in our administration, dollars and cents are to be considered, we had better let well enough alone.

THE STUDY CIRCLE.

There has been wonderful development in the work of the Sunday-school during the last few years. The effort used to be to get the children interested, and to stimulate them to make the most of their opportunities. Work in that direction has been fairly well accomplished. And all along the need of thoroughly competent and equipped teachers was felt. This need has been greatly emphasized during recent months, and especially in our own church. Our Dr. Atkins, full of energy, and a man whose education has not driven common sense out of his head, has determined that so far as his department is concerned, nothing shall be left undone that will tend to equip our teachers for the best service. In this, he is seconded by his assistant, Dr. Hamill. They have been before many of the Conferences, and set forth in detail the purpose and plans of the department. The result is, "Bible Teachers' Study Circles" are being formed throughout the church, and arrangements are being made in many parts for Sunday-school Institutes (not mass meetings or conventions) designed to drill and develop teachers, and to point out to all the best methods of studying the Word of God.

Our most intelligent and faithful Sunday school workers are giving this Training-Course their hearty endorsement. Brother N. A. Mott, of Mississippi; Brother A. D. Mayo, of Louisiana, and Brother G. J. Leftwich, of North Mississippi, are enthusiastic. Every superintendent and teacher in the three Conferences ought heartily to join with them in encouraging the work. Dr. Hamill, the superintendent of the Training-Course, will do all he can, visit as many Institutes as possible, but he can not go everywhere. Our own men must come forward. All necessary information on the subject may be obtained by writing to Dr. James Atkins, Nashville, Tenn.

DOOR OF HOPE.

We call special attention to the letter of Miss Mary Werlein in this issue in regard to the Door of Hope, recently opened in this city by Christian women. The object of this undertaking is to provide for the immediate wants of women who may be induced to quit their evil ways, and turn to a better life. Such homes are successfully conducted in other cities. The experiments prove that, while all fallen women may not be reached and reclaimed, many of them are. Many more might be saved were they assured of a place of safety, where, screened from the world, they could find human sympathy and help. Naturally these women are deterred from reformation because they are forsaken of friends, and feel too keenly their shame to return to their homes, even though they might be allowed to enter. This matter ought to enlist the sympathy, and command the support of every good man and woman in the city. Dear sisters of New Orleans, let this Door of Hope have your prayers and your help.

AN UNACCOUNTABLE THING.

The Book Editor, whose business it is to tabulate the statistics of the church, has published that figures in hand show the net increase in our membership for 1901, is over 31,000, with five Conferences to hear from. How is this great increase to be accounted for? As yet no one, as far as we know, has undertaken to say. We think it would puzzle some men, in view of their utterances, to give an answer to the question. The annual increase for three years past was so far below the normal as not only to arouse interest, but to excite alarm. Hundreds of men were ready with an explanation. They were not at all surprised at the smallness of the increase. They wondered that there was any increase at all. They prophesied utter abandonment, and a total wreck of the church, unless averted by repentance in sackcloth and ashes, and full reparation for wrong doing. Until this was done they declared the Lord could not bless us. But the Lord has blest us, and we have realized the greatest ingathering for ten years or more. There are alarmists still in the church—good men, but prophets of evil.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS.

Two weeks ago we published in our department, "Glances at the World," a statement to the effect that Emperor William, of Germany, had issued an order forbidding faith-curists, Christian Scientists, etc., to come about his court. The item was based on press reports, and was thought to be correct. The Christian Scientists, feeling that injustice was done their sect, it is said, cabled to Germany to know the truth. The answer received assured the Christian Scientists that they were not included in the Emperor's edict. We are requested to make this correction, which we do on the authority of a telegram printed in a daily paper. But we add: We have no more assurance that the telegram contradicting the report is true, than the one which first gave it currency. Whether the report was true or false, we feel sure that the German Emperor, with his strong faith and confidence in material things, has no more use for Christian Science than he has for spiritism and other delusions.

A CALL TO SPECIAL PRAYER.

The following bulletin issued from our Mission Rooms will arrest the attention of our brethren throughout the church. Let us, who are at home, join with our brethren abroad in earnest prayer to the Lord of the harvest, who still hears the prayers of his people.

At a recent meeting of the Japan Mission, M. E. Church, South, held in Kobe, Japan, the following resolution was passed by a unanimous rising vote:

"In view of the greatness of the harvest and the scarcity of the laborers, and in view of the Master's own rule for supplying this deficiency;

'Resolved, That we appoint the second Monday in March (March 10), 1902, as a day of special prayer, that the Lord of the harvest send forth laborers into his Japanese harvest."

We would most earnestly request you to join with us in this prayer for more laborers, not only on the day mentioned, but throughout the year.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. W. Drake has returned from Mansfield, where he was engaged in a great revival. He speaks modestly of the success that attended his labors. He will give an account in the next issue of the ADVOCATE.

A friend writes us concerning a good soldier of his country, and his Lord, as well as a good Methodist. The note is as follows: "Lieut J. K. Cowan, after an absence of four years, in which he saw service in the Spanish-American and the Philippine Wars, is visiting parents and friends in Oxford, Mississippi. Lieutenant Cowan will return to his regiment, which is now stationed at Fort Bliss, about the first of April."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb is making a fine start at Senatobia. He is preaching to large and interested congregations. He is happy, and hopeful of great success. Bro. Lipscomb is one of our most intelligent and active young men.

Rev. B. F. Lewis sends good tidings from Magnolia. He says: "On yesterday (March 2) the Magnolia Church covered all the claims against it for the various collections ordered by the Annual Conference. We have cleared the decks."

Rev. J. W. Raper, writing from Charleston, Miss., says "we have a fine charge, a good people, and have been kindly received. We are planning largely, working some, reading much, and hope to measure up to any year of our life in the work."

Rev. M. Dickie, of our Brazil Mission, preached Sunday last and administered the communion at Carrollton Avenue Church. This was his second attempt to preach during his stay in New Orleans. The people were well pleased with his discourse.

Rev. J. R. D. King is highly pleased with his work in Tunica, Miss. He has "a nice work, nice people to preach to, appreciative and kind, and have promised nice things" for him. He is preparing for a fight against whisky in his county, and feels sure of success.

We regret to hear of the sickness of Rev. H. C. Edmondson, of Chester, Miss. We trust it is only temporary. He has been busily engaged in efforts to rebuild the church at Chester which was recently destroyed by a storm. He has also been doing some good work for the ADVOCATE.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Jr., is succeeding wonderfully at Rastor, La. Fifty new members were added to his church during January, and there are other applicants. His salary has been increased, and paid in full to date; the presiding elder's also, and all the collections provided for. The church has decided to build a new house of worship at a cost of ten thousand dollars. Happy pastor! Happy people! The ADVOCATE should go into the homes of all these new converts.

Dr. S. A. Steel, according to arrangement, is now in Mississippi. He was booked for Laurel, Saturday night and Sunday, March 1 and 2. Other dates and places are as follows: Ellisville, Monday night, the third; Hattiesburg, Court Street, Tuesday, the fourth; Hattiesburg, Main Street, Wednesday, the fifth; Lumberton, Thursday, the sixth; East End, Meridian, Friday, the seventh. We dare say the people, who anticipated a rare treat, have not been disappointed.

A private letter from Rev. J. A. Leech, Okolona, Miss., contains this interesting passage: "We, of the Aberdeen district, are doing reasonably well. We have just purchased a good district parsonage. Our presiding elder, Bro. Woollard, is wide-awake to every interest of the church. All of the pastors, so far as I can learn, are well and hard at work. I consider our church here, in Okolona, in better condition than at any time since I have been serving it. This, as you know, is my third year here. We have been pounded, and are ready to be pounded again."

An appreciative brother has clipped and forwarded the following notice, with his hearty approval, from the Democrat-Star, of Scranton, Miss. The editor of the Advocate joins in saying, "All of which is well deserved." The Star says:

Rev J. M. Morse preached at the Methodist Church Sunday evening. Mr. Morse is possibly the youngest man ever made presiding elder of the Seashore district. But no man will despise his youth, for he is a magnificent specimen of physical manhood, of fine sense as well as physique. His sermon was fine, full of sound sense, well expressed and well delivered. As an administrator we are assured that he will show himself without a superior. His common sense, his courage and natural suavity of manner give good promise of all this. The Methodist Church on the sea coast is very fortunate in having Mr. Morse as presiding elder.

Louisiana Conference Minutes.

When I left home for the Conference at New Iberia, I had every reason to hope that in three weeks from the close of the session I would be able to place the Minutes in the hands of the pastors of our Conference. With this end in view, a resolution was passed by the Conference requiring the filing of reports in duplicate, and the number of statistical secretaries was increased.

My appointment on the Auditing Board, and later my sickness at Conference, conspired to see my hopes vanish. It was necessary to wait for the secretaries' records, and do the work at home, and at the great disadvantage of working in the family room, and not a very comfortable one at that. When the records came to hand, about eight or ten days after Conference, I found that I must needs copy several reports, as the originals were not furnished. I also found that some of the brethren, in writing their reports, had written on both sides of the paper, and others had abbreviated almost everything. One report made several references to a printed document filed with it, and another was simply a disjointed set of comments, and totally unsuited for publication. These all had to be "edited" (?), and in several instances rewritten. By hard work, mostly at night (several nights until daylight, for necessity required that I push the completion of our parsonage during daylight), I was able to send the copy to the printer on Saturday, Jan. 18. This was about three weeks after my return from Conference, and two and a half weeks after the copy came to me. I spent one week after Conference, at my own expense, getting the advertisements necessary to make the booklet a success.

In New Orleans a printer was secured, who proposed to finish the job in two weeks from the time the copy was put into his hands. I thought he was a man of his word. I have to-day read and remailed the proof for about two-thirds of the book—just five weeks since I sent him the copy. I am doing all in my power to push the work, and will leave no stone unturned to get the booklet out at the earliest possible day.

The hand-book feature of the book has had no part in the delay, as every part of the copy for it was prepared before going to Conference. The engravings have also been furnished promptly.

In this connection I would say that we hope to meet the engraver's bill by the sale of the pictures of the forty deceased preachers we print in this year's Annual. Those desiring pictures of either the card (75) (of individuals), or the two groups of twenty pictures each, should address me at Grand Cane, La.

I will also reserve 200 copies (extra edition), to help meet expenses, that can be had at the regular price of publication, of twenty cents each.

Respectfully, WM. G. EVANS.

Grand Cane, La., Feb. 21, 1902.

Domestic Missions.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Board of Missions at Winona promised to pay the assessments for domestic missions quarterly. Blanks have been sent to the presiding elders, to be given to those serving charges to which appropriations have been made, upon which to make their reports. These reports must be in the hands of the president of the Board by the fifteenth of March, and not later than the twentieth, if payments are made.

But a more important matter than that of making reports is the burden of this paper. The Board is anxious to comply with its promise to pay these assessments quarterly. It is justly due our brethren that have been sent to these hard and difficult fields that we pay them somewhat as they need. But it can not be done out of an empty treasury.

The report of the treasurer has just been received, in which he states our inability to do anything until we get some money. But one single charge in the Conference has made any report for this year. We must have $600 by the fifteenth of March, if we are to help these brethren. It can be raised if the preachers will take hold of it, and present it to the people.

Let me urge every pastor to take up this matter immediately, and report to Bro. F. P. Jenkins, at Aberdeen, by the fifteenth of March. Some of the pastors on these missions are in great need, and if they do not get help, they and their families will suffer. They are pleading with us for help, and we are personally acquainted with the condition of some of them, and we are sure it will not come too soon.

Let the district secretaries start a postal-card correspondence with every pastor in his district, and urge the taking of this collection at once, and report to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE what is being done in his district.

Brethren, please help us, and help us now. W. S. LAGRONE, Pres. of Board.

Durant, Miss., Feb. 26, 1902.

Door of Hope.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: May we, through the columns of our ADVOCATE, draw the attention of our people to the fact that we have undertaken the Door of Hope Work in this city? Above all do we want the earnest prayer of faith daily of God's believing children for the convicting power of the Holy Ghost upon this work. Every night God's message is given in earnest exhortation from and in front of our home at 325 Marais street, where the car of the idle street wanderer in the paths of sin is caught and constrained to stop and listen. We have access more to the men and youths in this way than to the women, but one soul saved, is as valuable to God as another, and several of these have professed conversion. Frequently and regularly do a few consecrated women visit the homes of sin and shame, and plead earnestly with the women to quit their wicked ways. There is a consecrated couple in charge of the home, who live there. We need more help to make our home attractive and inviting, for these women have comforts about them, and until they become deeply convicted of their sin will not quit their evil ways unless we attract them in some way. Those of you whose daughters are protected, will you not, out of loving gratitude, lend a helping hand to save these unfortunate women who, in God's sight, are our sisters? We are trying to do this work, and ask you to aid us financially, if you can not by personal co-operation, and don't forget that as much as temporal things are needed, it is the earnest, unfailing prayer of faith to God that must accomplish results.

Address Miss Mary Werlein, treasurer, 5806 St. Charles avenue, New Orleans. Yours in Him.

Strongly Endorsed by Business Men.

The most practical, thorough, up-to-date and flourishing institutions of the kind in the country, and ones that are strongly endorsed by business men from Maine to California, are Draughon's Practical Business Colleges. J. F. Draughon, who is author of four text-books on book-keeping, has eight colleges, located as follows: Nashville, St. Louis, Atlanta, Galveston, Little Rock, Shreveport, Montgomery, and Fort Worth.

It is generally conceded by practical book keepers and business men, who are in a position to know of the merits of the course of book keeping given at the different colleges, that three months' course of book keeping at one of Prof. Draughon's Colleges is equal to about six months elsewhere. About three thousand students have patronized his colleges for personal instructions during the past year, representing almost every State in the Union and several foreign countries. Several hundred students, who reside in all parts of this and foreign countries, are taking lessons by correspondence in addition to those taking personal instructions. His colleges employ the highest-salaried teachers, which usually means the most successful teachers.

Draughon's Colleges doubtless expend more money securing positions for their graduates than almost any other business college in the South takes in as tuition. They guarantee positions under certain conditions. Before entering elsewhere, send for a catalogue.

Address Draughon's College at either of the above places.

New Orleans Preachers' Meeting.

The meeting convened at its usual time and place. Dr. W. H. L. Prade, chairman, being out of the city, Rev. R. H. Wynn was invited to preside. After devotional service, reports were given by the pastors.

Additions reported: Burgundy, two; Dryades, two; Mary Werlein Mission, one; Louisiana Avenue, one.

Rev. Fontaine made eighty-three pastoral visits during February.

Bro. Drake's report intended an account of the gracious revival held at Mansfield Female College.

Mr. F. A. Daniels, of Algiers, celebrated his seventy-first birthday by attending the Preachers' Meeting.

Rev. W. W. Drake's new address is 2028 Camp, and K. W. Dodson's, 316 Seguin.

The subjects and leaders for March are:

"What Truths Are Most Effective in Producing Conviction of Sin?" R. H. Wynn, March 10.

"What Are the Best Methods for Dealing Personally with Skeptics?" W. H. L. Prade, March 17.

"How Can We Best Promote Our Personal Purity as Ministers?" K. W. Dodson, March 24.

"How Can We Most Effectively Illustrate Spiritual Truths?" P. H. Fontaine, March 31.

Attention, Delegates.

Reduced rates over the various railroads in Mississippi (except G. and S. I. R. R.) to the Sunday-school Convention, Utica, Miss., March 24-26, have been granted on the certificate plan under the usual terms and conditions.

Let each delegate purchase a first-class ticket, and at the same time procure from the agent a certificate that full fare has been paid going. At Utica the name of the secretary of the Sunday-school Board will be signed to the certificates, and on their presentation to ticket agent a ticket can be purchased at one third rate for return trip.

The reduced rates will not be granted unless as many as fifty delegates and visitors travel by rail.

The Commoner
(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

ADVOCATE OFFER.

Magic White Soap, advertised in our columns, is manufactured in New Orleans by a responsible company, who can be relied on to do what is promised. The soap is what is claimed for it. There is none better on the market. A fair trial has been given it at the home of the editor, and the good wife, who knows what soap is, says "it is about the best she ever used." Our lady readers would do well to give this soap a trial. Send for a box of twenty bars—one dollar; charges paid by the manufacturer.

We make the following offer: We will furnish one box of this soap, and the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for one year, for $2.50, to new subscribers. We make the same offer to all who will pay up back dues, and send $2.50 additional. Cash must accompany the order. Address

Test For Yourself the Wonderful Curative Properties of Swamp-Root.

To Prove What SWAMP-ROOT, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, Will do for YOU, Every Reader of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" May Have a Sample Bottle FREE.

DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN:—In justice to you, I feel it is my duty to send you an acknowledgement of the receipt of the sample bottle of Swamp-Root, you so kindly sent me. I had been out of health for the past five years with kidney and bladder trouble. Had our best physicians prescribe for me. They would relieve me for the time being, but the old complaint would in a short time return again. I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and I found it did me a world of good. Since then I have taken eight small bottles, bought at my drug store, and I consider myself perfectly cured. It seemed as though my back would break in two after stooping. I do not have the smarting and irritation, nor do I have to get up during the night to urinate as I formerly did, three and four times a night, but now sleep the sleep of peace. My back is all right again, and in every way I am a new man. Two of my brother officers are still using Swamp-Root. They, like myself, can not say too much in praise of it. It is a boon to mankind. We recommend it to all who are suffering from kidney and bladder diseases.

My brother officers (whose signatures accompany this letter) as well as myself, thank you for the blessing you have brought to the human race in the compounding of Swamp-Root.

We remain, Yours very truly,
Officers of the 58th Police Precinct, Greater New York.
JAMES COOK,
HUGH E. BOYLE,
JOHN J. BODKIN.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day, and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble; you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTICE—Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all of our readers who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Also a book telling all about kidney and bladder troubles and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured by Swamp-Root. In writing be sure and mention reading this generous offer in NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Home Circle.

Enlarging One's Circle.

"I wish I had made my life wider when I was young," said one woman to another lady, with a sigh, "for I find one has to allow for shrinkage, and I didn't."

"Why not widen now?" suggested the friend. "While there's life there's hope."

"But that's just it—there isn't hope. When I was eighteen, life was illimitable. If I couldn't do one thing, I could dream of another. The horizon was so far off that it practically didn't exist, I could make my own limits, and make them as wide as all outdoors. Instead of that, I chose my lot, and fenced it in, and here I sit inside of it, and realize my limits. Life isn't going to grow any larger for me, and more than that, it is bound to narrow—it has narrowed, though I've been unconscious of it. I feel something like the man who was imprisoned in an iron cell, by an ingeniously cruel device, grew smaller every day till it finally was such a tight fit that it killed him. I'm not in danger to that extent, but I can realize his feelings as he saw the walls contract, just the same."

"Everybody has had that feeling, Lucy, sooner or later," said the other, "and it certainly isn't a pleasant one. I remember my first attack of it very well. It was after my husband died, and my son married, and I suddenly realized that I had limited all my horizons to my home, and home was empty, and I was shut in on myself as if a Chinese wall cut me off from the rest of life."

"But you have so many interests—I can't imagine your ever feeling so!" said the first woman.

"I hadn't any outside interests then," said the other, "but I soon saw I had to have them. With their help, I broke down my walls, and widened out. It wasn't easy, but I felt it was my only hope. Then after some years my brother died, and I had his boys and girls to look after, and then my grandchildren came into my life, and that helped, too. But even yet I try every year to enlarge my boundaries, for life will narrow if you don't provide against it. It's just the opposite of the circles in the water when you throw a stone—they spread and spread, and that's what our lives ought to do; but, unfortunately, human existence seems to begin with the outside circle, and contract all the while to the very centre, unless we prevent it."

"But how is one going to prevent it?" responded the first. "I don't care for charities, I'm not fond of women's clubs. I haven't any talent for music—I haven't any talent for anything, in fact. I am a hopeless case, Maria."

"Oh, no, you're not," said her friend, cheerfully. "You're fond of travel, and you make friends easily. Next time your husband goes off on a business trip, go with him. There was that delightful journey he took to the Pacific coast last year, and you wouldn't go, because it was house-cleaning time. A cell with clean lace curtains, my dear, is none the less a cell. You won't have such a chance of broadening travel again for a while, I'm afraid. But wherever Henry goes next, go with him. And you might start a hobby—any hobby will do. I know a woman who collects pewter things—candlesticks and porringers and plates, and all that—and really she has become a great deal more interesting since she took it up, for she reads up on colonial times, and visits collections in other cities, and corresponds with people. Photography is a tremendous help to some people—and I had one friend who really was sinking into a green and yellow melancholy when she happened to become interested in her own genealogy, and thence went to genealogy in general, and now she is writing a book, and is quite an authority. As for gardening"—

"I hate old candlesticks, I can't bear amateur photographs, and if there is one thing I abominate, it is family trees," replied the first woman, smiling. "But gardening, I confess, appeals to me. Perhaps I can enlarge my circle by digging—who knows?"

"I prefer people to flowers, myself," said her friend. "But the value of hobbies is that they inevitably bring you to know the other people who ride them, too. And gardeners are a most interesting set, from Adam down to Elizabeth. Your circle ought to be a very charming one, Lucy, and as wide as the world and as history. Courage! I see the walls crumbling already, and a broader horizon coming into view. I'll send you over 'My Summer in a Garden,' and you'll see how everything in philosophy and fancy and wit and human fellowship can develop out of horticultural analogies. If you can get a hundredth part of what Charles Dudley Warner did out of gardening, your life will be wide enough for all the rest of us to envy."

"Ah! but I can't put in what he did—there's the trouble! My hobby would be a very lame and halting one at the best."

"Never mind! the lamest hobby can carry you out of yourself and beyond the prison walls. Lonely people get narrow; but the loneliest persons, the busiest persons, can enlarge their circles if they are only in earnest about it. I suppose not many of us can get to the wide outlook of the old poet who said, 'Nothing human is foreign to me,' but not one of us need sit still inside of fancied limitations and grow narrower year by year. Each of us can be 'a self-evolving circle,' as Emerson says."

"Oh, if you are going to bring in Emerson, I submit unconditionally," cried her friend, and the discussion ended in a laugh.

But the flower garden has been begun since, and a trip to Boston comes off next week, so the circle is enlarging already.—Priscilla Leonard, in Interior.

Ask the Animals.

Law-suits over the ownership of animals may sometimes be settled by the animals themselves if they are given the opportunity.

A writer in the Christian Endeavor World relates two instances of which this method of dispensing justice was used. There was once a farmer who found a valuable horse nibbling the grass in his orchard. He promptly locked it up and sent a notice to the paper in the nearest town, saying the owner could have it by describing the animal and paying expenses.

Within twenty-four hours a man came, claiming it and describing it perfectly, even to the scar on its left shoulder. But just as he was handing over the money to pay for its feed and care, the farmer's little daughter ran in to say that another man had come for the horse.

"Bring him in, Susie," said he, adding to his visitor, "We'll trap this thief with questions."

Strangely enough he answered every one, describing the animal as accurately as the first man had done. The possessor was in a quandary, at first declaring that neither should have the horse until a court of law settled it; then he thought of giving the horse a chance to testify.

"Come to the barn-yard gate, both of you, and I'll go inside, leaving the stable door open and the horse unfastened. The man that came first may have the first call. Wait till I say, 'Ready.'"

When the first voice called, "Here, Charlie; here, Charlie," the horse pricked up its ears, listened a moment, and then went on eating oats; but the minute the second called he left his dinner, ran out of the door, and straight up to the latter comer, whinnying with pleasure. This so delighted the owner and possessor that the would-be thief disappeared among the weeds before they thought of taking him prisoner as they should have done. It was soon learned, however, that one of the neighbors was minus his new hired man.

A similar incident has recently occurred in an Indiana county. A farmer was continually losing his turkeys, and, as his flock decreased, the flock of a widow nearby seemed to increase. It was also noticed that she kept a great number of her turkeys shut up. At last the man could stand it no longer. He took a friend as a witness, and they boldly accused the woman of taking his birds, at which, of course, she flew into a rage.

To prove her assertion, she had finally to consent to a test and turn the fowls into an open lot, while the farmer went home and from there whistled for them. The moment he began, more than a dozen turkeys started off on a waddling trot across the fields, while the rest paid no attention whatever to the call. It settled the ownership question, but it started a neighborhood quarrel which will probably never be settled.

The habit of talking to dumb creatures and giving them peculiar calls is always worth while, whatever happens or does not happen. They like it and invariably respond.—Selected.

They are poor that have lost nothing; they are poorer far who, losing, have forgotten; they most poor of all who lose and wish they might forget.—Jean Ingelow.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

The earthly life of RICHARD WELCH was from Nov. 3, 1824, to Feb 2, 1902—a little over seventy-seven years. On Jan. 15, 1850, he was married to Miss Mary Worthy, daughter of William Worthy, one of the most godly men. Their home was the preacher's home, as every itinerant who entered that community could testify. Bro. Welch was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity for fifty-six years, being a member of the Chapter for forty-six years. He was born, lived, and died in the same neighborhood, in the eastern part of Covington county, Miss. Sister Welch says that he had been a Christian for nearly fifty years, although he did not join the church until rather late in life (1883). Bro. Richard Welch's life as husband, father, neighbor, citizen, church member, Christian, was as near faultless as any we have known—quiet, humble, patient, kind-hearted. His worth was attested by the large concourse, many of them from distant communities, who, on the very cold day of his obsequies, paid the "last sad tribute to his memory." He seemed to have premonition that he was going soon, and so expressed himself, but he was resigned and ready. Sister Welch, with the children and grandchildren, and a host of friends, his friends are on the way, and will meet him again.

B. S. RAYNER.

Mrs. HELEN CECILIA WILLIAMS, daughter of Mr. H. H. Bankston, was born at Amite City, La., Feb. 9 1860. In 1879 she was married to Mr. Howard R. Williams, of Greenburg, La. Four bright, industrious boys blessed their union, and mourn with their father her loss. In 1873 Sister Williams joined the M. E. Church, South, and remained a loyal, active member until her health failed. The family moved to this place last September, and since that time she has been confined to her bed until she passed away at 6 o'clock p. m., Feb. 18, 1902. She was forty-two years and nine days old. To the loved ones and friends of this sainted woman: Be comforted. She sweetly sleeps in the bosom of the risen Lord. How patient, how long-suffering was she! She trusted in the Lord, and acknowledged him as her Savior. "Man is like a shadow that passeth away," but Christ saith, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Let us meet her "where the mansions be."

CHAS. T. STEPP.

Mrs. LUELLA CECILIA CALLIHAN was born in New Orleans, Jan. 26, 1873. She married Mr. J. J. Callihan, Nov. 18, 1896; was converted and joined Dryades Street M. E. Church, South, Dec. 3, 1899, under the pastorate of Rev. J. E. Denson, and fell asleep in Jesus, Feb. 2, 1902. Her mother is a Roman Catholic, and reared her accordingly, but without persuasion she decided for herself, and chose the simple faith of the Methodists. It was the writer's privilege, as her pastor, to be with her during her last days, and though suffering from the severe ordeal of consumption, yet her faith and confidence in God strengthened and sustained her, and caused her face to shine with glory as she approached the hour of dissolution. A true wife, daughter and Christian is gone from earth to heaven. May God sustain those she has left behind, and especially her sorrowing husband, whom she was instrumental in leading to Christ, and who united with the church with her!

HER PASTOR.

On the tenth day of February, Sister RACHEL F. CARGILL (nee Laverette) ceased her suffering, having been an invalid for thirty-five years, aged fifty-six years one month and fifteen days. Sister Cargill, the mother of Rev. E. L. Cargill, of Pelican; wife of Rev. D. B. Cargill, of Alpha, La., joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and lived a sweet Christian life to her death, which was very sudden, but peaceful. The Lord comfort the host of loved ones and friends she leaves behind.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst on Feb. 15, 1902, our beloved comrade, JAS. BLANCHE PHILLIPS, who was a faithful and devoted member of Class No. 7; therefore, be it Resolved, 1. That our Sunday-school has sustained the loss of an exemplary member, true friend, and faithful Christian co-worker.

2. That while we deeply realize our loss, we bow in loving submission to God's will, knowing he is too wise to err.

3 That we offer our sincere sympathy to the relatives of the deceased, and assure them that we share their grief in the loss of one whose character was spotless and whose aspirations Christ-like.

Respectfully submitted.

MR. O. W. BRADLEY,
MR. H. A. WOOD,

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of the M. E. Church, South, Leesville, La.:

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to take from us our beloved sister and president, Mrs. S. A. ALLIS, who departed this life Sunday, Nov. 17, 1901; and, Whereas, We realize that our society and church have lost one of their most faithful members, and the community one of its best citizens; therefore, be it Resolved, 1. That while our hearts are sad we bow in humble submission to the will of an All-wise Providence, who doeth all things well.

2. That we feel deeply sensible of the loss we have sustained, and will tenderly cherish her memory and strive to emulate her virtues.

3. That we tender our sincere sympathy to her bereaved husband and daughter in this hour of their great sorrow, and pray that they may recognize that the "hand divine" afflicts in love, and that they may look to Him who is too wise to err.

4 That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of our society, a copy to be sent to the family of the deceased, a copy to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and also a copy to be sent to the State secretary of the Woman's Home Mission Society.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Men and women used to learn that the grand cure for all uncertainty, disquietude, and anxiety as to the meaning of the entire teachings of the Bible, is to be found in the Bible itself. We do not need to accept truths in a blind, dumb way, as if it were wrong to study out that which puzzles us. But when Jesus Christ said, "Search the Scriptures: they are they which testify of me," he gave a command so simple that even a child could readily understand its import. Some there are who plunge into hot discussions, and are merely stimulated by them. But it is certain that the questions being raised to-day by the critics of the Bible and perturbed queries and meditations into many devoted hearts. There is nothing to feel troubled about in this. Go search the Scriptures. All the testimony that is needed concerning the Christ and the straight road to the throne of the Father is plain, and beyond the reach of all criticism to alter one vital point of the Bible from cover to cover. Go to the fountain-head. Study, explore, search! Find out for yourself what Christ tells of himself, of his kingdom, of the simple conditions which insure an entrance there. What more is needed? Christian at Work.

Conscience will never reconcile man to God. It simply shows Him what he is. The Seattle Churchman.

You reap what you sow—not something else, but that. An act of love makes the soul more loving. A deed of humbleness deepens humbleness. The thing reaped is the very thing sown, multiplied a hundredfold. You have sown the seed of life, you reap life everlasting.—F. W. Robertson.

There is a good old prayer in the Bible, "To be kept from presumptuous sins." It is well for men in business to repeat it when temptations to run hazardous risks are so abundant. Venturing on God may be a noble act of faith; venturing on self is often an act of fatal folly. A good rule is never to do what we can not conscientiously ask God to prosper, and never to go where we can not ask our Master to go with us.—The Evangelist.

The will of God respecting us is that we shall live by each other's happiness and life; not by each other's misery or death. A child may have to die for its parents, but the purpose of heaven is that it should rather live for them—that, not by its sacrifice, but by its strength, its joy, its force of being, it shall be to them renewal of strength and as the arrow in the hand of a giant. So it is in all other right relations. Men help each other by their joy, not by their sorrow. They are not intended to slay themselves for each other, but to strengthen themselves for each other.—Ruskin.

GENERAL NEWS.

Prince Henry is proving himself a pleasing guest.

The United States may demand that Turkey reimburse this country for the Miss Stone ransom.

Memorial services in honor of the late President McKinley were held in the House of Representatives at Washington, Feb. 27.

Britishers are amazed by what they regard as "democratic homage to rank," as illustrated in our reception of Prince Henry.

The Mississippi House of Representatives adopted a State ode. It was written by a Mississippi lady who resides in Columbus.

Meridian and Greenville, two of the most prominent cities of Mississippi, have suffered severe losses by fire during the past few days.

Many towns of our eastern coast are suffering on account of the floods. A number of lives have been lost, and the damage to property has been very great.

The Boers are gaining victories over the British in South Africa. In two battles recently fought the British lost in killed, wounded and captured more than 1,000 officers and men.

TEARING DOWN SIGNALS does not delay storms. Opium laden "medicines" may check coughing, but the cold stays. Do not trifle; when you begin to cough take Allen's Lung Balsam, free from opium, full of healing power.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

For Loss of Appetite

Take HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Dr. W. H. HOLCOMBE, New Orleans, La., says: "It is particularly serviceable in treatment of women and children, for debility and loss of appetite." Supplies the needed nerve food and strengthening tonic.

ANOTHER NOTICE.

Requests for special copies of the ADVOCATE come to us so often that they are burdensome, and we again remind our friends that in making such requests they must send FOUR CENTS for each copy. We can not afford to "send bill," as we are sometimes asked to do. Please, friends, bear these things in mind.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation, and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion, were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life. L. J ALLDRED,
Door-keeper Ga State Senate.
State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

is the very best medicine I ever used for the diseases you recommend it for, and I have used many kinds for woman's troubles.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has an enormous sale. It is the best remedy for colds and coughs, and is pleasant to take. 25 cts.

An Appeal to Our Friends.

We make a special appeal to our friends who owe us on subscription to send us the amount due. We need the money. The amount each one owes is small, but the aggregate amounts to hundreds of dollars. Our friends must see that it is embarrassing to us to withhold the money. Please look at the label on your paper, and if you are behind, send us the amount due. We will greatly appreciate it.

Penny wise and pound foolish,—the women who "economize" by using cheap washing powders. Few cents saved in price; fifty times as much lost in damage to clothes. The chances are that cheap powders are useless or dangerous. Many proved so. None works like PEARLINE, which is more economical,—does more,—saves more,—risks nothing. 658

The Grand Army of the Republic is again after Pension Commissioner Evans. He is not charged with violation of law, nor even of delinquency. He is simply guilty of construing the law strictly, and following it literally. In other words, he is not liberal enough. Officers of the Grand Army have talked with the President. "It is not known how President Roosevelt will view the attacks of the Grand Army of the Republic on Commissioner Evans, but as one of the worst charges against the latter is that he insists on enforcing the laws, it is not believed that the President will take hasty action on the charges. It was understood that the commissioner won his case before President McKinley, but it is now apparent that his enemies propose to try conclusions before President Roosevelt."

The Legislature of New York is planning to deal vigorously and effectively with the promoters of anarchy in that State. Efforts have not begun too early. "Legislation is proposed which will prohibit even the peaceful assemblage of persons advocating anarchist doctrines. It is recommended that the advocacy of such principles be made a criminal offense. It is also recommended that no owner, occupant or agent of any building, house or room, shall be allowed, knowingly, to permit his premises to be used for a meeting-place of anarchists. The penalty to be imposed for advocating anarchistic doctrines, or assembling to promulgate its principles, is not more than ten years, or a fine of $5,000. For permitting anarchists to assemble, property owners may be subjected to a penalty of $2,000, or two years' imprisonment."

Whisky dealers are not making much progress in establishing their claims to general recognition. Only in one department are they fully recognized—that is in the commercial. Socially, they are not so high as they were forty years ago. Save in the case of wholesale dealers, they are not received in the best society. Public sentiment is evidently turning against them. The great railroads of the country are assisting in manufacturing sentiment against them; not directly, but by forbidding its employees to indulge in liquor. A blow at whisky drinking is equally a blow at whisky selling. Of course, it is not altogether a pious view that the railroad authorities take of the matter. It is partly selfish and partly in the interest of human life, but none the less effective. Insurance companies also discriminate to some extent against them. So do some of the benevolent orders. The Masonic Grand Lodge of Tennessee, at its last gathering, passed an order which, when put into effect, will rid the fraternity of all saloon keepers. The Grand Lodge of Mississippi has gone a step further. It not only proposes to exclude dealers, but persons who rent property for saloon purposes. Verily, moral sentiment against the traffic is strengthening.

At the recent McKinley memorial exercises in Washington foreign representatives were greatly offended, and made complaint because they were given seats in the rear of the Supreme judges. Their protest has made the question of precedence at official receptions, etc., a matter of consideration. The arrangements at the memorial were under the direction of Senators Foraker and Grosvenor, of Ohio. The latter has made explanation as follows: "There is no official rule governing the matter, and never has been. Senator Foraker and I, who had charge of the arrangements at the McKinley memorial exercises, followed what we thought was the rule of common sense. I have nothing to say in reply to the formal complaint made by the ambassadors, but this I do wish to say in explanation of our arrangements of seating in the hall of the House. Our own government consists of three branches—the executive, legislative, and judicial. The President first calls for a seat of honor, representing the executive department of the government. The legislative was represented by President Pro Tem. Fryc, of the Senate, and Speaker Henderson, who presided over the exercises. Next came the judicial, represented by the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, who were given seats in front, across the aisle from the President. Next in order came the ambassadors of foreign countries, who were seated immediately behind the court. They are the official representatives of their sovereigns, who themselves constitute the one and only branch of government recognized in the persons of the ambassadors. The committee considered Prince Henry's a special case, as he was a guest of the nation. He was given a seat next to the President. The rule followed in the seating of the ambassadors was exactly the same as that which prevailed at the Lincoln and Garfield memorial exercises." It really appears that the committee followed the rule of common sense.

A COMMON-SENSE VIEW OF WATER BAPTISM.

BY REV. I. L. PEEBLES.

The subject of water baptism has been discussed much, it is true, but there is much that can be said on it still, and, therefore, let us have all that is necessary on it, and at this time it is proper to have a plain, common-sense view of the subject. In order to this, let us, first of all, remember that John the Baptist, the twelve apostles, and all to whom the commission was first given to baptize with water, were Jews. No one likely will deny this, and hence we deem it useless to consume time in proving that they were Jews. Taking it as conceded that they were Jews, let us see whether or not the Jews knew anything about water baptism before John, who was called the Baptist, not because he was beginning or belonged to a denomination called Baptists, but so called to distinguish him from other Johns, and especially to distinguish him as one whose business it was to baptize, and also as Christ's forerunner. Matthew was called the publican, so as to distinguish him from any other Matthew, and especially as Christ's disciple. That the Jews did know something about water baptism, and practiced it, is evident from the following: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." (I. Cor. x, 1, 2.) "Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings." (Heb. ix, 10.) "Washings" is from the Greek "baptismois," which is the same as "baptisms" in our language. It is said of the Pharisee with whom Jesus dined that he "marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner." (Luke xi, 38.) The word "washed" in this verse is from the Greek "ebaptistho," which in our language is "baptized or washed." When the Jews sent priests and Levites to John the Baptist to ask him who he was, they asked him, "Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?" (John i, 25.) So it is clear enough from these Scriptures that the Jews did know something about and did practice water baptism.

Now, let us see in what sense they understand it. They understood all about the use of water in the sense of purifying, or cleansing, or making clean. That they did thus understand it is clear from the following Scriptures: "And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: Sprinkle water of purifying upon them" (Num. viii, 7.) "Because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean." (Num. xix, 13.) "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you." (Ezek. xxxvi, 25.) Paul, a Jew and an apostle of Christ, said, "The ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh." (Heb. ix, 13.) Besides this mode of cleansing by applying water, we have the following promises of God: "I will pour out my spirit unto you." (Prov. i, 23.) "Let the skies pour down righteousness." (Isa. xiv, 8.) "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." (Joel ii, 28.) Now, then, seeing that the Jews were used to the water being applied to persons and things, instead of putting them in and under the water, and also that God's blessings are all poured out, does not even common sense say that it was so natural for those Jews, when commanded to go and baptize, to apply the water to the people, instead of dipping or immersing them—a thing that they were so unaccustomed to doing? And just listen at Paul after he was at his best, "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." (Heb. x, 22.) And in speaking of Moses, he says, "He took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people." (Heb. ix, 19.) Peter, too, was such a sprinkler that when he spoke of the blood of Christ in connection with our election and salvation, said, "And the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." (I. Peter i, 2.) These Jews never say one word about immersion; it is "with water"—sprinkle, sprinkle all the time, everybody and everything.

WESSON, MISS.

"THE PASSING OF THE EVANGELIST."

BY DR. T. B HOLLOMAN.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to express my hearty endorsement of your wise and excellent editorial on the above subject, in your issue of the sixth instant. I appreciate the distinction you make between the professional and the "brother who helps the pastor," and yet, in some instances, the "brother who helps the pastor" is not always blameless. It is not infrequent that the visiting help indulges in unbecoming and hurtful criticisms of the church, not hesitating to attack pastors, elders, and Bishops. While the purpose may be born of an honest desire to show that none are perfect, the criticisms are puerile, and of a character to minify the ministry of the church in the eyes of the people. I have known a contrast instituted between the little, short sack-coat of brown or other color, and the Prince Albert of the elder or Bishop, with the evident intention of discounting these men in their positions, and an air of 'Look at me, and learn that it does not depend on the cut of coat to make a great sermon." Such is childish nonsense.

But to my mind there is a more serious side than this to the matter—a willful shaking of confidence in the people for the regularly appointed ministry, and what is the more to be deplored, an approval by the pastor of such methods. It seems to me that here is a thrust at the body from which both the pastor and the help draw their life and support; a willful attempt to destroy the house which gives shelter to both.

For myself, I have always preferred to call upon my brethren in the regular ranks to give me help. Surely God can and will bless their labors as certainly as that of others.

DR. STEEL ENDORSED.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I enjoyed reading Dr. Steel's article in last week's issue of the ADVOCATE. If some of the preachers think he is kicking at "the hub," why, so much the better. Maybe they will see their error and change. We are all aware of the fact that a sermon read doesn't have the effect that it would have had if it had been delivered without even notes. As a rule, the preacher who reads his sermons will never move a congregation, although he may be a good reader. We have some good, consecrated men in our Conference, who admit that their sermons are rather dry because they read them. They began when they were young, and now it is too late to change.

When the Doctor said he had been offered land to build a college on for the poor boys and girls of Mississippi, I said, "Thank God! somebody is taking an interest in the poor of our own State." It is true, we have schools scattered all over the State, but we haven't the kind Dr. Steel desires to establish. Millsaps College is a good place for a young man, I'll admit; but I will not admit that it is a place where a poor boy can go. Grenada College is a good place for our girls; Malone's College is a fine institution. There are a number of similar institutions of learning in our State, but our boys and girls can not afford to pay from $100 to $150 a year school expenses; and it requires this amount, or more, at any of these schools. Very few of the poor class get a first-class education, and it is among this class, if we give them an opportunity, we will get some of our best lawyers, physicians and preachers. I know of several young people that are very poor, but if they were given a half a chance, they would show to the world that the boy that wears tailor-made clothing is not the one that always makes the greatest man. These boys will never have the opportunity of attending a college. "Oh, yes, they will, if they want to," somebody says. May I ask you how? Why, just get out and hustle. I would like to know if they—the men that are not helping these poor boys—would have made the men that they are to-day if they had been forced to work their way through school. It is easy, after we have gotten on top, to tell the poor, struggling boy how to do; but we do not offer to help him. No, we do not even encourage him by a kind word, let alone help with our pocket books.

I hope Dr. Steel will have the cooperation of all Mississippians, especially the ministers, if he undertakes to build a college such as he describes in his article. We need it badly. We must have it. I hope the brethren will all join hands in helping him build this great institution.

Doctor, when you get ready to begin, call on us, for we are always willing and ready to aid the poor boys and girls of our own great Commonwealth.

A PREACHER'S BOY.

AN INTERESTING MEETING AT MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

It was my privilege to go, Feb. 24, on the invitation of the Mansfield College authorities, and with the concurrence of the pastor at Mansfield, to hold revival services in the college chapel for the special benefit of the college girls. It had been thought that the interest of the girls could be best aroused by such a meeting held for them without any attendance from outside. The conditions for a meeting were unusually favorable. The teachers had for some time before been doing earnest and systematic personal work, and offering constant prayers, directed to the special end of securing the conversion of the students through the contemplated meeting. The meetings were arranged to suit the convenience of the school, and the whole audience being under the same roof, was present at each service. A large proportion of the girls—almost all, in fact—were already members of the church, but many of them had never been converted, and others were in a backslidden condition. The services increased steadily in interest for the whole ten days of the meeting without any considerable lull in the interest. Without any attempt to arouse emotion, a scriptural appeal was made to conscience, and the Holy Spirit was depended upon to make the Word effectual. The altar and the inquiry room were the means of testing conviction and giving instruction. During the services there were about thirty professions of conversion, leaving not more than two or three in the college who were not professing Christians. The eager interest and zealous work of the girls was encouraging to see. Each evening, just before the service, they would gather in small groups in their rooms, and have prayer meetings by the teachers and older scholars.

During the last few days of the services, at the urgent request of the students, a sunrise prayer meeting was held each morning. There were some very marked seasons of spiritual power, and the last service seemed to be a complete victory, every unconverted person in the house being at the altar, and almost everyone professing saving faith before the close. The pastor, Rev. C. B. Carter, co-operated by his presence and by word and prayer. Brother Carter has made a good start, and made a good impression on the congregation. In order to conserve the good results, a Y. W. C. A. was organized at the close of the meeting, in which a majority of the girls enlisted without hesitation.

The college seems to be in a prosperous condition, compared with its past history, having between forty and fifty boarders. There are regular classes for the systematic study of the Bible, and the constant effort of the teachers is to give thorough training in Christian principles, as well as in the development of the mind.

Personally, it was a great pleasure to be associated so closely with the life of the school, and see its workings, and especially to observe the spiritual uplift that affected the whole life of the school so favorably.

W. W. DRAKE.

BOONEVILLE MEETING.

I spent two weeks in Booneville, Ark., assisting Bro. F. M. Keene in a revival meeting. Notwithstanding it rained and snowed and sleeted, we did not lack for crowds, and the Lord was with us in great power. Quite a number were converted, and about thirty people joined the church by letter and on profession of faith. The whole town felt the influence of the meeting, and most of the merchants closed their stores for the eleven o'clock service, though it was in the midst of the busy season. I don't know anything else that will make a community make such sacrifices as a gracious revival. The church people were most wonderfully blessed, and were ready to assist in every good work.

It is a great treat to have the privilege of assisting a man like Brother Keene, who stands right at your back, and is ever ready to assist you in every way possible. He still knows how to say, Amen! and to lead a choir. His people sang well, and sang with great power. There is only one objection I have to his town—there is not a single negro living in the place, though it is quite a railroad town, and has a population of about 2,000. It is hard for these to keep house in a town where there are no negroes when they have been accustomed to them all their lives.

It was indeed amusing to see Brother Keene with his apron on, cooking for his family while his wife was sick. However, Brother Keene does it cheerfully—though somewhat awkwardly—having been trained in this wonderful itineracy to adjust himself to his environments. I believe the hand of God was in his transfer, and that Brother Keene is going to do a great work for God and the church in that new country, which is so rapidly developing.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. MCINTOSH.

Death of Dr. Harmon.

Just as we were locking up our forms for the press we learned of the death of Dr. J. W. Harmon, one of our oldest and best-known preachers in Mississippi. He died at Paulding, Miss., on the ninth, in the eightieth year of his age. We tender his bereaved children, two of whom are members of the Mississippi Conference, our sincere sympathy. We have no particulars save what are found in a press dispatch.

HILIP AND THE EUNUCH.

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

And they went down both the water, both Philip and eunuch, and he baptized him.
d when they were come up
t of the water the Spirit of the rd caught away Philip." (Acts
, 38, 39, A. V.)

This is the only place in the White Wyble where there is the slightest when egg go on rai
may have tilted the subject into water be-increase the startle you? Baptism. Were we to admit, Duston stock argument sake, that they correct in
S
cally went "into" the water, it ha would not necessarily imply immersion, for they could have stood in the margin, since folks in those days wore sandals instead of shoes and stockings.

But scholars deny that the original Greek implies that either Philip or the eunuch so much as wet their big toes. The phrase, "eis to hudor," translated "into the water" by the Authorized Version, could, and should, have been translated "to the water." "Eis" has many meanings besides "into," such as to, by, at, near, etc. Ditzler says its primary meaning is toward; then to, unto; then at, and into. Peebles says "eis" is translated "to" five hundred times in the New Testament alone.

The phrase, "ek to hudatos," translated by the A. V. "out of the water," should have been translated, "from the water." "Ek" has eleven meanings besides "out of," such as from, away from, etc. Since "eis" primarily means "to," and in this passage "ek," of necessity, means "from," thus taking its meaning from the preposition which precedes it; hence the verses correctly translated would read: "They went down (out of the chariot) both to the water, both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him. And when they were come up from the water," etc.

Indeed, every fact is against the opinion that the eunuch was immersed. Such a theory is at war:

1. With the geography of the country where the baptism occurred. Verse 26 says the place was a "desert." And the fact that the eunuch uttered his exclamation of surprise, "See water" (verse 36), disproves the Baptist idea that there was a large body of water there, and deep enough for immersion. If there had been the quantity there our immersion friends preach about, the eunuch would have known it before, and not been surprised when he called Philip's attention to it.

Moreover, "Ancient tradition fixes on a fountain at Bethzur, near Hebron, about twenty miles south of Jerusalem, as the place where the eunuch was baptized. The water is a spring which at present wells forth perennially from the base of the hill; part of the water runs to waste in the fields, while part is collected in a drinking trough." (Chapman.) The Baptist pond near Hebron thus dwindles down to a (then) intermittent "spring," where tradition says the eunuch was baptized—by sprinkling, of course.

2. The theory that the eunuch was immersed is incompatible with the prophecy in Isaiah where he was reading when Philip overtook him. Let the reader remember that the division of the Bible into chapters and verses is the work of man, and is modern. Isaiah was a solid manuscript when the eunuch read. Where Luke tells us he was reading is now, according to the division, chapter liii. If the reader will make the reference, he will find that Christ is the substance of the four chapters preceding, as well as the substance of chapter liii. In the last verse of chapter lii the prophet says, in speaking of him, "So shall he sprinkle many nations." The eunuch read this as well as the subsequent verses concerning his suffering, which Philip, doubtless, explained as referring to baptism, and which led the eunuch to ask baptism at the hands of Philip, after suddenly discovering the periodical spring. There is no way to account for the eunuch asking baptism, except on the strong probability that Philip explained verse lii unto him. If Isaiah had said that the nations would be immersed under Christ's dispensation, Baptists everywhere would rejoice, and feel doubly secure in their position.

3. Last, but not least, the opinion that the eunuch was immersed is thoroughly at war with Greek construction, and a universal law in Greek language. "As Luke was a good Greek scholar, he would have adhered to a rule in that language which was and is universally true, and observed by the Greeks: That when entrance into a thing is intended, the preposition is used both before the noun and verb. As, for example, 'They entered into the home of Lydia'—'Eiselthen eis ten Ludian' (Acts xvi, 40). Again, in chapter ix, 17, 'Ananias entered into the house'—'Eiselthen eis ten oikian.' This is plain. The common reader may understand it. In either example you see 'eis' used before the verb 'elthen,' and before the nouns 'Ludian' and 'oikian.' Now, this rule is universally applied in the Greek language. So on the other hand, as a counterpart to this when voluntary motion out of a place is intended, 'ex' or 'ek' is used before the verb and the noun. (See Matt. ii, 6; vii, 5; viii, 28; and many others too numerous to mention.) Now, as Luke has not thus doubled the preposition, or used it before the verb in the case of the baptism of the eunuch, we guess he never intended to intimate in the least that he was immersed." (Clement.)

The account of the eunuch's baptism is one of the strongest of Scripture in favor of sprinkling.

THE NEW GOSPEL.

BY REV. L. M. LIPSCOMB

What is it, from whence does it come, what is its authority, and what does it propose? It seems to be a medley of indefinite incongruities, without shape, character, or purpose, save an iconoclastic ambition to demolish whatever is simply because it is. It would wreak its vengeance upon religion, the home, society, law, order, and all the sacred bulwarks of civilization and humanity. It defies the Deity, challenges his austerity, denies his revelation, spurns his commandments, tramples on his love, and heaps its villainy and stigma of infidelity upon the Savior of men. It is an incendiary carrying the torch of destruction, a dastard with the dagger in its sleeve, a fiend with a ghoulish grin bent on a mission of death.

In its ultimate analysis, and in the light of common sense, it would appear to proceed from the throne of Tartarus—the authority of vacuity—and to have nothing behind it but the vast space in which it was conceived. Its sole license seems to be the liberty to speak out whatever wild fancies one chances to get possession of—orgies of Bacchus revived and spiritual zed by rebaptism in the cup of modern scientific (?) breweries. What does it propose? Well, it would be hard to say. It seems to propose nothing, and to desire nothing, but only to break the seven-sealed authority of our Bible, to dethrone Jehovah, to destroy the proper character of Jesus Christ, to annihilate the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount, to annul the law, hush the thunders of Sinai, and quench the eternal fires of God's retribution against crime and immorality. Nothing bears such powerful and striking testimony to the deep and widespread degeneracy of the times as the restless, hyena-like spirit which seeks to strangle innocence and murder the old-time faith—the only plant that can or ever has borne the flower and fruit of paradise in this barren, thorn-cursed earth. This foul spirit walks the rounds of life in hungry search of its prey, and delights in nothing so much as in the blood of the saints. It can believe in almost anything except in a God of truth and justice, and in men as the offspring and co partner of God in the solution of his destiny. Men are spinning theories and contriving schemes, rising and falling in the death-throes of their own foolish philosophy, estranged from God and cursed in the foul pollutions and deep damnation of sin they seem not to see or heed. There is but one destruction to life, and that is sin. There is a sole remedy for this moral turpitude. All your wisdom and philosophies, home-spun ethics and moral diotums, are but as the moonshine on Niagara. Some persons appear to believe that everything is just as you believe it to be; only not believe in a God, and he is not. Discard the Bible as you would the Koran, and you have done with it; divorce religion, morals and virtue from man, and he is free and independent, a free-thinker, which is a shrine of Satan's doctrine, to whose hollow platitudes multitudes respond with heart and soul.

These free-thinkers! What will they publish next? It is a misnomer. Every man is a free-thinker who thinks at all, and, in the next place, no man is a thinker whose thoughts do not follow the lines of truth or reality. The same relation obtains between thought and not thought as between truth and falsehood. Nothing can be dignified with the name of thought unless its conception is in reality. Now it falls out that these free-thinkers (?) have deified and placed on the list of the gods, to be adored and worshiped as the true liberators and redeemers of mankind, such men as Darwin and Huxley, Tyndall and Haeckel, Mayer and Helmholtz. These men think they were able ministers of evolution, but the gospel of evolution is like the fitful light created by marsh gases, the result of decay and vegetable death, and expires amid its own choke-damp. Any informed man knows that the very bases upon which Darwin built his whole scheme of evolution has sunken out of sight beneath the weight of scientific demonstration.

But this is not all. Here is something worse. They have made a god out of Tom Paine up in New York, the hub (they think) of the solar universe. On the twenty ninth of January, in Brooklyn, the Brooklyn Philosophical Association commemorated the anniversary of this infidel. They feasted and drank toasts, and had music and speeches in honor of him, as though he were a dead god, and gone where the dead gods go. I suppose this was a very appropriate celebration, as Tom Paine's creed was, 'Eat, drink, and be merry." The most puzzling feature about it all was that the leaders, and most every speaker on the programme of that solemn occasion, was a defunct, obsolete, or backslidden minister of the gospel, who had preached the gospel of the Lord Jesus in the days of his ignorance, before he learned a better way, ere he had grown wise enough to find out that Tom Paine was greater than the Savior. One of the principal speakers, Dr. Conway, who wrote a Life of Paine, quit the ministry of Christ where he was preaching in a London chapel. Instead of administering the holy communion, he substituted an evening dinner, and had for preaching, lectures and philosophic dissertations, and then a feast to the crowds that gathered. H. O. Pentecost was another of the popular and feasted speakers. He used to be a Baptist minister till he saw that Tom Paine was the real redeemer of mankind; then, of course, as an honest man, he could not speak in the pulpit any more. Mr. Wilson MacDonald was another speaker who declared that he was born in the backwoods, and never heard of Paine till he heard an ignorant preacher abuse him. He abused the minister for abusing Paine, and then admitted that the best day in his life was when he found Tom Paine. He ought not to abuse that minister if he was the means of his coming upon so great a truth as Paine. They held on till 12 o'clock at night, and nothing but Paine, Paine, Paine; not a word of God or Christ, and brotherhood of man, or sin, or heaven, or hell.

Oh, short-sighted, deluded men! You fight a losing battle, and all your eloquence is but wasted wind, when you go forth in the name of a man. Ye philosophers of bread and wine, learn that man has a soul; that he is akin to the All-Good, and can never be elevated or redeemed till you address his moral nature, and bring it under the sun-glass of God's truth.

HOME MISSIONS.

BY REV. J. A. LEECH.

MR. EDITOR: This is my twentieth year in the Methodist itinerancy, and I have for these twenty years had opinions in regard to our home mission work of which I have never written, and of which I have seldom spoken.

The article in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE on this subject has moved me to give you my thoughts, or opinions, which have been pressing themselves upon me, more or less, for those twenty years. These questions have presented themselves to me:

1. How can we expect a man with a family of two, or more, children to serve a charge, giving it all of his time (with no other means of support), when it does not pay him more than two or three hundred dollars, and with no appropriation from the Mission Board, and expect him to do any permanent good?

2. How can we expect a man to be really religious, to serve God and the church with a clear conscience, and to feel that he is keeping the promise made to his wife at the marriage altar, to also comply with the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, wherein it says, "He that provideth not for his own, especially them of his own household, has denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel," when he knows that he is giving all of his time to a people who have never, and, perhaps, never will pay more than the small amount above mentioned?

3. How can a Bishop, or presiding elder, get his consent to send a man under such circumstances to a charge like the above mentioned, without a liberal appropriation from the Mission Board?

There was a time in the history of our Methodism when all of its ministers received the same pay, from Bishops down to the most humble missionary, but that is a thing of the past. Now, our Bishops are fairly well cared for, and most of our presiding elders have everything their way when their allowance is made, and so have many of the station and circuit preachers. But how about a large number of our poorer circuit and home mission preachers? I keep hearing the voice of God saying, "Your ways are not equal."

If I offer myself to our Foreign Mission Board and am accepted, I know before I leave for my field of labor that I will be supported. That is right. If I am assigned to a station, I know about what I will receive for my support. If I am elected to fill any connectional office, I know what my salary will be. If I am elected a Bishop, I know what my salary will be. Yes, I know what to expect, and know that I will be reasonably cared for, and consequently go to my work with a glad heart. But when I offer myself to many of our Conferences, and they accept me, I have no conception as to what my salary will be. I may receive a competency for myself and family, or I may not receive half that amount. Nevertheless, I am expected to do full work. I am to be faithful to every trust committed to me, unless it be the comfortable maintenance of my wife, and the education of my children. This great sacrifice may have been necessary in the long ago, but it is unreasonable in this enlightened age, and the time, I believe, has fully come when we can no longer ask a man to join our ranks without assuring him that we will give him and his a reasonable support, so long as he proves worthy to remain among us.

Some of our Conferences are waking up to this great fact, and are making assessments upon their Conferences for home missions equal to that made by the General Board for foreign missions. This is done that their home missionaries may be reasonably well cared for, and that no home missionary should suffer, while we all, as one great family, are trying to carry forward the work of the church.

For years I have been trying to persuade our Conference Board of Missions to make an assessment upon our North Mississippi Conference for home missions equal to that made by the General Board for foreign missions, and that we manage so as to get a surplus on hand sufficient to enable us to make a liberal appropriation to all of our home mission works, and be able to pay them at least quarterly for their labors, so they may be able to more successfully perform their labors, and, doubtless, it would relieve many of them from much embarrassment, if not suffering.

Now, Doctor, these thoughts have been in my mind for some years, and if I am not right in my conclusions as to the best interest of all concerned, I am ready to listen to any brother who will show me a more excellent way.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NEWS.

BY PROF. B. E. YOUNG.

Rev. J. C. Park, of Winona, Miss., will conduct the annual revival services of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Park is a college graduate, and has been especially successful in revival work, captivating all by his zeal and pulpit power. Evidences of a deep interest in the services are already manifest, and special prayer services will precede the opening of the meeting on March 10. This is looked forward to as one of the greatest blessings of the college year.

Mr. Felix E. Gunter left last week for Toronto, Canada, to represent the Millsaps Y. M. C. A. in the fourth International Conference of the Students' Volunteer Movement. Mr. Gunter has always been a prominent member of the association, and it thus shows its appreciation. All his expenses are paid by the body. We wish him a pleasant and profitable trip. We note that Bishop Galloway will attend this great meeting, and deliver an address upon Christian work.

At the last meeting of the Lamar Literary Society a motion was put before the house providing for the joint debate with the Galloway Society. The latter has accepted, and the debate will be held in the near future.

At the recent business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. the following officers were elected and installed: J. S. Purcell, president; W. N. Duncan, vice-president; A. S. Cameron, secretary; J. W. Booth, treasurer.

The death of Mr. J. B. Phillips brought great sorrow to all our college community. Messrs. Welch, Wooten and Simpson, accompanied by Mr. Featherston, the generous benefactor of the deceased, accompanied the body to Coldwater, Miss., where the burial took place.

Mr. B. Z. Welch, of the Sophomore class, was called home last week by the serious illness of his father. Messrs. H. A. Wood and W. S. Watson, of the same class, have returned to college after an absence of some weeks.

Mrs. W. B. Murrah has been very ill for over a week. We are glad to hear that she is improving. Mrs. Murrah is the great friend of our student body and community, and we regret to hear of any ill-fortune attending her.

An event of the near future that promises importance to Millsaps College is a Missionary Institute, to be held here March 28 to 30, under the auspices of the connectional officers having these matters in charge. We pray for blessings upon their labors.

On last Sunday, at the First Methodist Church, Bishop Galloway delivered a missionary sermon upon the lines on which he addressed the Missionary Conference at New Orleans. He fully sustained his reputation for eloquence and effectiveness. It is very fortunate for us here in Jackson that the Bishop loves his home so dearly, and never passes an opportunity to address the churches here. His appearance, even in the worst weather, always brings out a crowd that taxes the capacity of the church.

On last Wednesday, Major Millsaps, Bishop Galloway, Professor Bishop and President Fitzhugh were entertained at dinner by Dr. and Mrs. Murrah.

Chief-Justice A. H. Whitfield, of our distinguished Law School faculty, has the Law classes to meet him every Sunday morning at Sunday-school.

Concerning a member of our class of 1901, we quote the following from the January number of the Vanderbilt University Quarterly: "The Observer Essay Prize for 1901-02 has been awarded to Mr. H. O. White, '03 graduate, for an essay on 'The Disease Afflicting American Politics.' It appeared in the December number, and shows a creditable virility and independence of thought."

Positions in at least two important Conference colleges are being administered by Millsaps graduates. A. H. Shannon, '98, and G. L. Harrell, 99, are located at Hendrix College, Arkansas, while W. L. Kennon, 1900, holds the chair of physics and chemistry in Kentucky Wesleyan College.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE INSTITUTE.

BY REV. W. W. DRAKE.

At the last session of the Louisiana Conference a resolution was passed which provided for the organization of an Institute, for the study of the Conference course and proposed post-graduate course, to be held at some central point within the bounds of the Conference. Revs. J. M. Henry, W. H. LaPrade and C. C. Miller were appointed as a Committee of Arrangements with full power to fix time and place, and to secure such arrangements as possible in the way of lecturers, etc., for the carrying out of a profitable programme. Revs. F. S. Parker, W. H. LaPrade and C. W. Carter were appointed as a Post-Graduate Committee, to select a course of study for those who have finished the required studies laid down in the Discipline, and desire to pursue further studies under skillful direction, and to conduct the class in the study of such a course.

This plan seems to furnish an opportunity to the young men of our Conference for more thorough and effective study of the course, and for better selection of the studies to be pursued afterwards. I feel sure that if we fail to take hold of this matter in earnest and make it a success, we will miss a means of adding greatly to the efficiency of our ministry. I desire, therefore, to call the attention of the preachers to it, so that they may plan for it in making arrangements for the Summer campaign. A few days spent in this way is sure to add to the permanent efficiency of our ministerial life. To the undergraduates it will certainly decrease the seeming severity and unreasonableness of the Examining Committees. It will put new life and freshness into the preaching of the preacher, old or young, who will heartily undertake the post-graduate work.

I presume that the competent committees named above will soon be ready to announce the time, place, entertainment, arrangements, post-graduate books, and the definite plans of study, so that we can plan ahead with reference to our going, and get the books for the post-graduate course. Let us determine to make the first session of the Louisiana Conference Institute a complete success.

WATER BAPTISM.

After a careful reading of Bro. I. L. Peebles' "Water Baptism," I can heartily recommend it to any one wanting to know the truth as it is set forth in God's Word upon this much-discussed question. He is decidedly scriptural in arguing all his points, and that is what the people want. What is the real teaching of the Bible on this matter? Nothing short of that will satisfy the intelligent inquirer. I think Bro. Peebles has met this demand by writing this little book; it is certainly a worthy contribution to the subject of "Water Baptism." I trust it will have a wide circulation. The author gives his likeness with each one of these little volumes, and a splendid one it is.

Brethren, get one of Bro. I. L. Peebles, Wesson, Miss., or the Publishing House. It will only cost you 50 cents. Yours very truly,

W. T. WOODWARD.

This root of many evils—

Glandular tumors, abscesses, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions, sore ears, inflamed eyelids, rickets, dyspepsia, catarrh, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, paleness, nervousness and other ailments including the consumptive tendency—

Can be completely and permanently removed, no matter how young or old the sufferer.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was given the daughter of Silas Vornooy, Wawarsing, N. Y., who had broken out with scrofula sores all over her face and head. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. He writes that she has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by N. A. MOTT, Yazoo City, Miss.

To Whom All Communications for This Department Must Be Sent.

Louisiana State Sunday-School Association Convention.

The purpose of this article is to call the attention of the Sunday-school workers throughout the State to the meeting of the Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention, which will meet at Natchitoches, La., April 22-24, 1902, and to ask that the Methodist schools see that we are well represented at that convention. It seemed almost, if not altogether, impossible to organize and get together a Conference Sunday-school Convention, and while the convention referred to above is undenominational, or rather interdenominational, it will avail itself of the very best talent, and will have as its principal speaker and instructor Prof. Hamill, who is Superintendent of Training Work in the M. E. Church, South, and who is too widely and favorably known to need any introduction to the readers of this ADVOCATE.

Let me, however, kindly, but earnestly, insist that every portion of our State have a wide-awake Sunday-school worker as a representative at that convention. The superintendents and pastors can formulate some plan by which every presiding elder's district would be fairly well represented, and I think it would be no great task to raise enough money to pay the expenses of the delegates.

In this way a few of our best Sunday-school workers from every part of the State would be put in touch with this source of instruction and power, and they, in turn, could, and would, come in touch with the masses, and instruct and enthuse them. Louisiana Methodism owes it to herself to be well represented at that convention in April. What say you, brother pastors and superintendents, shall we not be?

Fraternally,

J. I. HOFFPAUIR,

Pres. La. Conference S. S. Board.

Mer Rouge, La., Feb. 21, 1902.

SELECT YOUR DELEGATES

The Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Institute and Convention, which meets at Utica, Miss., March 24-27, promises to be a very interesting and successful one. It is earnestly desired that each school in the Conference be represented. Each school is entitled to one delegate for each twenty-five pupils enrolled, but those with a smaller enrollment are entitled to one delegate. Please select your delegates at once.

DAY OF PRAYER

We would suggest that Sunday, March 23, be observed as a day of prayer by the workers in the Mississippi Conference, and Sunday, April 20, by those in Louisiana, for the special blessing of the Holy Spirit to rest upon the coming conventions. We would be glad to have the brethren of North Mississippi join their two sister Conferences, as they will surely join them in prayer for the success of their work. Let us pray that our conventions may be spiritual, and for the conversion of the children and young people of our States.

Remember the competitive examination at the Utica Convention on the first sixteen chapters of the Book of Acts. The first prize will be five dollars in gold, and the second a Teacher's Bible, and the contestants are not to be over eighteen years old. We trust the young people generally will take an interest in it.

Reduced rates will be secured on the railroads for the Utica Convention, and free entertainment will be provided. Send the names of your delegates as early as possible to Bro. W. W. Ellis, Utica, Miss., who is chairman of Committee on Arrangements.

And now a word to presiding elders, pastors, and superintendents. On you largely depends the success of the coming conventions. According to your interest in them will be the interest of your schools. Will you not kindly announce them from Sunday to Sunday? Will you not "talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up?" Their sole object is to improve the methods and stir up greater interest in our Sunday-schools, which is the door to the church of fully eighty-five per cent. of its membership.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

EASTABUCHIE, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: After a four-year's term on the Wilkinson charge, I was appointed by Bishop Morrison to the Eastabuchie charge. We had many true and warm friends we had learned to love on the Wilkinson circuit. We arrived at Eastabuchie on Jan. 4, and were met at the train by Dr. C. W. Campbell, who escorted us to the parsonage, where we found a committee of ladies in waiting to welcome us to our new home. After warming, we were invited out to dinner, prepared by the good ladies of Eastabuchie. We had a variety of good things too numerous to mention to eat, and we had enough left over that had been put into the safe and pantry to keep the preacher's family going for quite a while; and, at night, as we were preparing to go to bed, we heard approaching footsteps, and a tap at the door. We answered the call, and found quite a crowd ready to enter, and when they had all gotten in, we had a room full. Dr. Campbell brought up the rear, and after we got quiet, the Doctor made us a good talk in behalf of the town and people welcoming us into their midst. This scribe then made a little talk, and we had a prayer and song, and spent a while in a social way. The crowd then left us, feeling that we were at home and among an appreciative people; and a kinder people I never met than the people of Eastabuchie circuit. After the crowd had left we began to look around, and found various packages, such as sugar, grits, pickles, and canned goods soap, starch, and many other things too numerous to mention, such as a preacher's family needs.

This circuit consists of five appointments on the railroads: Eastabuchie and Tuscanola, on the N. O. and N. E. R. R.; Rawls Springs and Seminary, on the G. and S. I. R. R., and one country appointment. I find a great deal of work here to be done, and I am planning for a good year's labor for the Master. We are expecting, by the help of God, to have many souls saved from sin this year, and all collections up in full. Pray for us. C. C. GRIFFIN, P. C.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

BON AMI, LA.

Bon Ami is a saw-mill town, with about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It includes people of every rank in life, from the cultured city people and well-bred countryman to Mexicans, Dagoes, and negroes. The mill is one of the largest in the State, I suppose, and is operated upon the most improved modern methods. The town is lighted in part by electricity, and well supplied with artesian water. Every precaution necessary for healthfulness is observed.

From a place boasting so much in temporal things, and lying in a prosperous portion of as old a State as Louisiana, some may be surprised to learn it is but a mission field, with no organized church of any denomination. Nevertheless, this is true, and the Southern Methodist is the only church that has undertaken work here. Last year there was one service a month, but this year a pastor has been secured for every Sunday at 11 A. M., and at night. We have also a Sunday-school Sunday morning, and a small Wednesday night prayer meeting. We are planning to have a revival about the last of March, or in April, and hope to organize a church soon. We find a few Northern Methodists here, who will probably join us, and a few others that will probably come in also.

The other night we were pleasantly surprised by a "storm" of about forty of the best citizens of the town, each bringing something to assist us in a financial way. After a short interval of social chat we had a few familiar songs, and were led in prayer by the pastor. The crowd dispersed, leaving with cheer and good-will and prayers behind, and seemingly carrying merry hearts with them. We trust each one was benefited by the evening's gathering, and believe they were, for "it is more blessed to give than to receive." After they were gone we found our larder contained several dollars' worth of provisions; there were a good many new dishes, a center-table, two nice rugs, a rocker, a new dress for baby, and $5 75 more in our purse.

Hoping and praying for a glorious victory here this year, I am,

ELA BROWNE PURCELL.

PINEVILLE, LA.

We arrived on this charge Dec. 28, 1901. Since that date, notwithstanding the bad weather, we have cut, two feet long, six cords of wood; stove wood, three cords; hauled all of it and placed in the yard. Preached three funerals, baptized eight children, two adults, received four into the church, made sixty-one pastoral visits, secured deed to a lot of ground in Tioga, on which to build a church, and raised $30 to floor and ceil Pleasant Grove Church. Have set the day for us to clear the brier-bushes and logs away from the Nugent Church. Have lumber on the ground to build a new fence around lot in Pineville—lot, 300x400. I have preached fifteen times, and traveled three hundred miles. If any of the brethren need help in a protracted meeting, why, write me. Pray for us, brethren.

Yours in Christ,

W. T. WOODWARD.

BRAIN FOOD.

Not long since there was a great run on the fish markets because it was announced that fish was food for the brain. Of course the fallacy of the fad was soon exploded. Normally the food we eat nourishes brain, nerves, muscle, bones, etc., each part of the body assimilating phosphorous salts, lime, according to its need. When the brain begins to show weakness or the nerves become sensitive it is a sign that there is a loss of the nutrition contained in the food eaten, and this loss is in general due to disease of the stomach, and its allied organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, which is the source of the strength of both brain and body.

"I was troubled with very frequent headaches," writes Miss Belle Summerton, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas., "often accompanied by severe vomiting; bowels were irregular and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could eat almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing, for twenty-four hours at a time. I was entirely unfit for work, and my whole system seemed so run-down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and did so with such satisfactory results that before finishing the third bottle I felt perfectly able to undertake duties attending public school life."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser in paper covers is sent free, on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1902

Fanaticism in the church repels many intelligent and conservative persons from its altar, and sets them against religion altogether, and often induces the over-zealous to quit the church and organize on independent lines. These two evils should not be allowed to afflict the church in this enlightened and practical age.

Life does not consist in the abundance of the things that a man possesses, but one with an abundance may make life a blessing to himself and to those around him. It is only necessary for him to recognize his obligations to God and his fellow-man, and use his goods as God directs. Such a man is held in everlasting remembrance; his name is are recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life.

That which makes wealth dangerous to the soul is not its possession, but the opportunity it affords its possessor to gratify the selfish and lower instincts of humanity at the expense of the higher and better nature. How peculiarly liable the rich are to such temptations we all know. The gospel is not lacking in cautions on this subject. If there is failure at any point, it is in the failure of the pulpit to point out and warn rich hearers of their danger. Many rich men will rise up in judgment and condemn us.

The Typographical Union of Nashville proposes to bring the type-setters of our Publishing House under the control of the Union. To this end a commission from the Union will call on the Book Committee; failing before that tribunal, the matter will be carried to the General Conference, to meet at Dallas in May. We have never before heard of a secular Union employing a lobby to work its case before an ecclesiastical body. Our Publishing House pays its employees Union prices, but has always declined to be governed by its authorities.

A prize was recently offered to the high-school students of New Orleans for the best essay on "Woman Suffrage." The city School Board disapproved, and, we suppose, the offer will be withdrawn. The Board is to be commended for its action. The idea of stimulating young girls—or young men, either, as for that matter—to dive into the intricacies of a political question in the midst of the school term, should be met at once with the opposition of parents, as well as disapproval of school authorities and the public. The object was, no doubt, to propagate the principles of the Woman's Suffrage Association, which principles, right or wrong, should not be discussed in the public schools.

PREACHING TO SINNERS.

In the early years of our ministry we labored under the impression that anything like a revival among Christians, or an awakening among sinners, was impossible without the co-operation of the whole church. To this end, in the beginning of a protracted meeting, we spent our energies in trying to secure harmony, and to put every brother and sister to work. Of course, our efforts were often fruitless. We failed to get the church to work, and sinners, listening to our talk, and seeing the church unmoved, would show no signs of penitence. In after years we saw the matter in a different light. We reached the conclusion that there was no reason why a sinner, under proper instruction, should not be convicted and converted independent of the church. Indeed, we saw that there was no reason why a sinner should not be saved, even though the whole church be arrayed against him. Certainly, sinners are more readily impressed, and the work among them easier, when they see the church concerned in their behalf, but indifference on the part of the church is not necessarily fatal to all effort.

No doctrine can be true that discounts and sets aside the direct and independent agency of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit awakens and saves. He reproves the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. Sinners are washed and sanctified and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. (1. Cor. vi, 11.) No sort of an interpretation short of one based on a theory that eliminates the personal work of the Spirit from conviction and regeneration can break the force of these plain statements, and we feel fully justified in saying that the good Lord will not withhold his saving power from a penitent sinner simply because an indifferent church fails to co-operate. To say that he will, is equivalent to saying that the faithful preaching of the Word, though it may find lodgment in the heart through the influence of the Spirit, is powerless, save when the church sees fit to smile on the sinner and bid him welcome. We seriously doubt the right of any church to vote on the application of an individual who knocks for admission into its fold. We are sure the Lord has not delegated to it power to keep men out of the kingdom. We may, therefore, appeal to sinners at any time, with the assurance that, whether the church co-operates or not, if the Word is accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, it will find lodgment in their hearts.

Our Lord tells us that he came to seek and to save that which was lost; not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. He pled and prayed for the unity of the church, but not once did he make it the necessary condition of saving those who sought his aid. At one place it is said he did not many mighty works because of the unbelief of the people. But this does not mean that even in that community he could not have saved one believing soul, though every other member of the community had been arrayed against him. Whether the people were for him or against him, he preached repentance, and gave instruction to his disciples to do likewise, and in obedience "they went out, and preached that men should repent."

Why should a preacher to-day let a cold and unbelieving church stand in his way of saving sinners? Why should he waste his energies in efforts to work up an interest in the membership, when the same amount of energy expended in appeals to sinners would do vastly more good? We have somewhere recently seen it stated that the very best way to arouse an interest in the church is for the church to witness the conversion of a few sinners. Who among us, after days of hard work trying to secure the prayers and co-operation of the brethren and sisters, have not seen a whole church electrified by the conversion of one sinner? One such case ought to satisfy us that we have held on long enough to the heresy of preaching that united effort in the church is essential to soul-saving.

There are some souls in every community who, if brought under conviction by direct preaching, would evince the determination of Joshua expressed in those memerable words: "As for me, and my house, we will serve the Lord." But if these souls are taught that unity of effort on the part of the church is essential, and they see that the church is neither united nor interested, it will be quite impossible to bring them under conviction.

Some preachers unhappily divert the minds of sinners from the one great purpose of the gospel by arraigning the church for its shortcomings and misdoings, and make out such a case of corruption as to convince them that there is no good among professed Christians, and that it will do them no good to unite with such a set. Do we wonder that under such preaching few sinners are saved, or that the few who profess conversion decline to unite with the church?

Let us, as preachers, remember that as was our Lord's mission to the world, so is ours: to preach the gospel of the kingdom, and to bring men to repentance. Let us be direct on this point—convince sinners that our business is to save them, and that by personal co-operation with the Spirit they may be saved, and enjoy all the blessings of grace, whether the church shows an interest or not. It is our business to save sinners.

OUR YOUNG MEN.

Complaint is often made that our young men do not attend church. This is lamentably true with regard to young men in the cities. Their absence from public worship is noticeable, and the number who stay away so constantly increases as to become alarming. There is also complaint of decrease in the number of young men attending theological schools with a view to the ministry. As to Methodist schools we have seen no complaint, but the absence of young men from our houses of worship is conspicuous. No people have more ground for complaint than Methodists.

How is the falling away to be accounted for? The loss of ministerial students, it is said, is due to two or three things. One is the commercial spirit of the age. The ministry does not pay in dollars and cents, like the professions and commercial pursuits. For this reason, it is said, aspiring young men avoid it. Then it is said that the inadequate support of old ministers, and the comparatively early age at which they are laid aside, cause thoughtful young men to hesitate. There may be some truth in these sayings.

But there are other reasons. One is the destructive criticisms of the Bible indulged in by men who profess to believe in God. This is shown in several ways: (1) By the very low conception of inspiration. Some critics say: We accept the doctrine of inspiration, but we do not believe that the writers of the Bible were any more inspired than were Shakespeare, Lord Bacon, or any of the great poets. Such expressions as that come from men who teach our boys. (2) It is current among men high in learning that very much of the Bible is nothing more than allegory, a recital of myths. The whole story of the fall of the first man is so classed. Even the miracles of the Bible are declared to be without foundation in fact. (3) Much that the world has held as sacred and inspired of God is declared to be only human productions and worthless. Is it any wonder that young men who read such, or hear it from the lips of men set over them as teachers, have their faith shaken, and are forced to the conclusion that the Bible is not the book they were taught to believe it was. Or if they maintain faith in that portion of the book that is left, and go out as preachers, they preach after the manner of the schools, and not after Christ. They preach a gospel devitalized, and absolutely shorn of its strength.

It is admitted that, while the reasons above given at least partially show why ministerial students have decreased in number, they do not tell us why our young men absent themselves from the house of God. Why is it so? Who can tell us? We offer a suggestion or two.

The young men of to-day in our cities have never formed the church-going habit. They attended Sunday-school in childhood and youth, but were allowed to remain at home during the hour for public worship. Now, having outgrown the Sunday-school and quit, they care nothing for the church. In the next place, they lead an intensely active life, and when Sunday comes, they seek recreation, or spend the day in absolute idleness. There ought to be some way to correct these two evils. And, last, the public worship, including the singing and the preaching, especially the latter, is not sufficiently exciting. But for this lack, neither the preacher or his congregation can be blamed. It is the result of a vitiated taste that demands something new or sensational. The Lord does not propose to supply such a lack, but will hold those who demand it none the less guilty of omission of duty. How to reach and save these men is a problem far outweighing in importance any other problem before our ministry. Who can solve it?

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SALOON.

It is argued by some that many men go to the saloon, not for the sake of the drink—though they drink after they get there—but for the sake of the society and the good cheer that abounds, and, that if we would win them from the saloon, we must put something in the saloon's place. Our own notion is, that the man who habitually visits the saloon for the sake of the society he finds there, would not be attracted by, nor satisfied with anything better. His taste is not sufficiently elevated. To open a tea-room, or a reading-room, with all the modern accompaniments, might possibly reach a few of the saloon habitues and save them, but it would be likely to attract a much larger number who never leave home for the saloon or any other kind of resort. And in doing so would result in more evil than good.

It seems inconsistent to recognize the saloon as a social resort. The very term carries with it the idea of something good, and there is nothing good about the saloon, no matter how richly it may be furnished; and instead of talking about providing a substitute, we ought to talk about providing means for its extermination. We will never do any good with a substitute so long as we let the saloon stand. There is no remedy except prohibition.

Every argument in favor of local option is an argument in favor of prohibition, for local option voted and enforced is prohibition on a limited scale. And everywhere, under its operation, with a fair trial, it has proved to be satisfactory. Where officers and citizens allow the law violated, dissatisfaction results, and the unthinking say prohibition is a failure. And those who say more liquor is sold and used under prohibition than under license are mistaken. They do not know what they say, and those who are interested in the trade, if they believed it, are inconsistent in opposing prohibition. If what they say is true, it would be to their advantage to vote for prohibition, County, State and National, for they would greatly enlarge their traffic, and also get rid of the heavy tax imposed on the trade.

Our observation is, that where prohibition law is enforced, no sort of a substitute is demanded. Those who are socially inclined get together and have enjoyment, as free and as full as if they were in a liquor saloon, and are never troubled with such disturbances and disgraceful affairs as frequently result from the free indulgence of drink. The higher nature asserts itself among people who meet for social enjoyment purely for the sake of enjoyment and not for drink. The so-called substitute for the saloon is an appeal to that same lower nature. The motive may be good, but the policy can never succeed so long as the open saloon is allowed to compete. We must get rid of the saloon.

THE COMING DEACONESS.

A good sister, who writes from Kentucky, is enlightening the church on the general characteristics and duties of deaconesses. She knows a great deal more about them than did St. Paul. At least, she tells much more. And, notwithstanding the leaders of the movement in our church disclaim any intention to fashion the Southern deaconess after the Northern model, this Kentucky writer presumes that the deaconess the world over is one and the same thing—called and set apart the same way. First, she is to be licensed. To obtain a license, she must be twenty years of age, unmarried, and must have passed two years of continuous probationary service. The license qualifies her for the consecration service by the Bishop. Her rank is designated by her costume. Next, her appointment is made by the Bishop who presides over the district in which she is located. She reports to the District Superintendent (Bishop), who reports to the General Board of Bishops. Her duties are varied. She may suit herself as to the line of work she will pursue. Her work will be known by the capital letters which follow her name. She may be an E. D. (Evangelistic Deaconess), a V. D. (Visiting Deaconess), an N. D. (Nurse Deaconess), or, last of all, a D. D. (Deaconess Doctor). All this, and something more.

In the above we have left off quotation marks, but we have closely followed the description of the deaconess as she is in our sister church. It is a "plaster-cast" of the deaconess that some would introduce among Southern Methodists. The order, as thus set forth, could scarcely be nearer Rome without going into the nunneries. As a Southern Methodist, we do not care to go in that direction—no, not even to follow the fashion of our twin sister.

L. CARLEY.

PERSONAL.

Dr. C. W. Carter has so far recovered as to be able to resume work on his district. We trust that his health has been permanently restored, and that he may be blessed with abundant success.

Rev. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the Monroe district, spent last Tuesday in the city. He gave us a fine account of the preachers and their work. Everything is harmonious, and the prospect is pleasing.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, pastor at Pineville, La., is improving his church. A fine bell will soon call the worshipers together. The bell is from the C. S. Bell Co., Hillsboro, Ohio, which is advertised in our columns.

Rev. J. D. Newsom, of the North Mississippi Conference, is in charge of Fearn Spring circuit. His post-office address is Mashulaville, Miss. Brother Newsom, faithful soul that he is, though on the superannuate list, does not know how to quit work.

Mrs. D. W. Babb, wife of the excellent pastor at Batesville, Miss., after nearly four weeks of sickness, is gaining health, and Brother Babb is happy and hard at work. He adds this significant sentence to his short note: "Dr. Sullivan is making a fine impression on the district."

Rev. Clarence B. Stronse has been blessed with great success in a meeting at Gainesville, Fla. Many souls were converted and the church greatly strengthened. Brother Stronse is known in Louisiana as a consecrated, zealous and earnest worker. He will be back in the State in time to meet his engagements.

Rev. W. M. Young, of the Corinth district, with a grateful heart, tells us that his little son, who had been long under treatment at Memphis, after two severe back-sets, is now at home and about well. We rejoice with the happy family, and pray that the dear boy may grow up to be a good and useful man.

We had a pleasant call last week from Brother J. W. McLean and his excellent wife, of Darlington, La. They are active and devoted Methodists, and great friends of the ADVOCATE. We thank them for the kind invitation to visit their home and church, as well as for the good work done in behalf of the paper.

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Courtland, sends intelligence of the death of one of the oldest members of his church, Mr. Ewing Sankle, who died Feb. 23, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He died in triumph. In the same note Brother Savage informs us that he has received fourteen members into the church since Conference, and organized one Bible Reading Circle. The outlook on his charge is hopeful.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

A district parsonage has been purchased in Aberdeen for the Aberdeen district. Every district in the Conference now has a presiding elder's home. The parsonage in Greenwood was sold last year, and steps are now being taken for the building of another one on the church lot.

Since last report Bible Teachers study circles have been organized at Durant, Tupelo, Coldwater and Enpora. Others are in contemplation. Let the good work move on rapidly.

Our third "Sunday-school Year-Book" has been mailed to every pastor and superintendent. If any have failed to receive their copy, please notify me at once, that it may be sent. We feel sure that this booklet will prove useful for the promotion of our Sunday-school work if it be read and used as designed by the preachers and workers. However insignificant it may appear to the eyes of the inconsiderate, there is not a superfluous or useless sentence in it. Even the advertisements may be used to advantage.

I expect to be in Hattiesburg the third Sunday in this month and week following, during the District Sunday-school Convention. Also at the Sunday-school Convention at Utica March 24-27. I will have with me at both places a good line of our books, including Sunday-school supplies. Any person desiring any special books will please notify me that I may have them on hand. It will be a great favor and help if those indebted to me in any amount will kindly remit at once.

Mississippi Conference Church Extension.

DEAR BRETHREN: Last year will ever be memorable for the full collections made on all claims, and for the large numbers added to the church. The Conference Board of Church Extension received more money than ever in its history of twenty years. But can we not make a full report at our next Conference? I am sure that we can if every pastor will emphasize this line of church work. Brethren, let us try! In order to do so, let every preacher prepare a sermon on church extension and preach it to his people, following it with a collection for church extension. Take this collection early in the year, and don't side-track it for anything else.

The Executive Committee will meet in Vicksburg, March 12, to consider applications to the Parent Board for aid. The members of this committee are: L. S. Jones, president, Port Gibson; J. T. Abney, secretary, Rocky Springs; T. A. Holloman, treasurer, Phœnix. Send to J. T. Abney for blanks, and return to him when filled out. Send collections to T. A. Holloman, and for further information address L. S. Jones. We will not consider applications made to the Conference Board at our meeting in March, as we have no funds to apply.

L. S. JONES.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat and grippe. This is the verdict of the people.

The Cause of Missions.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN: By order of the Board of Missions the comparative statistics have been published again, and will reach you in a few days. Should any of you fail to get your package, notify me, and you will be supplied. If you will distribute wisely and discreetly among your officials and leaders, much good will doubtless be accomplished now and in time to come. Take the programme and execute it, if practical for your people; and, if not, make one of your own construction, practical, and get your people to studying these great themes of the gospel that lie nearest the great heart of our Christ.

Our people at home are perishing for lack of knowledge, and on that account, largely, the heathen are perishing for lack of knowledge. The Christian church has just begun the work of evangelizing the world. Our branch is just now studying her first lessons. By faith and prayer and works and the omnipresence of our Lord, she can and will "go forward."

We commit to our co-workers of the beloved brotherhood this humble effort to advance the great cause for which our Redeemer gave his life. It is only an echo of last year's record. Let us make the echo louder and sweeter this year.

Fraternally,

J. H. SHUMAKER.

Mississippi Conference.

To Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents:

I have mailed to each pastor whose address I could obtain a request for the names of all who expect to attend the Sunday-school Convention at Utica, March 24. Please, brethren, give attention to this request, and all who have not heard from me please notify me of those who expect to attend. This is of great importance to us.

The recognized unfailing scientific Cure for Dyspepsia, Nervous Indigestion, Constipation, Acidity, and Biliousness. Relief in one minute, with first dose; quickly effects a permanent Cure. Never fails. Neutralizes and eradicates dyspeptic poison. An absolute specific. Very palatable, perfectly harmless, as gentle as nature in effect. Neglected Dyspepsia and Indigestion produce "Bright's Disease," undermines the vital organs, overthrows the mental faculties; producing insanity and death.

Mr. A. G. Thompson, Anclote, Fla., voluntarily writes, "I suffered agonies from Dyspepsia. Walker's Famous Dyspepsia Cure quickly cured me. I gained 14 pounds in one month. My friends are astonished at my quick recovery. A wonderful medicine."

Life Guards.

The Life Guards are two regiments of cavalry forming part of the British household troops. They are gallant soldiers, and every loyal British heart is proud of them. Not only the King's household, but yours, ours, everybody's should have its life guards. The need of them is especially great when the greatest foes of life, diseases, find allies in the very elements, as colds, influenza, catarrh, the grip and pneumonia do in the stormy month of March. The best way that we know of to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—the greatest of all life guards. It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to all the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood. Remember the weaker the system the greater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

The Commoner
(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

JUST A TEASPOONFUL of Perry Davis' Painkiller in warm water or milk, taken after exposure to cold or wet, will quicken the circulation and thus prevent a chill. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

An Appeal to Our Friends.

We make a special appeal to our friends who owe us on subscription to send us the amount due. We need the money. The amount each one owes is small, but the aggregate amounts to hundreds of dollars. Our friends must see that it is embarrassing to us to withhold the money. Please look at the label on your paper, and if you are behind, send us the amount due. We will greatly appreciate it.

A. J. HAILE, M. D.

East Atlanta, Ga., March 1st, 1901.

DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: While it has never been my habit or inclination to recommend remedies the ingredients of which are not all known to me it seems as if I should make an exception in the case of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. My experience, so far as I have tested it in my practice, forces me to the conclusion that it is a remedy of the greatest value in all kidney, liver, bladder and other inflammatory condit ons of the genito urinary tract. I now take pleasure in prescribing Swamp-Root in all such cases with a feeling of assurance that my patients will derive great benefit from its use. I shall continue to prescribe it in other cases in my practice with the expectation of good results

Very truly yours,

A. J. Haile M.D.

GENTLEMEN: I have prescribed that wonderful remedy for kidney complaint Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, with most beneficial effect and know of many cures by its use. These patients had kidney trouble as diagnosed by other physicians and treated without benefit. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root effected a cure. I am a liberal man and accept a specific wherever I find it, in an accepted school or out of it. For desperate cases of kidney complaint no ter treatment with unsatisfactory results I turn to Dr Kilmer's Swamp-Root with most flattering results. I shall continue to prescribe it and from personal observation state that Swamp Root has great curative properties. Truly yours,

L. Benton Strick M.D.

276 9th St., Borough of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney, liver and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

We often see a friend, a relative, or an acquaintance apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness, or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble —Bright's Disease.

EDITORIAL NOTE—If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives to the great curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

How He Won Out

The Indianapolis News of recent date tells the following singularly effective story, the truth of which, the News says, is vouched for by Oliver D. Loucks, a well-known millwright of North Indianapolis, as a genuine page out of his autobiography. He is a man who has rescued himself from drink, and his climax of the fight with his appetite is here described:

It was two years ago the seventh day of June coming, my little girl Esther's birthday. I was getting ready to go to my work, when she came into the room where I was.

"I am ten years old to-day, papa," she said.

"Yes, I know it, little girl, and I've got just fifteen cents in my pocket. What will I get you?"

"I don't want you to get me anything, papa."

"Oh," I answered.

"But I want you to promise me something, papa," she said.

"Well, go ahead; let's hear it."

"I want you to promise me you won't drink any more. That will be my birthday present," she said.

"Oh, run along, little girl," I answered, "your mother has been talking to you."

I heard her go outside, and I slipped into the kitchen where my wife was, and asked her why she had been talking to Esther about my drinking. She said she had not, and burst out crying. Then I got a little rattled. I never suspected that my children knew I drank. It is true that I reeled home many a night and that I scarcely ever drew a sober breath, but they were in bed, and by morning I was always over the worst effects of the liquor. I do not know how she learned it; possibly by instinct. But it was a shock to me and unnerved me. I went back into the sitting-room and began to choke up. I tried to clear my throat by swallowing, but couldn't do it. My eyes were filling with tears, although I couldn't cry. I threw myself full length on the lounge and blubbered out a sort of prayer: "Lord, if you'll help me, I'll never touch liquor again." In a little while Esther came running in, saw me and said:

"Papa, you've made up your mind to promise, haven't you? I know it."

"Yes, I have, little girl. I am going to try never to drink again, and, more than that, I am going to put a penny in your bank for every time I refuse a glass."

Do you know that in seven weeks I had two hundred and seventy-seven pennies in that bank? But election time came on, and one morning I found that some one during the night had rolled a keg of beer to my door. "That settles the penny proposition, Esther," I said when I saw it. "I guess there are more glasses in that keg than I have pennies. Children, roll it over there on the commons." They did so, and it remained there a couple of days, but was gone the third morning. My old boon friends have given up trying to get me to break my promise. When I saw that man there in a saloon, last April, one of the men at the bar, to test me, put a $10 gold piece in the bottom of a glass and told the bartender to fill the glass with beer.

"Do you mean it?" he said.

"Of course I do. Go ahead."

He did, and then my friend turned to me, and said: "O! drink the beer and keep the gold."

"Not if you filled my pockets with gold," I answered.

Not long ago my five children were attacked with diphtheria. I lost a sweet little six-year-old girl. Before she died she threw her arms around my neck as I sat at the bed, and said: "Papa, you kept your promise, didn't you?"

Will any sane man tell me I'll ever drink again? — Baptist Standard.

An Unloving Mother.

A family living in the Rocky Mountains owned, a few years ago, two dogs, Queenie and Brownie.

Queenie was not highly moral. On occasions she would appropriate to her own use whatever tempted her. Brownie would stand looking sternly at her and growling in a subdued, but emphatic manner, as though repeating the eighth commandment, to the breaking of which, in dog theology, there seemed to be attached some fearful penalty. Brownie never stole; but Queenie never seemed at all impressed by his superior moral character. And there came a day when she proved herself capable of even deeper moral turpitude.

Queenie became the mother of five fine puppies. Now, it is generally supposed that all mothers in certain groups of the lower animals will fight, sacrifice, and, if necessary, die for their young. But, alas! poor depraved Queenie seemed determined to be the exception.

Whenever and wherever the horse belonging to this particular family went, Queenie felt that it was her peculiar right to go. For a time after the puppies came she was prevented from taking these trips by being shut in the barn with them. But one afternoon, after the horse was harnessed, she could nowhere be found, and the horse and its driver started for the neighboring town. When about a mile from home her ladyship suddenly appeared in the road, and managed to make the whole journey.

It transpired later that early in the morning she had visited five different families in the little town, and at each she had left a puppy. It seemed a curious fact, though it may have been merely a coincidence, that in every place selected there were small children. The testimony of each family was about the same—a noise, something like a knocking, was heard at the door, and upon its being opened, the little mother came in with a puppy in her mouth, laid it on the floor, wagged her compliments and departed without the least hesitation.

It is good to think that a remnant of maternal solicitude animated the breast of this unnatural mother, for a wise selection had been made in each case, and the puppies, though forsaken by their mother, were well cared for in their adopted homes. Queenie was never known to visit any of her puppies.—Pets and Animals.

The Story of Banbee.

Banbee was a little heathen girl who had been taught to pray to an idol that was in her house. It was a very dreadful-looking thing, but notwithstanding it was such a fright, little Banbee prayed to it, and gave it food and some of her few little treasures. Often when very hungry the poor little girl would offer all her dinner to the god, thinking it would do her soul good. One day she hurt her hand with a piece of glass, and when the blood flowed she became frightened and ran to the idol, asking it to help her. When her hand grew worse, she laid it on the stiff, wooden fingers of the god, expecting every moment the pain would be gone. But the pain increased, and little Banbee cried out. Still through it all she did not lose faith in the god.

At this time a lady missionary was passing, and hearing some one mourning, she went to the hut where Banbee lived, and there she saw a little child, thin and suffering, sitting close to an ugly idol, begging it stop the pain in her hand. She would hold her little brown hand in the well one, and then lift it close to the great staring eyes, saying words little folks in this country could not understand—for Banbee lived in India—but which meant, "See, see! help poor Banbee." The missionary had medicine with her in a case, for part of her good work was to heal the bodies of the poor heathen, as well as to care for their souls. She went into the hut, and, taking the poor aching hand, said, "Little girl, I am your friend."

Banbee was not afraid, for she had seen "the clean mamma," as they called the missionary, going through the village a number of times. She watched her with interest when she opened a bottle and bathed it and the pain lessened. Banbee listened to the story of Jesus' great love for little children; how he came to earth to save just such little ones as Banbee. And then the lady told the little girl how useless it was to pray to anything made out of wood, which had once been a senseless tree. It was quite a time before she could entirely give up her wooden god, but at last she took Jesus for her best friend.—Exchange.

Why Not Begin Now.

"Mother," a little child once said, "how old must I be before I can be a Christian?"

The wise mother answered: "How old will you have to be before you love me?"

"Why, mother, I always loved you. I do now, and always shall (and she kissed her mother); but you have not told me yet how old I shall have to be."

"How old must you be before you can trust yourself wholly to me and my care?"

"I always did," she answered, and kissed her mother again; "but tell me what to know." And she climbed up into her lap.

The mother asked again: "How old will you have to be before you do what I want you to do?"

Then the child, half guessing what her mother meant, whispered: "I can now, without growing any older."

Then the mother said: "You can be a Christian now, my darling. Love and try to please the One who says, 'Let the little ones come unto Me.'"—Selected.

TURNING-POINTS IN LIFE.

Every now and then, in history or in the history of literature and science, we find some striking instance of turning-points in life. On such ground we see how a scandal about a bracelet, or the prohibition of a banquet, wrought a revolution, and precipitated a dynasty. Look at literary or scientific biography. Think of Crabbe's timorously calling on Burke and inducing him to look at his poetry. I have no doubt but Burke was very busy. But with lightning glance he looked over the lines and satisfied himself that real genius was there. When Crabbe left the statesman, he was a made man. Burke, ever generous and enlightened, had made up his mind to take care of him. Or look at Faraday. He was only a poor bookseller's poor boy, working hard and honestly, but disliking his employment, and inspired with a pure thirst for knowledge. He had managed somehow or other to hear the great chemist, Humphry Davy, at the Royal Institution; and with trembling solicitude he sends him a fair copy of the notes which he has made of his lectures. The result is, that Michael Faraday receives an appointment at the Royal Institution, and lays the foundation of his splendid and beneficent career. Looking back to the past, that was a great moment in the life of Columbus when, resting on a sultry day beneath the fierce Spanish sun, he asked for a drink of cold water at a convent door. The prior entered into conversation with him, and, struck by his appearance, and afterwards by the magnificent simplicity of his ideas, gave him the introductions he so sorely needed; and thus Columbus gave to Castile and Aragon a new world.—Great Thoughts.

All men are alike in their lower nature; it is in their higher characters that they differ.—Bovee.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

MRS. GEORGIE ELIZABETH BEATTY (nee Mays) was born at Sparta, La., Aug. 19, 1864. She was a granddaughter of Hon. B. W. Pearce, at one time Lieutenant-Governor of Louisiana, and Mrs. Annie H. Pearce, a woman eminent for godliness and service of the church. Her parents were Joseph A. Mays and Willie A. Pearce. She was reared in the habits and faith of the Christian, and at sixteen years of age became a member of the Methodist Church. At the age of eighteen she was married to Dr. C. F. Beatty, and, after living at Amite for some years, removed to Crowley, where her husband practiced his profession of dentistry from the year 1891. Mrs. Beatty has been a devoted member of the church during all the years since her early conversion, and her home life reflected the simple and genuine piety of her inward experience. Her chief concern she deemed the care of her home and the training of her children, both of whom are members of the church. She had proved the sanctifying efficiency of sorrow during the past three years, since the death of her youngest child. Her susceptibility to pain was great, and she suffered almost inconsolably in this bereavement, but her faith in a wise and loving Providence did not fail, and her hands were made the more tender in ministry to the suffering through sympathy. Her death followed upon a surgical operation. She displayed Christian fortitude in contemplating the possibility of death, and when it was at hand, clearly professed her faith and assurance that neither life nor death, nor things present, nor things to come, could separate her from the love of God in Christ Jesus the Lord. The pang of parting from her children, husband, mother, and other loved ones, was mitigated by the prospect of being restored to her child who had gone before. The attraction of the future life was not dependant upon this meeting, but consisted in the presence of her Savior. She passed away Jan. 20, 1902, and sleeps in Jesus.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

JAMES A. WILLIAMS was born in Greene county, Ill., April 4, 1844. His rearing was that of a farmer's son, giving him a hardy constitution and a normal mind, whose further development was due to the public schools of the country, producing results that sometimes discredit our present-day theories. After serving three years in the 101st Illinois Infantry, he was discharged at the close of the Civil War, and removed to Nebraska, where, in the neighborhood of Hastings, he farmed from 1871 to 1877, removing thence to Grand Island, and two years later to St. Paul. In March, 1887, he came to Crowley, and occupied a position in the house of W. W. Deason, afterwards filling the office of postmaster under appointment of President Harrison. He died Feb. 7 at his home in Crowley, attended by his family and a sister who had come from a distance to visit him. Mr. Williams was a man of strong individuality and pronounced views. His religious life was intelligent, and he was eminently useful. He was converted and joined the church at the age of twenty-three. He was Methodist from conviction, and broad and catholic in his religious sympathies. Among his most valued friends and associates were members of other denominations. He sought beneath differences of creed and form the underlying unity of the church of God. During his whole connection with the M. E. Church, South, at Crowley, he was a member of the Board of Stewards. He was faithful in his official duties, always present at both the social and more formal meetings of the church, and was tender and earnest in public prayer. His household was ordered according to the Word of God, and his children are devout followers in his steps, and members of the Presbyterian Church, of which his wife also is a member. His end came not without due warning. The sanctifying ministry of the sick-room he had experienced for many weeks, and drew close to the Living One, who was dead and is alive forevermore; not certain that death was near at hand, willing to depart and be with Christ, but desirous to abide in the flesh for the sake of loved ones and the kingdom of God, if such were the will of God. He leaves a vacancy in business and religious circles that will not be easily filled. His religion commanded universal confidence; his judgment was respected; his labors in the church were highly efficient. He will be sorely missed on all sides.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father has called from earth to heaven our sister, Mrs. ALICE DURRIN; therefore, be it

Resolved, 1. That in her death we realize that earth has yielded up one of the gentlest, sweetest spirits that ever dwelt with us; that although the call, "'Tis enough; come up higher," has come to one of our little band, yet we recognize and trustingly cling to the hand that is leading us, one by one, through the darkness of the valley of the shadow of death into the brightness of eternal day, now so fully revealed to her as she stands in the presence of Him in whose service she so delighted.

2. That we tender to the bereaved sons and daughter the assurance that we sorrow with them, and with them rejoice in the thought of meeting in that land where parting is no more, and commend them to our God, who alone can comfort them in this dark hour.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; also to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Christian faith is a grand cathedral, with divinely pictured windows. Standing without, you see no glory, nor can possibly imagine any. Standing within, every ray of light reveals a harmony of unspeakable splendor.—Hawthorne.

Beauty is Health.

Walnut Lake, Ark., June 3, 1900.

I thank you for the benefit I received from your advice and the Wine of Cardui I took in my terrible condition. My life was unpleasant to me at all and I was of no use to anybody. After receiving your advice and medicine I commenced taking it and began immediately to improve. The pains left me and the menses, which came at the correct time, continued three days. I have gained strength and my weight has increased. My husband says the medicine has made me better looking than ever before.

Mrs. LIZZIE MANNELL.

Womanly health means bright eyes, rosy cheeks, clear complexion and elasticity of form. This is the youth unmeasured by years—the beauty of perfect womanhood. Beautiful women are happier and get more out of life than their sisters whose faces indicate suffering. Wine of Cardui made Mrs. Mannell "better looking" and infinitely happier because it cured her of those terrible pains. But she is no exception.

WINE OF CARDUI

is giving thousands of women health, beauty and freedom from the dragging pains which made their lives so miserable. Wan faces, haggard eyes and emaciated forms are the results of suffering. What suffering can compare with the torture of irregular menstruation, leucorrhoea and falling of the womb! Beauty flees quickly before the ravages of such disease. The sharp pains of falling of the womb deepen the crow tracks in the face. Menstrual irregularities rob the eye of its fire and the complexion of its transparency. Leucorrhoea drains the body of its strength, but Wine of Cardui restores the natural beauty, brightens the eye, clears the complexion, rounds out the figure and brings back the vigor of health. Every druggist in this city handles $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

We Have It at Last

For many years we have been trying to get a Bible containing exactly the features which, to our mind, would constitute as nearly as possible especially for the use of preachers and teachers. We have contracted for a large number of a Bible which we believe to be the nearest to a perfect book we have ever seen. It contains the AUTHORIZED VERSION, DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES, SUBJECT INDEX, CONCORDANCE, AND MAPS. The type is long primer, self-pronouncing. It is 6x8½ inches, and only 1 inch thick. Bound in the best levant morocco, divinity circuit (overlapping edges), calf lined to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges. By reason of the large number contracted for we are selling this splendid Bible at only a little more than half its regular price.

Methuen was wounded, three British officers and thirty-eight men were killed, five British officers and seventy-two men were wounded, and one British officer and 200 men are missing. All the British baggage was captured. Four guns were taken. The news of Gen. Methuen's capture cast a gloom upon all England. At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation, and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion, were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life. L. J. ALLDRED,

The Combination Oil Cure for Cancer

Has the endorsement of the highest medical authority in the world. It would seem strange indeed if persons afflicted with cancers and tumors, after knowing the facts, would resort to the dreaded knife and burning plaster, which have hitherto been attended with such fatal results. The fact that in the last eight years over one hundred doctors have put themselves under this mild treatment shows their confidence in the new method of treating those horrible diseases. Persons afflicted will do well to send for free book giving particulars and prices of Oils. Address DR D. M. BYE CO., Box 462, Dallas, Tex.

It builds up the appetite, insures easy, splendid digestion, and never fails to benefit.

Giant Flowering Caladium

Grandest foliage and flowering plant yet introduced. Leaves 3 to 5 feet long by 2 or 2½ feet broad; perfectly hardy, and makes a plant which for tropical luxuriance has no equal. Added to this wonderful foliage effect are the mammoth lily-like blossoms, 12 to 15 inches long, snow-white, with a rich and exquisite fragrance. Plants bloom perpetually all summer in the garden, or all the year round in pots. Not only is it the grandest garden or lawn plant, but as a pot plant for large windows, verandas, halls, or conservatories, it rivals the choicest palms in foliage, to say nothing of its magnificent flowers. Thrives in any soil or situation, and grows and blooms all the year, and will astonish every one with its magnificence—so novel, effective, free growing and fragrant.

Fine plants, which will soon bloom and reach full perfection, 25c. each; 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00 by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition.

OUR GREAT CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare New Fruits; profusely illustrated; Large Colored Plates; 128 pages; FREE to any who expect to order. Many great novelties.

YOU CAN SCRATCH

Out the blot which defiles the clean, white page of a ledger, but you can't scratch out the poisons that defile the blood. It seems rather that you scratch them in, and the irritation grows worse with each new attempt to relieve it. There is only one thing to do in such a case, and that is to entirely cleanse the blood from the infecting poison.

People who have suffered from diseases caused by impure blood, or blood poisoning, have found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery a certain and enduring cure. Lotions and liniments may alleviate, but they cannot cure. The disease is in the blood, and the cure must be in the blood also. "Golden Medical Discovery" eradicates from the blood the impurities and poisons which breed and feed disease. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure, rich blood, which, nourishing each organ, builds up the whole body in health and strength.

The cures effected by "Golden Medical Discovery" are positive and permanent. In many cases of disease, such as eczema, tetter, pimples, eruptions and rheumatism, an effectual cure has been found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, after all other medicines and means had failed to help or heal.

Sometimes a dealer tempted by the larger profits paid by less meritorious medicines will offer the customer a substitute in place of "Golden Medical Discovery" claiming that he knows it to be "just as good." There is nothing gained by trading one thing for another which is only "just as good." There is everything to risk in trading the "Discovery" with a world's record of cures for a substitute with nothing but the unsupported claim of an interested dealer behind it. If you are sick you want to be cured. That's why you want "Golden Medical Discovery" and nothing else.

There is no alcohol in the "Discovery," and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

SUFFERED HORRORS.

William Flocter, Esq., of Redoak, Montgomery Co., Iowa, writes: "I consider your 'Golden Medical Discovery' one of the best medicines on the face of the earth. While in the south-west, three years ago, I got poisoned with poison ivy. The poison settled in my blood and the horrors I suffered cannot be told in words. I thought I would go crazy. I could do nothing but scratch. I would go to sleep scratching, would wake up in the morning and find myself scratching. I scratched for eight months. Had it not been for 'Golden Medical Discovery' I would be scratching yet. I tried different kinds of medicine, tried different doctors, but all the relief they could give me was to make my pocket-book lighter.

"I then began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Took four bottles without any relief. Kept on taking it. I took in all ten bottles and I got entirely cured. I can say that if people would take your medicine instead of fooling with some of the quacks that infest the small and larger towns, disease would flee like chaff before the wind."

NO BENEFIT FROM DOCTORS.

"For about one year and a half my face was very badly broken out," writes Miss Carrie Adams, of 116 West Main Street, Battlecreek, Michigan. "I spent a great deal of money with doctors and for different kinds of medicine, but received no benefit. At last I read one of your advertisements in a paper, and obtained a bottle of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Before I had taken one bottle of this medicine I noticed a change, and after taking three bottles I was entirely cured. I can well recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to any one similarly afflicted."

FREE. On receipt of stamps to defray expense on mailing only, we will send Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 pages. This book will prove a constant friend and wise counselor to every man and woman. It deals with the great and grave questions of human origin and reproduction in plain English. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Glances at the World.

The bill before Congress to appropriate a large sum of money for the benefit of ship owners, fathered by Senator Hanna, seems unlikely to pass on its merits. It has been before Congress several years, and has met strong opposition. Now it is said that an alliance has been formed with the advocates of other schemes, and by this means it is hoped to secure the passage of the subsidy bill during the present session. A special to the Times-Democrat from Washington says it is understood that the ship subsidy bill people, the river and harbor people, and the irrigationists, have drifted together into what may be called a sympathetic alliance, and that each group counts on a certain amount of support from the other two groups. The alliance seems to be in full force to-day, and the outlook for the three measures does not appear to have changed materially since the time when it was predicted that the river and harbor bill and the ship subsidy bill would get through Congress, and that the irrigation bill had almost as good a chance as the other two.

[Since the above was put in type the ship subsidy bill, in an amended form, has passed the Senate.]

Woman suffrage has received a set-back, especially in Kentucky. A State law, not of long standing, extended to women the privilege of voting in elections for school directors. The franchise thus granted was duly exercised in one of the smaller cities of the State a few weeks ago. It so happened that the colored women attended the polls, and in numbers sufficient to control the election. The presumption is, that all of them voted the same ticket. This presented a new phase of the subject. It, perhaps, never occurred to the "leading citizens" that colored women would sufficiently interest themselves as to collect their forces and rout their opponents. But they did, and now their ambition in that line has proved their undoing, for the Legislature has repealed the law under which they exercised their rights, and the governor has signed the bill. There was danger ahead, and the only way to avert it was to change the law.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean is authority for saying that Miss Roosevelt has wisely declined going to London to witness King Edward's coronation, and the invitation to visit Emperor William at Berlin. The reason assigned by the Inter-Ocean seems satisfactory. In our country the President's family, though occupying the highest social position, has no official standing. The members are only private persons. This matter is not so clear to the European mind, and "no matter how great her desire and her effort to be treated merely as an American woman, Miss Roosevelt would not have been so received in London or Berlin." More or less official distinction would be accorded her, and this would not have been perfectly agreeable to Americans. A visit to these two countries would have been construed as an act of special friendliness of this government, and that would have excited suspicion among other people. It is wise to avoid anything adapted to arouse such feeling. What a pity the President's daughter can not visit like other young people!

The first direct and open attempt to recognize the Roman Catholic Church by legislation in this country, as far as we know, has been made by the Legislature of Ohio. In a proposition to enact a new law in regard to the chaplaincy of the Ohio State Penitentiary, the following clause was added, "A Roman Catholic chaplain approved by the Bishops of the Columbus diocese, at a salary of fifty dollars per month." This bill was sustained and passed in the Senate by a vote of 23 to 3. That is the boldest piece of sectarian legislation ever enacted by any State of the Union. It is not only in opposition to the sentiment of the people, but of the Constitution of the State, which forbids giving any preference by law to any religious society. The old law requires the chaplain to be selected for his "fitness and qualifications." This is too general, inasmuch as it allows the selection of a Protestant. The proposed law is to meet the demands of the Roman Catholics. Such a law enacted would be but the entering wedge to something else—the partition of school funds for sectarian uses, and granting Roman Catholic priests the privilege of instructing children in the public schools. Surely the people of Ohio will not tolerate such legislation!

The problem of city government is yet unsolved. Indeed, it seems to grow more complex as the days go by. This is mainly so because there is a disposition to throw open wider and wider the doors to those who do not wish to obey wholesome laws. If officers were thoroughly disposed to enforce statutes against evil-doers, the disposition to ask for more and more liberty would cease at once. But because there is a disposition to disobey, partially sanctioned by citizens, who, though not technically held as evil-doers, are, nevertheless, partners in the crime, there are those clamoring for such reform as will not hold either party guilty of violation of law. This is the case to day in New York, where saloon keepers, the mayor and the District Attorney, backed by several clergymen, are working to so change the law regulating saloons as to allow them to be opened a few hours on Sunday. In other words, there is a disposition to break God's law in order that the law of man may go unbroken. This is reform of the twentieth century!

The war in South Africa between the British and Boers has been renewed with vigor, and excited fresh interest, especially in our country. In two severe engagements recently the Boers gained great victories over the English. This has inspired fresh courage in the Boer patriots and among their friends. At the same time it has aroused the British to make a more determined fight. More men will be put into the field. It is costing the English a vast amount of money—more than the country will be worth to them for many years to come. But having gone so far, and spent so much, they can not afford to give up and lose all. The Boers, of course, flushed with victory, will fight with renewed energy, and, perhaps, gather more troops. The only result, however, will be to prolong the struggle, and sacrifice more men and means. However much the Boers deserve success, they are fighting a losing battle. England, with her millions of money and means, is bound to succeed.

REV. DR. J. W. HARMON.

(The remains of Dr. Harmon were taken to Jackson, Miss., for burial. In the First Methodist Church, on Wednesday morning, the funeral service was held, at which the following address, in substance, was delivered by Bishop Charles B. Galloway.)

The honored and venerable man whom we bury this day had reached the ripe old age of eighty-two years. For more than fifty years he had been a faithful and able minister of the gospel, in which work he found constant and increasing delight. To him preaching was a high calling—higher than any earthly station, grander than any position unto which human ambition and genius could possibly attain.

The life of this gifted and ascended saint was identified with the States of Mississippi and Louisiana during the most eventful years of their history. He knew most of their public men, and in every section of that territory his eloquent voice was often heard. His career was crowded with incidents, many of them intensely interesting, and some of them have become historic. But of the thrilling and edifying facts in his checkered life I shall not attempt to speak this morning. My purpose is only to recall a few distinguishing traits of his attractive character, and hold them up for our emulation and inspiration.

No doubt that feature of Dr. Harmon's character which will most readily occur to his every friend was his buoyant, almost boyish, hopefulness. He was an ardent optimist, both by nature and Methodist grace. The very flash of his brilliant eye was like the fire of immortal youth, and the tones of his voice had the jubilant ring of a joyous childhood. To him every cloud had a silver lining, and behind every frowning providence he saw a smiling face. Nobody ever heard him talk in doleful tones, or sing in a minor key. Life's burdens were not always light, nor were its skies always bright, but his faith so constantly reveled in happier and more radiant to-morrows that he positively forgot the burdens and clouds of to-day. Nor was this a thoughtless and illogical optimism—a hopefulness born of carelessness. It came partly from his joyous, amiable disposition, but mostly from his unclouded faith in a God mighty to save. His hopes were not inspired by a "stream of tendency," but by a personal God, with infinite love in his heart and omnipotence in his strong arm.

What an inspiration is such a happy, hopeful spirit! How he shames away our gloom and unfaith, and puts within us the quickened pulse-beat of a larger spiritual life! With an almost prodigal hand that happy man has scattered flowers along the way of life. He literally broadcasted the fields with seeds and deeds of kindness. The memory of that precious life will itself be a flower of fadeless bloom.

Dr. Harmon was a gentle, generous spirit, who loved and honored his fellow-men. His heart was made for friendship. In it there were no hiding-places for sinister motives and evil imaginings. He was singularly free from suspicion, and seemed to be a stranger to resentment. I am sure he never harbored a revenge, or carried a grudge, or nursed a grievance. Without animosities, he had no enemies. Innocent of envyings and jealousies, he never imagined that some one stood in his way, or occupied a place to which he was entitled. He had sacred aspirations, but no sordid ambitions.

And how kindly was his speech! Harsh criticism did not dwell upon his gracious lips. Bitter words had small place in his vocabulary, and he never deceived himself with the fact that assault on personal character is often the evidence of coarseness rather than of courage. He never sought for ulterior motives, and, therefore, never berated or betrayed his brethren by misinterpreting them. O noble, knightly spirit! what a charm thou hast given to the comradeship of the Christian ministry! He loved his brethren, and rejoiced in all their achievements for our common Lord.

Dr. Harmon was an able and eloquent preacher. In the days of his full strength he was, at times, a real master of assemblies. To the natural gifts of an orator he added the graces of considerable culture and the flaming zeal of a true evangelist. Some of his sermons on special occasions yet linger in the memory of his surviving hearers, and the scenes connected therewith are the traditions of the past forty years. He was a resident of Brandon, Miss., in 1870, when Gen. Robert E. Lee died, and was invited to deliver a memorial address in honor of the great hero. For majestic speech and masterful eloquence, it is yet doubted if in all the Southland any tribute that day surpassed the one that enraptured the splendid audience in that Mississippi town. I have heard him on occasions when he was remarkably eloquent. The pulpit was his throne, and, as was eminently right, he genuinely loved to occupy it. He never considered it a hardship, but a joy and a privilege to declare his Lord's message. And when the time came for him to retire from active pastoral service, he gracefully accepted the judgment of the Conference, but went on preaching in every pulpit to which he was invited. Just two weeks before the final summons came he was preaching in Meridian with much of his old-time force and fire. He almost ceased at once to work and live.

Dr. Harmon was a fearless and powerful advocate of temperance reform. Much of his early, active life was devoted to this great cause. He was its courageous champion when its friends were few, and its enemies were more imperious and tyrannous than now. By trenchant pen and eloquent tongue he portrayed the horrors of intemperance and the crimes of the accursed liquor traffic, and won back to a life of virtue and sobriety many a noble young man in the Southwest. For the better moral sentiment on that subject which obtains to-day, and for any measures of reform that have been secured, honor must never be withheld from the name and apostolic labors of John W. Harmon.

But time will not suffice for a full heart's tribute to our honored father in Israel. Gentle, guileless, gracious gentleman he was, on whose tongue dwelt the law of kindness, and in whose heart was the devotion of a prophet.

It was a beautiful coincidence that just at the moment of his triumphant ascension on Sunday last—a quarter to twelve o'clock—two of his sons were in the pulpit preaching the gospel of their father's God to waiting congregations. Upon all the sons and their sister I invoke the benedictions of our loving Lord to-day. By the side of their beautiful and blessed mother we will lay the noble father, in sure and certain hope of the resurrection of the just.

A SUGGESTION.

BY REV. H. C. EDMONDSON.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: May I venture an humble suggestion? I am earnestly engaged in soliciting subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, because it will not only be a blessing to every home it enters, but also greatly assist the preacher in charge in bringing about a revival of religion, and presenting to the next Annual Conference an overflowing financial chalice. This "can" be done, and, by the grace of God, "must" be done on the Chester circuit this year. The people cry, "Hard times," "Two successive failures in crops," clinch their teeth and tighten their purse-strings. But, after all, it is a remarkable fact, so far as my knowledge goes, that not a home in all the State of Mississippi is without the necessaries of life, while Arkansas, with all of her resources and wealth, is right now, through her governor, forced to fly to the rescue of her suffering people. Mississippi is rich in Christian manhood and womanhood, lands and forests, churches and colleges, all of which have been abundantly and continually blessed of God, and in their turn have honored God, yet not as much as was possible; and I do believe if the church fails in her obligation to the heathen, we will have another crop failure, or something possibly worse.

But to the point. The suggestion in mind is a symposium from our foreign fields by men like Drs. Allen, Parker and Mosley, showing what the church in the various fields has done, is doing, and proposes to do; a published sermon from Bishop Galloway or Candler on missions, and last, but not least, an editorial on individual responsibility in the matter.

Hope you will not consider this impertinent. If, however, for such a reason it should wake up in the waste-basket, I will retaliate in the style of Bro. Newsom by sending you something that will wake up in the editor's pocket.

Chester, Miss.

THE SUMMER NORMAL.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE: Rev. T. L. Mellen, in his communication in your issue of Feb. 27, concerning the Summer Normal proposed to be held for the undergraduates of our Conference, makes this statement: "The undergraduates of the Mississippi Conference are requested to prepare their studies, and be ready for their examinations. Those passing at the Normal in June will not have to be examined at the session of the Conference."

This is an error. I was present at two or three informal meetings of members of the several Examining Committees at the last Conference, when the subject was discussed. At no time was there a representative meeting of all the members of the several committees, nor was any action taken that would in any way bind them individually or collectively. It was proposed by some one that an examination at the Summer Normal should supersede the one at the next Annual Conference. To this many objected, the writer among the number. The design and scope of the four years' Course of Study is calculated to employ all the time that the average young man can spare from his pastoral work during the year. Unless he is phenomenally endowed like a Gladstone, it is simply an impossibility for him to railroad through the course in six months' time. Some try to do this, and are surprised and hurt because they fail.

The time has passed, we trust forever, in the history of Methodism when committeemen, forgetful of their fiduciary relation to the Conference, think they have the authority to issue free passes complimentary to the undergraduates, whom it is their duty to discover, if they have a reasonable knowledge of the books required of them.

Because Brother A. is deficient in educational qualifications, or has a large family, or is in feeble health, or is a powerful camp-meeting exhorter and an indifferent student, therefore, he must be "passed," even though he shows lamentable ignorance of the very elementary principles of the books he is presumed to have studied; but the young man who is so unfortunate as to have a college education, and applies himself diligently, must be rigidly held up to the standard.

When the General Conference, in its wisdom, provides for such exceptions, examiners can make due allowance, and they can not conscientiously do so until then.

The very idea is preposterous that after a three days' coaching at a Summer Normal the classes should be let off with a parrot-like recital of what they have just heard. The fundamental idea of such a normal is to show them how to study. They are supposed to have read over the course by that time, so that they can intelligently follow the lectures that explain points of unusual difficulty. Now let them return home and give mature study to what they have heard, and the result will be fewer failures in the final examination, better equipment for the work of the ministry, and less foolish, unchristian criticism of examiners who are trying to perform the thankless and unpleasant duty assigned them by the Conference. Committeemen are presumed to exercise common sense, to consider, as far as possible, the circumstances of each case, and not to require the same exacting and technical knowledge of the books as would be required by a theological seminary. Fraternally,

C. F. EMERY,
Member of Committee for Fourth Year.

2. That all moneys be sent immediately to the treasurer of each Conference—Rev. J. C. Park, Winona; Major R. W. Millsaps, Jackson.

3. That the presiding elders help the pastors. J. R. BINGHAM.

THE BAPTISMS AT AENON.

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

"And John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there, and they came and were baptized." (John iii, 23.)

Outside of instances "merely local or circumstantial," there are absolutely no arguments in the Scriptures favoring immersion. As Dr. Godbey says, "It is an indisputable fact that the only arguments for immersion are the heathen literature, the dark-age practice of a fallen, idolatrous church, and a false interpretation of Romans vi."

Immersionists also quote the "much water" of John iii, 23, and they speak as if there were water enough at Aenon to float all the navies of the world. But as Dr. Summers quaintly says, "they must go to some other churchyard for a 'liquid grave.'" Yet they claim that the reason John went to Aenon, or sought the "much water," was for immersion; and the fact of the inspired writer mentioning the "much water" is a perfect demonstration (to them) that he immersed his candidates. They also say that if John had "sprinkled" his subjects, it would have been unnecessary for the inspired writer to mention such a quantity, as a smaller amount would have answered for affusion, etc. It is wonderful how they gull or "take in" the ignorant and unthoughtful at this point.

But attention is respectfully called that there was not a body of water at Aenon large enough to float a "dug-out," much less a steamboat. The truth is, travelers have earnestly sought those "cosmopolitan" lakes Baptists so often preach about at Aenon near Salim, and all that have been found are a few "springs," or "fountains," just large enough to accommodate a man and his beast for drinking purposes, etc. Indeed, the Greek word "Ainon," represented by "Aenon," means simply "springs," as any scholar will tell you, or any Bible dictionary show. Aenon derived its name from the "springs," just as many places to-day take their name from local surroundings. It is a place about fifteen miles west of the Jordan, and is placed by Eusebius at a distance of fifty-three miles northeast of Jerusalem. Any good map will show the place.

Those Baptist "cosmopolitan" ponds that the reader has heard so much about, at Aenon, have been scattered into the tiniest streamlets by a better translation from the original Greek. The phrase, "hudata polla," translated "much water" by the Authorized Version, is in the plural, scholars say, and should have been translated, as elsewhere in the Bible, "many waters," conveying the same idea that Aenon conveys, viz.: "springs."

The reader can find the same phrase at Rev. i, 15, where it is correctly translated, "And his voice is as the sound of many waters." Would there be any musical idea, or any kind of idea, conveyed by saying, "His voice is as the sound of 'much water'"?

Let the reader refer to the following places, and he will find "hudata polla" translated "many waters," viz.: Rev. xix, 6; Psa. xviii, 16; Psa. xciii, 4; Jer. li, 13, etc. "Much water" conveys the idea of stillness and stagnation; just the opposite reason why John went to Aenon. If John had been seeking "much water" for immersion, he never would have left the Jordan.

The Scriptures assign two reasons why John left the Jordan for Aenon. Let the reader remember that he baptized at two other places before baptizing at Aenon. He first baptized "beyond Jordan" (John x, 40), the multitudes not yet having gathered; but when the news of his work attracted more general attention, he repaired to the Jordan, for the "running water," as the law required, and for the accommodation of the multitudes. Under his ministry, which was in fields, and which drew the masses, it took just as much water for sprinkling as if his mode had been by immersion. Why he finally went to Aenon is aptly answered by Dr. Watson: "It is plain from the narrative that the number of converts for John's baptism had greatly fallen off at this time, and that the people now generally flocked to Christ. Hence the remark (verse 30) where his disciples had informed him that Jesus was baptizing in the neighborhood (wonder if those cosmopolitan ponds were so wide), and that 'all men came to him.' 'He must increase, but I must decrease.' Hence the observation of the evangelist, 'The Pharisees had been told that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John.'"

The context thus shows one reason why John changed places was because the crowds had left him. The other reason is in the text. Immersionists are too near-sighted to look just so deep, but its even on the surface, and is the one idea of the text, viz.: the quality or kind of water, rather than the quantity.

He went to Aenon because there were "many waters" there—i. e., many springs, thus fulfilling the ancient law of the Jews that their purifications should be with "running" or "living water." (See Num. xix, 7; Lev. xiv, 50–52, margin.) While at Aenon he baptized by the usual mode, viz.: sprinkling.

REV. J. P. DRAKE.

BY REV. B. F. JONES.

Rev. James Perry Drake is no more, for God has taken him. He passed to his heavenly reward in the early morning of Jan. 19, 1902. His trouble was gastritis, which had such a firm hold upon him that it baffled the skill of his physicians, and resisted the careful and affectionate ministrations of watchful loved ones. His illness was long and painful, but his trust in God was unshaken. He said, "My heart and my flesh faileth, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever." With his entire family around him—save one daughter, who was far away at school—in the quiet of that early beautiful Sabbath morning his spirit laid off its mortal load and entered into the rest of an eternal Sabbath. By this removal from our midst the Mississippi Conference has lost one of its purest and most valuable members, whose form and features shall be missed in its annual convocations, but whose benign influence and Christly example will abide through the coming years.

Brother Drake was born in Jefferson county, Miss., not far from Natchez, Aug. 4, 1847. He came of an honorable parentage. His father, the late Rev. B. M. Drake, D. D., was of the family of Drakes of Robson county, N. C., who have an unbroken genealogy from the younger brother and adopted heir of Sir Francis Drake. His mother was the daughter of Capt. James Truman Magruder, who came to Mississippi from Maryland more than a century ago, and who was a descendant of "Rob Roy" McGregor, of Scottish fame. Both parents were leading spirits in the early Methodism of Mississippi, and were noted for their eminent piety, intelligeace, and force of character. To this cultured and pious couple twelve children were born. Among the seven who lived to be grown was James Perry. With such a parentage it is not surprising that he gave himself early in life to the service of the church under whose influence and doctrine he had been reared.

His early education was received at a private school, where he was prepared for the college Sophomore class. He possessed fine mental qualities; a quick, grasping, and discriminating intellect. After the Civil War he taught for a while in Baton Rouge; then in Greenville, Port Gibson, and Natchez, respectively. While teaching he prepared himself for the profession of law, but did not practice a very great while. As a layman, he was actively engaged in Christian work, filling the office of steward and Sunday-school superintendent in Natchez and Vidalia.

In September, 1873, he was married to Miss Clara B. Wailes, of Woodville, Miss. After twenty-eight years of happy wedded life she, with six of the nine children that brightened their home, is left to walk life's weary ways without him.

When God called him from a profitable secular life to the gospel ministry, he cheerfully obeyed. "Speak, Lord; thy servant heareth," was the language of his heart. At the session of the Mississippi Conference, held at Natchez in December, 1876, he was received into the traveling connection on trial. His first appointment was Kingston, where he spent two years; thence to Woodville, two years; thence to Bolton, two years; thence to Fayette, four years; thence to Moss Point, two years; thence to Shubuta, four years; thence to Edwards, four years; thence to Bay St. Louis, three years, and thence to Summit, where he had just been appointed for the third time, and where he laid down his implements of warfare for his crown of reward. In all of these appointments he labored with a zeal and energy, a consecration and loyalty, a trueness and devotion to duty that was heroic. He impressed his character and work on the people he served, and many are the souls that will rise up and call him blessed.

He was a gospel preacher, strong, clear, logical, convincing, and often gave expression to brilliant conceptions of the divine truth. He was thoroughly acquainted with the theology of his church; he "knew of the doctrine;" consequently, he was edifying and instructive in his exposition of the Scripture. His preaching was reinforced by a consistent life. He lived the gospel he loved so well to preach. He was "an epistle known and read of all men," and the people "took knowledge of him that he had been with Jesus." To elevate and strengthen the spiritual life of his parishioners was one of the chief objects of his preaching. He declared the whole counsel of God as revealed to him, "warning every man and teaching every man in all wisdom," that he might "present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." He was truly a preacher of righteousness, and he as truly lived the life of the righteous; hence, by the twofold influence of preaching and living, he was enabled to leave every charge he served with nobler and purer ideals of Christianity.

He was a devoted pastor. In his pastoral work no personal sacrifice was too great for him to make. He was scrupulously conscientious in the discharge of duty, and as long as he had strength, and even beyond, he labored. He went with a cheerful heart and kind word among the rich and the poor, the sick and the well, the learned and the ignorant, the happy and the unhappy, carrying to all alike a message of love and the consolation of Christ. It was his especial delight to visit the poor, the sick, and the bereaved, and, like his Divine Master, his heart was full of tender compassion for the needy. He shared the sorrows of his flock and delighted in their joys.

His work as a pastor was pre-eminently constructive, both in a spiritual and material way. Almost every charge he served bears testimony to his industry in some excellent improvement on building or grounds. Conspicuous among the many marks of improvement that follow him are a commodious new parsonage at Summit, and a beautiful church, completely finished and furnished, at Cold Springs, on the Summit charge. Besides, by his own efforts he secured the first thousand dollars for the handsome new church at Gulf Port.

He was loyal to his church. He received his appointments as from the Lord, and endeavored to fill them in the spirit of Christ. He was not a place seeker. Self, and self-aggrandizement, were subordinated to the higher ideal of a true and unselfish service to the church. To take part in some way in the upbuilding of the kingdom of God was his highest aspiration.

Brother Drake was pure in mind and prudent in speech. He was free from malice, and never indulged a vindictive spirit. His was a noble, generous nature; a gentle, fraternal spirit. He was transparent. There were no hidden, jagged spurs about his well-rounded character. He possessed that smoothness and gentleness of spirit which gave a charm and potency to his life, and breathed the fragrance of a soul in harmony with Christ. The equipoise of his well-balanced character was not easily disturbed.

He held the unqualified and abiding confidence and esteem of his brethren in the ministry. No man in our Conference was more loved than he. He possessed that charity which "suffereth long and is kind," which "envieth not," which "vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up," which "Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil."

He was the very soul of honor and chivalry. These virtues which shone with such resplendence in the galaxy of virtues which adorned his life were manifest on all occasions, but were unostentatiously worn.

But it was in the home that he was best known and most loved. His home was the dearest place on earth, and its inmates were the objects of his tenderest affection. Love was the underlying and governing principle there. His devotion to his children was strong and impartial. His chivalrous attention to his wife, who had stood so bravely by his side in shadows and in sunshine, is worthy of all imitation.

The light of his life revealed to the world about him that he had an intelligent conception of God, an exalted spiritual grasp of Christ, and a lofty purpose of self-denying fidelity to his high calling.

THE "WHISKY BILL."

BY MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.

The friends of the measure with the above title hope much in it for the relief of the State from the open saloon. It was passed by the recent Legislature, and applies only to "wet" counties, providing that no license shall be issued for a saloon in any town except such as has a population of five hundred, or over, and which is under police protection day and night.

According to official records, the situation in the "wet" counties seems to be as follows: Thirteen counties now license saloons. In Marshall, Madison, Adams, Wilkinson, Hancock, the sale for some time has been confined to one town of 500, or more, inhabitants, viz.: Holly Springs, Canton, Natchez, Woodville, Bay St. Louis. Harrison and Jackson counties are "dry" except in the towns immediately on the Gulf—Scranton, Moss Point, Biloxi, Handsboro, Mississippi City, Pass Christian, Gulfport. All of the above-named places exceed the required population; consequently, the present situation will not alter under the new law in these seven counties. It should close the three saloons now in Quitman county. Tunica's nineteen and Issaquena's ten licensed dram-shops should be reduced in numbers, and they will, doubtless, centralize at Tunica and Mayersville—the only town which can meet the requirement of population. Washington county has forty-two licensed places, three of them authorized for the jug trade. Several towns, by their census, will share with Greenville the privilege of the open saloon. Warren county has forty-six licensed liquor-houses, six of these selling in quantities greater than one gallon—in other words, shipping jugs. Fifteen retail saloons scattered over the county ought to close, but Vicksburg can still run her thirty-one dens of degradation, anarchy and crime, and no one shall dispute their right, or make them afraid. Jefferson's eight saloons should now be reduced to the four in Rodney and Fayette: but it will be interesting to stand aside and watch Harriston grow, like Jonah's gourd, in a night, from 300 to 500 inhabitants, in order to retain its two saloons. Sudden growth will be the new symptom developed by many places made invalid by the new law.

To sum up: The only counties in which the present situation will change are Tunica, Quitman, Washington, Issaquena, Warren, Jefferson; Quitman, and possibly Tunica, becoming "dry." There are now 189 licensed saloons in the State; 16 of them licensed for the jug trade. It is improbable that the new law will close more than fifty retail places. All of the wholesale houses or jug distributors are in the larger towns, and will not be affected.

Prohibitionists will rejoice in the smallest gain over the saloon. But we do not see why the State at large should congratulate itself upon improved conditions respecting the liquor traffic. There will be no less liquor sold, only a transfer of the place of sale from a few villages to many towns; the jug-trade will pour its deadly flood undiminished into "dry" counties. The one hundred and forty saloons that will continue to do business "at the old stand" will be practically the only gainers, for they will do the trade now distributed among 189. The liquor men in the Legislature said the new law was a compromise with them—the local press of Jackson so reported it. The more one analyses the situation the more correct their verdict seems.

Within a few days the following incident has saddened the writer, for she knows the persons referred to. Far from the railways a little town nestles between the hills of a "dry" county; its Christian people are as progressive as any in the State. A refined mother was there giving her whole life to the rearing of two sons—one a bright lad in his early teens; the other a little fellow lagging always lovingly, admiringly in the footsteps of the "big brother." From some unknown source the elder became a victim of the drink habit, and recently, in one of his frequent sprees, he gave the little brother some of the liquor with which he was degrading himself. The beautiful child was placed unconscious in his mother's arms, from which he was taken only to be laid in his quiet grave. A few doors off, in a sweet Christian home, another fine lad is growing up under the loving care of a most superior mother. To-day that mother's heart is breaking over the dissipation of that boy, and she is frantically pleading to fly to any place where he may be safe from temptation.

This is the record of only two homes in one town of a county that has freed itself from the legal liquor traffic. But one town of "500, or more, inhabitants"—Canton, which the law protects in its six saloons—supplies it with blind-tigers and jugs, and homes are wrecked, and hearts broken, and lives degraded, and tragedies worse than death enacts are the consequences. Who shall dare to write the complete annals of the 140 saloons in all the towns of "500, or more, inhabitants" which the law permits still to pour out their deadly flood by the vote of a few "friends of temperance"?

A SCENE.

I wish I had the pen of a ready writer, that I might graphically describe a pleasing and touching scene which occurred in one of the Methodist Churches not long since. A few Sundays previous a visiting brother had made a powerful appeal to sinners to join the church, which had been responded to by five little girls from the Orphans' Home.

On the occasion of which I write, after services the minister begged the leniency of the congregation, while he received these little ones into the fold. Then he called them by name to the chancel rail, where kind hands bared their heads and made them ready to receive baptism. Then the minister requested his stewards—seven brave men and true—to stand beside him inside the chancel. After these candidates had been properly instructed, wisely admonished and catechised according to discipline, they were accepted as full members by the sprinkling of water and the laying on of hands. The minister then called into use a custom of our fathers which has of late years been more conspicuous in the breach than in the observance—the giving of the right hand of fellowship.

I have witnessed the ceremony of confirmation of candidates in the Roman Catholic Church, attended with all its pomp and pageantry of lighted tapers, tinkling bells and bowing acolytes, but infinitely more impressive, and far more touching to the heart, was the scene of the man of God, sustained on each side by his church officials, whose presence he had claimed both to awaken their interest in these fatherless waifs as well as to let the children understand the power of the church to help them in time of need. Then the members of the church, both men and women, passed, as it were, in review before them, and, gazing into the kindly visages and tear-dimmed eyes, they could read the tender pity there. Many were the gentle caresses and loving words, especially of their Sunday-school teacher, and all hearts were touched and tendered by the scene, and all felt that truly "of such is the kingdom of heaven." I have never witnessed anything more touching in a Methodist Church. *

SOME EXPERIENCES OF A SUPERANNUATE.

Mr. Editor: I would like to give for the Advocate something of the experience of an old preacher, and, I think, peculiar to myself. I went to the last Conference financially embarrassed, as I had gone up from time to time before, but with this addition: that I must be a superannuate, with an income from the Conference fund of seventy-five or one hundred dollars to provide board, clothing and washing for self and wife. I have made no money in the ministry. Indeed, I have spent more than I have ever received. While I felt to press my claim for an appointment, I knew in reason it would be one of the poorest, if I got any at all. Perhaps I went a little beyond propriety in this, but I tried to select among some clever people a home where I might spend the remainder of my days in doing good in a small way, but was made to hear from more than one place, "We have as many preachers as we are able to support." Hence my persistence to secure a charge and a temporary home. I left Conference certain that I was not wanted for any work. A few days after getting to my temporary stopping-place I received a communication from, as I thought, an entirely reliable source, informing me that I was to supply Fearn Spring. I at once presumed to take charge, and began to fill the appointments as they stood the year before. I had not made a round when a communication reached me from the presiding elder, informing me that I was not in charge; that he had employed another man to supply the work. I at once called in my appointments and retired. Then, again, in a few days I received another note authorizing me to take charge, and to go forward with the work, which, for some weeks, I have been doing, reminded of the expression of an old lady, who said she had been trying to get to heaven, "off and on, for thirty years." Off and on I have been in charge of Fearn Spring for three months, receiving less than nine dollars to feed wife and horse. J. D. N.

A REPLY TO "A. J."

Under the caption of "Some Searching Questions," some one signing himself "A. J." has asked some questions on tobacco using by preachers. First, he wants to know whether it is right to assess churches extra to pay pastors' tobacco bill. No. Nor did I ever hear of such a thing being done. Our charges are assessed to meet the needs of the preacher, and I capitally doubt whether a charge has any more right to say what the preacher shall spend his money for than the preacher has to say what his people shall spend their money for. Question two: No. As to Question three, while we recognize God's presence everywhere, I rather think that if he was to suddenly appear, there would be a great number of things to be ashamed of as well as the use of tobacco.

Here "A. J." ceases to number his questions, but asks several more, and of a class that we hear every day. As to shunning the appearances of evil, I believe I can safely say that I have known as holy men who used tobacco as I have ever known who did not. As to helping others with the money spent for tobacco, my observation is, that the men who use tobacco give as much for charitable and benevolent causes as those who do not. Thirteen years ago I quit chewing tobacco. I have saved a great deal of money since then; but where is the money? But now, in all candor, I would be glad if none of our preachers used the weed. But as they do, searching questions along the line of "A. J's" thoughts will accomplish no more now than they have before.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the niece of Frank Fay, 106 N. St., South Boston, Mass., who writes that she had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for six years: had been without appetite and had been troubled with sour stomach and headache. She had tried many other medicines in vain. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made her well.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

Decision Day and Children's Day.

BY MRS. EMMA SIEBE.

I have been intending writing you in regard to the matter of choosing a Decision Day, as you requested Sunday-school workers to do in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE. I am of the opinion that Children's Day, which has been adopted by all schools of any importance, would be a very suitable time. Not that any one date could be selected, as the schools on our circuits necessarily are held on different Sabbaths as the pastor goes on his rounds, but on that day which is given to the exercises for the children.

I hope it will soon pass into a custom in our church to attach more importance to the occasion, and when young people will confess our Christ as their Savior and Advocate. It is a sweet sight to see them coming into the fold at any season (as did two of our girls last Fall), yet it is well to have them realize the greater meaning of the time and season of coming in and receiving more careful instruction from the teacher. The subject of Decision Day being rather new to us, would be a fine subject for discussion at our convention, I think.

A LAST WORD.

Before another issue of the ADVOCATE reaches our readers, the Utica Convention will be a thing of the past. We desire to urge upon pastors, superintendents and teachers the importance of having their schools represented there. It will be the best opportunity the workers of the Mississippi Conference have ever yet had to learn the best methods of work in the Sunday-school, of learning what to teach and how to teach it.

Prof. Hamill is easily one of the world's greatest Sunday-school men, and the workers ought to show their appreciation by a large attendance. His work in our church is to train teachers, and to train men and women who, in turn, can train other teachers. His connection with Southern Methodism marked the beginning of a forward movement in our Sunday-school work. Dr. Atkins, himself a wise leader, induced Prof. Hamill to devote his time and talents to this church of his fathers. It is our great desire and fervent prayer, and it will be the effort of our feeble tongue and pen, to induce the Sunday-schools of our three Conferences to avail themselves of his services to the utmost. God grant that the Sunday-schools of Louisiana and Mississippi may take their place in the front rank.

Great preparations are being made for the Louisiana Sunday-school Convention, to be held at Natchitoches, April 22-24. We hope that every Methodist Sunday-school in Louisiana will be represented. It is their only State organization, and the only place where the workers of the whole State can come together in conference. Let there be a full meeting.

We have in hand, and will publish next week, an excellent article on "The Sunday-schools of Brazil," by Rev. M. Dickie, a returned missionary from that country, who, we rejoice to learn, is recovering his health. It is our desire to build up a better missionary spirit in our schools, and to that end will endeavor from time to time to get articles on Sunday-school work in foreign fields. If our people had a better knowledge of missionary work, and what is being accomplished, we think there would be greater zeal in the cause.

We are glad to learn that Bro. Bachman, colporter and Sunday-school agent of the North Mississippi Conference, will probably be present at the Utica Convention. He writes us that interest in the Study Circle is increasing in his Conference, and that several Circles have been organized.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

LUMBERTON, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Lumberton, as you know, is an infant station—now a little more than two months old; it is also an experimental station, for, in addition to its infantile state, it is watched over by one who has never before been pastor of a station, and the two are under the fatherly care of a brand-new presiding elder. But, in spite of all this, the infant is vigorous and growing. Only about eight pastoral charges in the Conference pay their pastor as large a salary, and none respond more liberally to worthy claims. Our membership is about one hundred and fifty, and is growing.

Our Board of Stewards is composed of men of unquestioned integrity and of unswerving loyalty; men who love the Lord and rejoice in his service. Their chairman is Bro. R. W. Hinton, who is never too much pressed by the duties of a large business to attend to any detail of his duties as such.

Our Sunday-school is under the care of a friend of my boyhood days, Prof. H. C. Yawn, who gives rare power of mind and heart to this work. He is assisted by teachers faithful and efficient, whose labors are measurably rewarded by the constant increase of pupils and interest. We have organized a Bible Teacher's Study Circle, and have enrolled twelve members.

Our Epworth League, organized in January, is now thirty-six strong, and is full of vigorous young life. Bro. T. L. Venable, systematic, wise, and zealous, is the president. Prof. Marvin E. Morehead, who is principal of our graded school here, and a son of Bro. Morehead, of the North Mississippi Conference, is first vice-president. He gives the powers of a well-trained mind and heart to the devotional department. Mrs. Carrie E. Hall, daughter of our G. R. Ellis, is second vice-president. This department dispenses local charity for the town. Prof. H. C. Yawn is third vice-president. Years of labor in the school-room especially qualify him for the duties of this department. Mrs. Hoke is leader for the children, and into this work she has brought tact and perseverance.

The Ladies' Aid Society here has been for years the thoughtful friend of the pastor and his family, and it has grown from year to year in numbers and in efficiency. They are planning liberal things for the near future.

The trustees have provided for insurance on the church and parsonage, and are now preparing for needed improvements on both.

My predecessors here have builded on sure foundations, and their works do follow them. They have labored, and I have entered into the fruitage. We have received seventeen members to date.

Presiding Elder Morse has entered the work of the district with characteristic energy and tact, and the prospect pleases.

Doctor, come to see us, and let us show you something of the possibilities of the pine woods.

Cordially,

GEO. H. THOMPSON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

POTTS CAMP.

DEAR ADVOCATE: This is my second year on Potts Camp charge. The people gave me a hearty reception on my return. We are moving along nicely; have received seven in the church since Conference. We have good Sunday-schools at all the churches on the charge. The Ladies' Aid Society is doing excellent work. We find it difficult to run a prayer meeting successfully. I would like some of the preachers to tell me how to carry on a prayer meeting successfully.

We hope to make an improvement this year on all lines. I think the church more united than last year. The preacher and family have a host of warm friends here. In proof of this fact, a few days ago the preacher and family enjoyed a pounding from the good people of Potts Camp, which we greatly appreciated, and for which we feel grateful. It makes a hard-worked itinerant preacher feel strong, and determined to be more faithful, to know that he is in the midst of a people that is looking well to his temporal interest as well as spiritual success.

I am now hard at work getting up the collections ordered by the Conference. We want to report collections in full this year, if possible. Bro. N. G. Augustus, our presiding elder, is wide-awake, and is doing the work of a presiding officer as but few men can.

We will be glad to have Dr. Boswell with us at our District Conference, which convenes at Potts Camp, July 10. So, Doctor, you are invited. I am working for the paper on my rounds; will send you in a club before long. This is one of the greatest needs of this charge—reading our literature.

The Lord bless the work.

Yours in Christ,

G. W. STRICKLAND.

SARDIS DISTRICT.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: I am just getting to the end of my first round on Sardis district. The Winter has been unusually hard, and has obstructed aggressive work. The fields are yet unplowed; breaking land is just beginning. The preachers have been faithful at their posts, holding their flocks and caring for the sick. Only three of these fifteen preachers were returned to the charges they filled last year. All will do well, I think, this year. Stewards seem really anxious to do the best they can to provide for their pastors. The seasons of the last two years have been disastrous to the crops in this section, and our people are greatly straitened and depressed. But the same gospel of faith and hope and divine help abides; its power will lift us out of the depths and revive our energies, and the bursting forth of living promises in the fresh Spring-life of nature will urge all toilers afield, and we will work and hope for good crops, and expect a rich spiritual harvest. This latter we can have every year, whatever be the natural season. Nothing really good of any kind is coming to one's hands, except by obedience to that law of human life, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

A CONTRAST

Of the face of a healthful woman with the face of one who is sick proves that quite often a sad face is a sick face. Many a woman has credit for a sunny disposition who would soon be sad of face and irritable of temper if she had to endure the womanly ills which many of her sex have borne for years.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the diseases which are the source of so much pain and suffering to women. It establishes regularity, dries debilitating drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Cornelia Henson, of Coalton, Boyd Co., Ky., writes: "In October 1889 I gave birth to a baby and the treatment I received at the hands of the midwife left me with falling of the uterus. I had no health to speak of for three years. I had another baby which was the third child. My health began to fail and I found myself completely worn out. I had so many pains and aches my life was a burden to me and also to all the family, for I was nervous and cross and I could not sleep. Had four doctors come to see me but at last found I was slowly dying. The doctors said I had liver, lung and uterine trouble. I was in bed for months and when I did get up I was a sight to behold. I looked like a corpse walking about. I commenced to take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and ever since then I have been a well woman. I have suffered all a woman could suffer at my monthly period until since I began the use of Dr. Pierce's medicines, but now I can say I have no pain. The dark circles around my eyes are going away and I feel better in every way. My cheeks are red and my skin is white, but before it was as yellow as saffron."

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription" there is nothing just as good for weak and sick women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1902.

A few preachers, stimulated by a desire for general knowledge, have obtained a smattering of the sciences and languages, and in their efforts to show off, have brought themselves into contempt, and largely made the cross of Christ of none effect. If a man does not drink deep, and show himself thorough, he had better not undertake to make the impression that he is learned.

Secretary Hay, in his eulogy of the late President McKinley, which occupied nearly an hour and a half in its delivery, mentioned every characteristic of the great man, except that which constituted the crowning glory of his life. The simplicity of his faith was not mentioned. The closing sentence was marred by language that falls short of giving a true idea of the President's death. "In his last hour (he) taught us how a gentleman could die," instead of how a Christian could die, seems like an effort to please a promiscuous crowd rather than to state what, perhaps, many of them do not believe.

There are some who hold the church responsible for all the ignorance prevailing in the country. Men who talk that way have no connection with, or knowledge of, the church of today. They have no acquaintance with church history, except of a period in the dim past when the church dominated both society and the State. Nothing of that kind obtains now in enlightened lands. Certainly among us it is not true that the church governs either the consciences or the actions of men. If people are ignorant, it is because they will not take advantage of opportunities, or because opportunities are lacking. Everybody acquainted with the work of the church knows that it is doing what it can with the facilities at hand for educating the people.

Brother Bailey, of the Baptist, Jackson, Miss., is somewhat of a prophet as well as a mathematician. He has informed his readers that the General Methodist Conference (meaning the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South), soon to meet in Dallas, Texas, "is to elect four new Bishops." How he found that out, we do not know. The General Conference is to determine. What it will do, no man can foretell. Brother Bailey thinks we have too many now. His opinion is thus expressed: "In the 'episcopal' sense of the word (and how else can the word 'Bishop' be used except in the episcopal sense?) they have as many, too many, as the number they have exceeds none at all." We are curious to know how Brother Bailey discovered the basis of his calculation.

THE SENSE OF SIN.

We seldom hear preaching that needs to be criticised from the standpoint of orthodoxy. The worst that can be said about it is that it is often lacking in directness and clearness on the subject of sin. Much is said about sinful conduct and its consequences, but how little about sin itself—its root, its nature, its hatefulness in the sight of God. The result is, men are largely losing the sense of sin, and that tenderness of soul that feels and recognizes the touch and taint of evil. It is true that vast numbers of people profess faith in Christ and seek membership in the church, but is it a fact that all these are moved in this matter by an overpowering sense of sin? Is it not rather a fact that many are moved thereto by glittering generalities, which, though they attract, have no power to fix any definite thoughts of sin and salvation from sin in the mind?

Of course, there are those ready to say: It makes no difference as to this, if men are honest in their way of living; "conduct is three-fourths of life." To lay down a proposition of that sort is about equivalent to saying that thorough conviction for sin, which separates man from God, is not essential to salvation. We hardly think any individual, well-versed in God's Word, will take such a stand.

Let us reason on this point a little. How can one be induced to forsake all sin, and seek forgiveness and cleansing, until, first of all, he is convinced that he is guilty and polluted in the sight of God? Or, how can one be kept from constantly falling into sin except there be fixed in the mind the danger of falling, and guard against it? And, then, there must be a consciousness of the fact that the least infraction of the divine law will incur the Lord's displeasure, and rob the soul of its innocence and purity. In the light of the truth suggested by these questions, it is easy enough to account for the superficial experience and inconsistent living of many professing Christians.

Hundreds are living far below the Christian standard—not only omitting duty, but actually committing wrong, without any concern as to the effect on their present relation to God, or their future welfare. This would not be so if there was in the heart that sense of sin which fears to do wrong, not because it is disobedience to a written law, but because it is hurtful to the soul. "A sensibility to sin, a pain to feel it near," would put an end to many misdoings that are real hindrances to the soul, but under existing circumstances are regarded only as indiscretions. Many young Christians dance. So far from looking upon it as sinful, they do not even allow it to be an indiscretion; it is an accomplishment. Yet every experienced Christian, who conscientiously maintains peace with God, knows that the dance is death to vital piety. Many Christians countenance the liquor traffic, both by sale and personal indulgence. This is evil, only evil. Our holy Sabbath is shamefully violated, to such an extent that, in some places, but for the sound of the church bells, and the open doors of the Lord's house, we would hardly know when Sunday comes. In these, and many other ways, God's voice is disregarded.

The facts cited, together with the lax notions that prevail on great moral issues, give rise to the question: How has it happened that the sense of sin is less acute than formerly, especially among Protestant Christians? The answer is readily found in sections of our country dominated by Romanism. In New Orleans, for example, Protestant sentiment and manner of living has been largely modified by Roman Catholics, who are so largely in the majority. In other sections the fact is to be accounted for on a different principle—at least, in a different way. Without going into details, we cover the ground mainly when we say it is due to the preaching of would-be reformers and professional evangelists, who, though they may not have purposely and consciously lowered the standard of truth, have, nevertheless, taught such gospel as to lead hundreds and thousands to believe that a good moral foundation could be secured without the bitter tears of repentance. A sense of sin was never generated in the soul, and under the glittering generalities proclaimed they were converted without contrition, without confession, and, we dare say, in many instances, without promise of amendment of life, based on an intelligent conception of Christian duty.

In the first days of Christian preaching men were "cut to the heart," and made to cry out in anguish, "What must we do?" It was so in the early days of Methodism, and the "slain of the Lord were many." Why is it not so now? God has not changed. Human nature has not changed. The nature of sin and its "exceeding sinfulness" have not changed. God is against sin as ever of old. And so must be our preaching if we would save sinners from their sins.

CHURCH LOYALTY.

If there is anything in the world that some Methodists are afraid of, it is sectarianism. They are afraid somebody will call them hide-bound, narrow-minded, illiberal. They seem wholly unable to separate in their minds a sectarian from a sectarian bigot. They would not be sectarian for the world! At the same time they belong to a sect, and are proud of it. They could not be persuaded to desert their denomination. They are Methodists from principle, but are perfectly willing for other people to adopt other notions and other ways. They believe in religious liberty. They are to be commended for their fraternal feelings.

But are not our people sometimes too liberal? Do they not concede too much? Are they not too conservative for their own well-being? We have known good, true brethren, who, in the fullness of their hearts, could not bear to hear a sermon on doctrine lest the preacher should say something that would hurt feelings. We have seen a few who were so uneasy that they could not listen to the sermon with any degree of comfort. One of this sort approached a preacher just before the beginning of the service, and asked him not to preach against the Baptists, saying: "One of the leading deacons is present, and I would not like to have his feelings hurt. And please do not preach against the Presbyterians, or the Episcopalians." "Well," said the preacher, "who must I preach against?" "Why," said he, "give it hard to the Campbellites; there isn't one in ten miles of here." Perhaps such a circumstance never occurred, but the tale serves to illustrate the spirit of compromise sometimes manifested by our brethren.

This spirit frequently leads brethren to be disloyal to the church. We have known whole neighborhoods to be torn to pieces by Methodists who preferred to disobey the law of the church rather than organize a Methodist Sunday-school. Their ideal was a union school, with union literature. They were perfectly contented with teachers belonging to other churches, or with moral persons belonging to no church, if their own church could be represented by the moderator, commonly called superintendent. Many of our pastors have been baffled in their efforts to organize Methodist Sunday-schools by these liberal-minded brethren. We have had experience, and know whereof we affirm.

It sometimes happens that in our own organizations, distinctively Methodist, our literature is ruled out on the flimsiest pretext. It is said to cost too much. For the sake of saving twenty-five cents, a whole Methodist community will patronize literature, the publisher of which is responsible to nobody for its teachings. Our Advocates are discarded because publishers can not afford to print such a paper as the people demand at the price of ONE DOLLAR a year. The result is, hundreds of Methodist homes are without a church paper. The spirit of true loyalty to the church should not allow the difference of two cents a week to stand between a Methodist and the official organ of his Conference.

Our Epworth Leagues are supposed to represent the intelligence, the spirituality and the loyalty of the young life of our church; yet we have known of some strange doings among them. We have known the leader at an Annual Conference League Rally to call on the congregation, made up largely of Methodist preachers, to "stand and pray." At some of the League meetings this is a common thing, even in face of the universal custom of Methodism to kneel. Not long since, in a City Union League meeting, preparatory to the League Conference soon to meet, the question of selecting a song book was introduced and discussed. By vote our own hymnal, prepared especially by authority for the use of Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues, was set aside, and a book prepared and published by outsiders was adopted. Loyal young Methodists from all parts of the Conference will attend that meeting, expecting to give emphasis to Methodism where emphasis is needed, and, behold! they are to be forced to use a song book gotten up by those who have no sympathy with Methodism. The matter ought never to have been discussed. The fact that we have our own hymnal ought to have settled the question. Loyalty to our standard demands that we use our own books on all Conference occasions. Let us be loyal!

A WORD OF CAUTION.

We would caution our young preachers against organizing rings and mutual admiration societies. It can be done unconsciously, which, we suppose, is the case in most instances. To illustrate: A young man was appointed to a station—the very best in his Conference. He remained four years. He was the admired of all admirers. In turn he was perfectly devoted to his flock. The people said, "There was never such a pastor." He said, "There was never such a people." The knowing ones said, "He is not much of a preacher, but he visits." He said, "The church is not as religious as it should be, but it is liberal." That preacher was followed by a plodding sort of a man, who thought it was his religious duty to visit, pastorally, all the members of his charge, and in his rounds he visited members who were surprised to see him. "Why," said they, "Brother ——— was our preacher four years, and he never came into our house." In other homes the plodding preacher, though received joyfully, was chided because he did not come as often as the inmates thought he ought. They said, "Brother ——— came to see us every week."

Unconsciously, those who were visited often, and those who had not been visited at all, disclosed the true state of things. The preacher had formed a ring. Outside of that ring he did not visit. A mutual admiration society had been organized. He was the model. By him the congregation determined the work and value of his successors. Incalculable injury was done the church, and the preacher himself was spoiled. Not until the lines fell to him in harder places did he learn his work as a preacher, or how to deal with a congregation as a pastor. We beg our young preachers who have tact and taste for visiting to be impartial. Visit all as far as possible. By all means avoid getting into a ring. You may have preferences among your members, as is natural, but none have preferred claims on your time and attention.

DELEGATES' EXPENSES.

The Book Agents, Barbec & Smith, custodians of the General Conference expense fund, have issued a statement showing the assessment on each Annual Conference, and the amount paid by each up to date. The showing of the three Conferences represented by this ADVOCATE is above the average. The following are the figures:

	Assessed.	Paid.
Louisiana	$600	$634 87
Mississippi	700	619 33
North Mississippi	775	675 18

No doubt much of the balance behind, if not all, is in the hands of the preachers or Conference treasurers; if not, it can be easily raised and forwarded in time. Louisiana, it will be seen, is considerably ahead. We hope the other Conferences will not fall behind. It is necessary to raise our full assessment in order to help pay the expenses of our far-away delegates who are wholly unable to meet the large expense of travel.

A QUESTION OF LAW.

Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Seashore district, submits the following question:

Does the statement in the last part of Paragraph 77, page 38 of the Discipline, "and to call special sessions," mean that we may have five Conferences during the year? If not, where should the Minutes of a special session be recorded?

Without presuming to speak authoritatively, we venture to say that under the law the presiding elder and preacher-in-charge (not the presiding elder alone) may call special sessions of the Quarterly Conference "when they judge it necessary." The record of proceedings should be separate, and designated as a special session for special purposes. Thus: The Quarterly Conference of ——— charge met in special session at the call of the presiding elder and preacher-in-charge, at ———, March 20, 1902, to consider, etc. We give what we think is a literal interpretation of the law. It may not be according to the intent of the author of the amendment. We are open to conviction.

A "Correction" Corrected.

In last week's ADVOCATE I corrected what I supposed was an oversight on the part of the editors of our Mississippi Conference Minutes. No credit was given Bolton charge for the amount paid the American Bible Society. Dr. Watkins writes me that the blanks handed in do not show my payment. The fault is mine. The money ($9) was collected and paid in at Conference, but through my oversight the amount was not entered in the proper blank.

L. CARLEY.

Conference Minutes.

We thank Dr. A. F. Watkins, secretary of the Mississippi Conference, for a copy of the Minutes of the Conference held at McComb City, Miss., Dec. 11-16, 1901. It contains the Minutes and reports and statistics of the Conference, and a directory. In these respects it is complete. It is well edited, and the printing, by the Lincoln County Times, Brookhaven, is excellent.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The tenth International Sunday-school Convention will meet in Denver, Col., June 26. The sessions will be held in the Trinity M. E. Church. This is one of the most important conventions to the world at large that will be held during this year. It will be represented by delegates from all evangelical churches, and they will come from all parts of the world. On the basis of representation adopted, Mississippi and Louisiana will have 36 and 32 delegates respectively. On the Executive Committee, Mississippi and Louisiana have each one representative; J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, for the former, and E. P. Mackie, of New Orleans, for the latter. On the Lesson Committee the M. E. Church, South, has one man—J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. Some interest has been created lately by a rumor to the effect that efforts were being made to do away with the quarterly temperance lesson. We hope this will not be done, and we feel sure that our representative will not encourage the move.

General Conference Daily.

The Book Agents will print a Daily Christian Advocate during the coming session of the General Conference at Dallas, Texas. It will give a full report of the proceedings of that body, which no weekly Advocate can do. The price of the Daily is one dollar for the session. From now until the seventeenth of April we will take subscriptions for the Daily, in connection with the ADVOCATE, for new subscribers or renewals, with the cash, at $2.50; money to be sent at expense of subscriber. To avoid confusion, we will not take orders for the Daily after our issue of April 17.

Sunday-School Year Book.

The Third Year Book of the North Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Board has been received. It is edited and sent out by Rev. G. W. Baehman, Sunday-school Agent, Winona, Miss. It contains a complete directory of the officers of the Board, and of all the preachers and superintendents of the Conference. It also contains much valuable information concerning the purposes and work of the Board. The matter contained in the booklet "will prove beneficial if carefully read and applied."

PERSONAL.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, of Lecompte, La., is doing well in his charge. His people treat him with the utmost kindness, and he is well pleased. He is expecting a good year in every respect.

Rev. S. B. Myers, in his first year at Corinth, is charmed. He has received a cordial welcome, and before him is a bright outlook. His field for usefulness is large, and he is cultivating it with a diligent hand.

Rev. J. A. B. Jones and wife, of Hazlehurst, have been disabled more than a month, suffering with la grippe, but are now recovering. Brother Jones reports an addition of twelve members to his church since Conference.

Rev. R. A. Davis, in a private note, speaks in high terms of the work of Dr. S. S. Keener at his quarterly meeting for St. Helena circuit. Besides attending to other official duties, he preached "two excellent sermons."

Rev. W. W. Simmons, presiding elder of the Meridian district, requests us to say that the District Conference for his district will be held April 2-4, instead of April 24, as the types seemed to read last week. The hyphen between the 2 and the 4 did not "show up;" hence the misunderstanding.

We had the pleasure, this week, of meeting Rev. F. S. Parker, of Crowley. He came down to the city to meet his wife, who had been on a visit of several weeks to her mother at Vicksburg. Bro. Parker is in excellent health and spirits, and reports Dr. Carter, the presiding elder, as having entirely recovered.

Rev. R. A. Meek is highly pleased with his charge, West Point. He has a delightful work, and it goes without saying that the people are pleased with him. We do not know whether he has driven down stakes with a view to a four years' stay, or not. But we dare say that if he does not remain so long, it will not be his fault.

Missionary Institute.

MR. EDITOR: The Missionary Institute for the northern part of Forest district convened at Walnut Grove Feb. 4, 1902; Bros. C. M. Cornelius, Irvin Miller, W. J. Dawson, W. P. Donnell, J. E. Williams, N. H Lane, T. L Mellen and M L White being present.

The devotions were nonducted by T. L. Mellon, P. E., and nonsisted of reading Psalm lxxii and singing Hymns Nos 669, 172, 191, and several earnest prayers for our missionaries. M. L White was elected secretary. Several interesting papers were read before the Institute on different subjects, and proved to be helpful to all. Several interesting discussions were enjoyed.

Woman's Foreign and Home Mission work were well represented by papers sent in by Mrs. T. H. Harrod, Miss Addie Purnell and Mrs. Clara H. Cope. These papers developed the fact that these worthy works were not receiving the proper attention at the hands of the preachers and women of the Forest district.

The preaching was done by T. L. Mellon, W. J. Dawson and M. L White. Our presiding elder proved himself equal to every task, as usual. Every preacher was inspired more than ever to bring up the assessments in full, and influence a thousand souls into God's kingdom from Forest district.

After two days' helpful communion with "Our Father," and association with one another, learning to love God more and appreciate one another more, and thanking the good people of Walnut Grove for their kindness, the Institute was adjourned by T. L. Mellon at 8:30 P. M., Feb. 5, 1902

M. L. WHITE, Secretary.

Tupelo Station — Encouraging Words.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We are glad to announce that the Aberdeen district has secured one of the best district parsonages in the State. It is located in Aberdeen, and situated on the most desirable residence street. The house is a one-story building, good as new, convenient and roomy. The lot is sufficiently large. There is a nice small orchard, and everything else in a well-improved home. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, deserves great credit for this achievement. As a sample of his work during the cold weather, he made a good record in raising $700 in 40 days to complete the first payment! He and his Board of Trustees have planned so wisely that the other payments can be easily met. We are agreeably surprised that so valuable a property could be purchased at such reasonable figures The outlook from all charges in the district promises a successful year.

As the writer was sick, and did not reach the last session of our Conference in time to make report on Conference floor, you will please permit a few encouraging facts from Tupelo. During the past fourteen months we have had 110 accessions to the church; 22 of these since Conference; eighty new scholars added to the Sunday-school. The annual enrollment of this school is nearly as large as the church roll. We now have gained one Epworth League and 90 new members. We now have two good Leagues (Senior and Junior), with an active membership of 130 The Foreign, Home, and Juvenile Missionary Societies are doing a great work. The Home Missionary Society was organized last year. The Aid Society is one of the best. This charge has paid $4,000 to all purposes in the time mentioned. Our people are united in purpose to liquidate the indebtedness on this beautiful church as rapidly as possible. We are not troubled with any modern dancing, card-parties, and wine-suppers. All honor to the good women who preside over the homes of Tupelo. Our young people are loyal to the church, and attend upon its ordinances. The future of our already strong Methodism is most promising. The fact that the next session of our Conference is to be held here has greatly encouraged our people. The revival spirit is manifest among us. Some conversions at the altar since Conference. Our Christmas services gave us a good start. We now have one of the driest towns in the State. The "blind-tigers" will not trouble us any more, and Tupelo continues to prosper and grow. We are much pleased with the ADVOCATE, and we will try to do more for it. Come to see us. Yours faithfully,

J. A. BOWEN.

I have mailed to each pastor outside of the city of Meridian a postal-card request for the names of their delegates who expect to attend the District Conference at South Side, April 2-4 Several have replied thus far, but only one has given me any definite information. Brethren, if you do not know who expect to attend, please notify me how many you think will be present from your charge.

Come, praying the first District Conference held at South Side Church may be indeed a spiritual blessing to the church here and the district at large. Fraternally,

Domestic Missions.

DEAR BRETHREN: The treasury of the domestic mission fund of the North Mississippi Conference is still empty. The treasurer, Bro. Jenkins, informs us that but one charge in the Conference has reported anything to date. Carrollton is that charge. It was sent in Jan. 11. Fifty charges in the Conference could have done the same thing if a faithful effort had been made. The applications for help, urgent and pressing, still come to us from the men we have promised help on these poor charges. The twentieth of March will soon be here—the end of the first quarter—and these men have not received an average of twenty dollars, leaving out three charges. If you should ask, "Could not the people they serve have done better than that?" we answer by asking, "How much better have we done?"

My brethren, will you please bring this subject before your congregations and send immediately to the treasurer. A faithful effort will bring the help we need. I am not begging for myself, but for my brethren. Who will help us?

W. S. LAGRONE.

A HELPING FUND.

We have many calls to send the ADVOCATE to poor, aged persons at a reduced rate. This we always do. Are there not many persons, well-to-do in this world's goods, who will send us money—any sum they may see fit to give—to supply the ADVOCATE to persons who would like to have it, but are unable to pay anything? We will gladly send it to such for one dollar a year. We hope to get many responses to this appeal. Let those who respond designate the names of those to whom they desire the paper sent, or give the money to their pastors, and let them send the names. If names are not sent, the editor will do the best he can. Who will first respond?

An Appeal to Our Friends.

We make a special appeal to our friends who owe us on subscription to send us the amount due. We need the money. The amount each one owes is small, but the aggregate amounts to hundreds of dollars. Our friends must see that it is embarrassing to us to withhold the money. Please look at the label on your paper, and if you are behind, send us the amount due. We will greatly appreciate it.

From this date no attention will be paid to manuscripts that come to this office rolled. Let them be folded and put in an envelope. And please, brethren and sisters, use ink. Pencil writing, after passing through the mail, is often hard to read. We speak both for the printer and the editor.

Until May first, 1902. Send 12 cents for "a quart of good writing ink." Address J. W. B. CROSS, Lauderdale, Miss.

WEAK KIDNEYS AND BLADDER TROUBLE.

Had to Pass Water Very Often Day and Night.

CURED BY THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY, SWAMP-ROOT.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root investigated by "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers speaks in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

A. H. NOONEY.

DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

About two years ago I had a very severe case of kidney and bladder trouble. The pain in the small of my back was so severe that I could not stand it to stay in one position more than a moment or two, and was obliged to pass water very often day and night. I tried medicine and doctors without getting relief. Noticing an advertisement in the TOPEKA STATE JOURNAL of Swamp-Root, I determined to give it a trial and bought a bottle. By the time I had finished the first bottle the pain had entirely disappeared from my back. The pain and frequent desire to pass water ceased. However, I continued to take the medicine using about six bottles in all. That was over a year ago and I have had no return of the trouble since.

A. H. Nooney.

Chief Engineer, State Capitol Building.
Jan. 2nd, 1902. Topeka, Kan.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continne, fatal results are sure to follow.

We often see a relative, a friend or an acqnaintance apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness, or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's Disease.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and yon may have a sample bottle sent free by mail.

Sample Bottle of Swamp-Root Free by Mail.

EDITORIAL NOTE—Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, and has proven so successful in every case, that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolntely free by mail. Also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives to the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing, be snre and mention reading this generous offer in NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The Unspoken Words.

It was the hour when the street was full of weary workers returning from the day's labor. A little girl stood at the entrance of an alley, looking down the street with a show of expectancy in her bright young face. Somebody was coming surely, and in a few moments a man wearing the garb of a day laborer came in sight. Instantly the little girl came to his side and looked up into his face with a loving expression which told how glad she was to see her father coming home.

The man glanced at the child, but did not say a word, or take the little hand that had hoped to be placed in his. The alley was the short cut to the home in the tenement building, two blocks away. They walked side by side, not a word being spoken, the child evidently too timid to speak if the father did not. The person who had been interested in this meeting followed on and could not help saying in a cheery voice to the father, "Why don't you speak to the little girl and tell her you are glad she came to meet you and take her hand?" "Oh, she knows it without saying it," he replied in a gruff voice. Yes, that is the way so much cheer that would make life so much happier and easier for others is lost, the words are not spoken. We take it for granted our dear ones know the unspoken words we ought to speak. We do not say them when we should. In our homes with our loved ones how often we forget to say the words of commendation that is due them for kindness and self-sacrifice made in our behalf!

How many there are in the world who have unselfishly tried to do their best for us, to whom no words of commendation have been given!

A little boy, not long since, came rushing into the house with a bunch of flowers he had gathered for mother. He was only a mite of a boy, and did not know that a bit of golden rod and a piece of "butter and eggs," covered with the dust, and blighted by the adverse circumstances of growing in a city's vacant lot, could not have much valne. But to him they were flowers, and it was getting cold weather, and there would not be many more to get for mother. Bnt mother was out, and the thonghtless sister laughed, and said: "Mother won't care for those things. They are horrid." The child's enthusiasm was chilled, and he threw his precious offering away. It is the motive, not the valne of the offering, that connts with onr loved ones when they give the best they can.

Thank God there are many true, good souls who speak the words of cheer and appreciation even to the little child; and how our hearts cling to them! What joy they are to us when the days are dark and the burdens heavy to bear! We may not have many of this world's goods to give to our friends, but we can always give them kind words and loving ministrations at times when they need them. How often have weeping friends stood by the silent forms of those they loved and vainly wished they had spoken the words of love and appreciation that the dear ones merited in life! Let us be more thoughtful in our homes to speak words that will make the atmosphere of the home "sweet and pleasant" while the dear ones are still spared to us. Let us all try to dwell daily in the light of love and cheer, and not think of our own disappointments and troubles, but be always on the lookout to make "hospices of rest" and cheer for others. In the words of poor Jeanie Deans, "When the hour of trouble comes, as come it does, and the hour of death comes, as come it must to high and low, it is not what we have done for oursells, bnt what we have done for ithers, that we think on maist pleasantly."—Christian Work.

Raining Upside Down.

The little tin basin of water was empty, just as sure as the world! And Peggy had left water in it the last time she made mud pies in the back yard, so to be sure and have it ready to mix with, next time. Peggy always made arrangements beforehand for things—even mud pies. And of course she hadn't thought of going out to grandpa's and staying so long, when she made this arrangement.

"Now, where's that water gone?" she mused. "If it had been at grandpa's, the chickens would have drunk it up, but here—"

"Poh! I know where it's gone to!" Dickey cried loftily. Dickey went to a big school, not kindergarten, and so he knew a great deal.

"It rained up—that's where it went," he explained.

"It what, Dickey Plummer?"

"Rained up into the sky—it always does, and then, by'mby, it'll rain down again. Where'd you s'pose all the rain comes from?"

"Well, I didn't s'pose it came out o' my mixin'-pan—so there!" cried Peggy's clear, indignant little voice, scornfully. Then she ran to mama to see what it all meant, for mama always knew.

"Dickey says it rains upside down, Mama!" she cried. "I guess he'd laugh to see it!" Mama laughed to see Peggy's face.

"He can't see it, dear—nobody can, unless the air is so cold that it runs together in tiny drops and makes a mist or fog. Dickey was right—the water in your little tin pan was taken up into the air again, to rain down some day with the other water the air has drawn up from the surface of ponds and rivers. If it should be very cold when it gets ready to come to us, it will be—what, Dickey?"

"A snow storm," said Dickey, promptly.

"Yes, dear. And so it goes back and forth between the sky and earth. It's one of the wonderful things the wonderful world is full of, little Peg."—A. H. D., in Primary Education.

Sunshine Through Cracks.

If we obeyed the command, "In everything give thanks," we should not need to contrive far-fetched causes for gratitude. There was a thankful soul who had learned this lesson, one old and poor and sick, who, upon being asked what she had to be thankful for, answered, looking at the shabby walls of her room: "For the sunshine through the cracks." Is there any one who has less than this to stir the feeling of thanksgiving?

Somehow God's love sifts in and is seen as bright as sunshine through the cracks of everything that seems to be mean and poor. Nothing can keep this light from looking in and through. Often it is a crack that lets it in. Something happens to shake and shatter our self-confidence, our peace, prosperity, security, in some way. The walls crack, but the sun looks through. The very thing that seemed almost ominous of evil makes a way for the light to shine.

It is far better to look at the slender line of light than to gaze upon cracks. Nothing hurts the golden beam that slips a radiant finger through the most unsightly hole. It comes through unstained and pure, as good to look at, as full of warmth and cheer, as if it slipped through a crevice of crystal.

The discriminating gaze that discovers the light and disdains to stop short with the crack is worth a fortune. It finds its pot of gold where others would descry but emptiness. Cultivate this happy faculty of the thankful heart.—Selected.

As snow is itself cold, yet warms and refreshes the earth, so afflictions, though in themselves grievous, yet keep the soul of the Christian warm and make it fruitful,—John Mason.

The Commoner
(Mr. Bryan's Paper)

The Commoner has attained, within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3 net. When remittance is made by personal check, ten cents extra will be charged.

Mrs. ELIZA YOUNGS PEPPER, eldest daughter of Elizabeth and Dr. R. H. Jones, was born in Walterboro, S. C., in October, 1816. She was a descendant of the old colonial families, the Landgrave Smiths on her paternal side, and the Glovers-Sinklers and DuBose on her maternal side, thus inheriting the culture and refinement of a long line of noble ancestry. At her mother's death she was left in charge of her father's mother, who sent her to school in Charleston at the age of nine. Under the gentle influences of her grandmother she remained until her father's second marriage. In her step-mother she found a most congenial companion and lovely Christian character. To her she gave a daughter's love, and to her half-brothers and sisters a devotion that continued to her last day. Her grandmothers were strong adherents of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and she was not allowed to attend services at any other church. Her Grandfather Jones was one of the foundere of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Charleston, S. C.; her first cousin and early associate, William Jones Boone, was the first missionary Bishop to China. These influences, though strong, were not sufficient to hold her in this church. There was a Methodist chapel located near her home. The stirring songs of these sons of Wesley attracted the young girl, and after a few visits to the little meeting house by the way her heart-hunger was satisfied in the Christ that these men preached so fervently. The class ticket, that was then so necessary, and kept by her, is a witness to the fact that she was a regular attendant upon these gracious meetings of the long ago. In 1835 she was married to Mr. Daniel G. Papper, of Charleston. After living on the Ashley river three years he sold his plantation and moved to Alabama, where he lived four years, and from thence he moved to Holmes county, Miss., and settled near the village of Richland in 1845 in this community they lived and labored together for the Master in the Methodist Church the greater part of the last century. Their home was the preacher's home. Here the weary itinerant found a welcome, and was assigned to the "prophet's chamber" that could be occupied indefinitely. Bishop Marvin spent several weeks with them during the Civil War. Sister Papper was a Methodist of the highest type. She believed and lived up to the holy doctrines as preached by her ministers. She was truly humble, devout, holy. The light from heaven shone upon her face. To be near her was to be in closer touch with God; to pray by her fireside was to have easy access to the throne of heaven. She brought heaven very near to earth. Her love extended as far as her knowledge of human woe. Out of a small income she gave liberally of her means to every call of the church. She gave with a simplicity and heartiness that one seldom sees in the most devout disciples of our Lord. Such an example of consecration and holy living through nearly a century will shed a gracious influence on all who knew her for years to come. This saintly character fell on sleep Jan. 16, 1901.

R. H. B. GLADNEY.

Brother J. A. FARIES was born April 5, 1840, near Oakland, Tenn. He died March 2, 1902 Brother Faries came to Mississippi when young, and being a man of rare business qualifications, he accumulated a very nice property. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, read a great deal, and was well acquainted with the leading interests of the day. When he was about seventeen years of age he had an attack of typhoid fever which made a cripple of him for life. He bore his afflictions patiently. Brother Faries joined the church about seventeen years ago, and so far as I am able to learn, lived a consistent life. His health had been poor for some time before his death, and from a slight exposure was seized with a severe attack of la grippe. He grew worse gradually for about eight days. I was with him a few times during those days, and when I was about to leave him on one occasion, I asked him if he wanted me to do anything for him. He said, "I want you to pray for me." After assuring him that I was praying for him, I asked him how he felt about his spiritual condition. He looked me calmly in the face, and said, "I feel that all is well." I was with him when death came. He seemed to suffer a great deal a few hours before he died, though he was unconscious when death came. He left a loving wife and quite a number of friends to mourn their loss. May they clasp hands again on the shores of sweet deliverance, where sickness and sorrow never come, and where God wipes all tears from our eyes! J. L. REID.

On the night of Jan. 6, 1902, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Berry Moore and took from that home ROBERT LEE, aged thirteen years one month and two days. He was sick only a short time, and while loved ones were doing all in their power to save him from death, his little spirit took its flight from this world to a brighter and better world above. Little Robert was one of those fair and flower-like natures which at intervals rise to cheer us along the dusty highways of life. He was one of the loveliest flowers that ever gleamed in the cold atmosphere of a world of sin; a flower fragile in its peculiar form, delicate in its tender purity, spiritual in its beauty, too pure to live amidst these tempestuous clouds of earth, and only at home in the kindlier soil and among the stormless skies of the "better land." Words are too inadequate to depict the sweet hush and the celestial peace and love which surrounded him as the angel of the Lord wafted his little spirit to his eternal home. He walked with God, and his dying moments were lived upon the very verge of heaven. Then cheer up, dear friends, weep no more, for your loved one has only been wafted to his in heaven. He has just crossed the river, and is singing praises unto his Lord, with a golden crown on his head and a harp in his hand. Oh, may each of you humbly say, "Lord, thy will be done; not mine!" A FRIEND.

MATHAW DICKS was born in St. Tammany parish, March 4, 1812, and died Jan. 1, 1902, being eighty-nine years nine months and twenty-eight days old. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for sixty-five years, and was indefatigable in his labors for the church and the extension of God's kingdom on earth. Bro. Dicks' first marriage was blessed with three children. He lived to see his two boys placed under the sod, but there were left to mourn his death numerous grandchildren, and one daughter, Mrs. Marie Beaujeaux, who is now living near Mandeville. When quite a young man Bro. Dicks became a blacksmith, and followed that vocation until, by his own efforts, he mastered civil engineering, and was soon appointed parish surveyor of St. Tammany, which position he held for several years. Those who knew him from early manhood say that he was industrious, and in all affairs of life "studied to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed." These habits remained with him until he became enfeebled by old age. While trying to descend some steps he fell and received injuries which, in a few days, proved fatal. His remains were interred in the Chinchuba Cemetery to await the final judgment of God. J. W. R.

Brother J. S. HUGES was born June 14, 1855, in Lauderdale county, Miss. He was married Feb. 10, 1886; received into the church by Rev. Lusk at Chunkey, Miss., and departed this life Jan. 26, 1902. Bro. Huges was the father of three children—two boys and one girl. Thomas departed this life about nine years ago. Bro. Huges gave up this son willingly, knowing God to be too wise to make a mistake. God saw fit to call papa next after several months' sickness. Bro. Huges was a quiet and peaceable man in his home, church, and community. He was a man who believed in making an honest living, and appreciated the presence of all good people. The writer has spent many pleasant moments in his home conversing with him about the beautiful home of the just. His wife, daughter and son are lonely, feeling the loss of husband and father; God's grace sustaining them, God's presence being felt by a widowed mother, she carrying out the directions and wishes of her husband, whose home affairs are cared for. All the neighborhood and community of Chunkey are in sympathy with Sister Huges and the children. Our prayers are that we may all be faithful, and meet our brother in heaven.

L. J. JONES, P. C.

KATIE ELIZABETH, infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Moore, was born Dec. 10, 1901, and died Jan. 4, 1902. Only three weeks of earthly life, but long enough for the baby fingers to twine themselves around the parents' heart-strings. Just a little time for the tiny flower to bloom in the home garden, but long enough to leave its fragrance forever. The little form was laid to rest beneath the sod in the cemetery at Madison, and we know that the spotless soul is resting now with its Maker. N. B. HARMON.

BRED TO LAY.

I want you to know that BOSWELL'S White Wyandotte hens lay in the winter, when eggs are most in demand. Why go on raising common fowls when you may have these standard-bred birds and increase the egg-production so as to startle you? Mine are the world-famed Duston stock, vigorous and prolific, correct in every way. Enough said. Send me an order for eggs now, and hatch your fall-laying pullets.

I have been using Ripans Tabules six or seven years, am never without them, and I can eat anything now and never have the least fear. My little daughter, when she has a pain, will say, "Mamma, me has a pain; please give me a Tabule."

The Five-Cent packet is enough for an ordinary occasion. The family bottle, 60 cents, contains a supply for a year.
